MACEDONIA (mas-se-do'ni-a), a large country north-east of Greece, peopled by the descendants of Javan. In the time of the Romans the whole country between Tænarus (Cape Matapan) and the valley of the Danube was divided into three districts, viz., Illyricum, Achaia and Macedonia (which included Thessaly, and formed with it one province). Its metropolis was Thessalonica. It was a famous monarchy under Philip and his son Alexander the Great.

MACHEPELAH (mak-pe'lah), "portion, lot, double cave," the name of the burying-place of the patriarchs, which Abraham bought from Ephron the Hittite for a burying-place for Sarah; Abraham himself was buried there; also Isaac, Rebekah and Jacob. Over this spot the celebrated Mosque El Haran stands.

MAGDALA (mag'da-la), "a tower," a town on the west of the Sea of Galilee, either the same with Dalmanutha or near it, Matt. 15:39, compare with Mark 8:10. Now a small village, called Mejdel, about three miles north of Tiberias, containing about twenty wretched hovels.

MAHANAIM (ma-ha-na'im), "camps," a town east of Jordan, on the north bank of the Jabbok.

MARCH OF THE ISRAELITES FROM EGYPT TO THE PROMISED LAND

The history of this great march is full of interest for the Bible student, and equally full of warnings, and of important lessons to the devout Christian as he wanders in this world's wilderness on his way to the Land of Promise beyond the Jordan of death. We present here but the briefest outline of this history with such references as will enable the reader to fill in the details.

The forty-sixth chapter of Genesis tells us of Israel's journey to Egypt, and from that to the second of Exodus details the subsequent history to the birth of Moses.

The Israelites sojourn in Egypt 430 years, from Abraham, B. C. 1913, to B. C. 1491, Gen. 15:13; Ex. 12:40, 41; Acts 7:6; Gal. 3:17—idolatry of, in, Ezek. 20:6-9; Ezek. 23:8—multiply in Egypt, Ex. 1:7-20; Ps. 105:24; Acts 7:17—Pharaoh's cruelty and oppression, Ex. 1:8-22; 2:11, 5; Acts 7:18-21—God promises deliverance, Ex. 2:23-25. Moses sent to them, Ps. 78; 105-107; 136; Acts 7—murmur against Moses, Ex. 5:20, 21; 14:10-12—exempt from the plagues of Egypt, Ex. 8:22, 23; 9:4-6, 26; 10:23; 11:7; 12:13—keep the first Passover, Ex. 12:1-28. 50—obtain jewels from the Egyptians, Ex. 11:2, 3; 12:35, 36; Ps. 105:37—depart from Rameses, Ex. 12:31-42; 13:3, 4; 14—number of, Ex. 12:37—none feeble, Ps. 105:37—accompanied by a mixed multitude, Ex. 12:38; Num. 11:4—their herds and flocks, Ex. 10:9, 24; 12:38; 34:3; Num. 11:22. Led by the angel of the LORD, Ex. 23:20-23; 32:34; 33:2, 14; Ps. 78:51-54; Isa. 63:11-14—order of marching and encamping, Num. 2; 10:14-28. March from Rameses to Succoth, Etham, Pi-hahiroth, Ex. 12:37; 13:20; 14:2; Num. 33:5-7. Passage of the Red Sea—destruction of Pharaoh, Ex. 14; Deut. 11:4; Ps. 78; 105-107; 136—song of Moses and Miriam, Ex. 15:1-20. March three days through the Wilderness of Shur to Marah, Ex. 15:23; Num. 33:8—murmur at the bitter water—it is sweetened, Ex. 15:24, 25. March to Elim, Ex. 15:27; Num. 33:9. To the Red Sea, Num. 33:10. To Desert of Sin, Ex. 16:1; Num. 33:11—murmur for bread, Ex. 16:2, 3—manna sent, Ex. 16:4-36—quails sent, Ex. 16:13. March to Dophkah, Alush, Num. 33:12, 14; Ex. 17:1. To Rephidim—murmur for water, Ex. 17:2, 3—water brought from the rock at Massah or Meribah, Ex. 17:5-7—Amalekites defeated, Ex. 17:8; Deut. 25:17, 18. March to Desert of Sinai in the third month, Num. 33:15; Ex. 18:5; 19:1—have judges and captains appointed, Ex. 18:25; Deut. 1:9-17—receive the Law at Sinai—terror at the giving of the Law, Ex. 19:16, 17; Num. 17:12, 13; Heb. 12:18-21—elders go up the mount, Ex. 24:1, 9-11—covenant with the LORD, Ex. 19:3-9; 24:3-8—make a golden calf, Ex. 32; Deut. 9:7-21—three thousand slain by the Levites, Ex. 32:28—plague on account of the calf, Ex. 32:35—mourn on God refusing to lead them, Ex. 33:4-6—Tabernacle of Moses pitched without the camp, Ex. 33:9, 10—contributions for the Tabernacle, Ex. 35; 21-29;

36: 3-7; Num. 7—make the Tabernacle, Ex. 35: 30-35; c. 36-40—second Passover kept, Num. 9: 1-5—numbering of the people, Num. 1: 1-46; Ex. 38: 25, 26. March to Taberah—murmuring punished by fire, Num. 11: 1-3; Deut. 9: 22; March to Kibroth-hattaavah, Num. 11: 34; 33: 16—seventy elders appointed, Num. 11: 16, 17, 24-30—murmuring for flesh, Num. 11: 4-9; Ps. 78: 18—quails sent, Num. 11: 18-23, 31, 32; Ps. 78: 26-29—punished by plague, Num. 11: 33, 34; Ps. 78: 30, 31. March to Hazereth, Num. 11: 35; 33: 17. To Kadesh, in the Desert of Paran, or Zin, Num. 12: 16; 13: 26; 33: 36; Deut. 1: 2, 19—spies sent to Canaan, Num. 13; 32: 8; Deut. 1: 22, 25; Josh. 14: 7—Discouraged and rebel at their report, Num. 14; Deut. 1: 26-35; 9: 23—spies die of plague, Num. 14: 37—Israel defeated by Amalek at Hormah, Num. 14: 40-45; Deut. 1: 41-44—dwell at Kadesh, Deut. 1: 46.

They turn back from Kadesh and wander for thirty-eight years by the Red Sea, Num. 14: 25-34; Deut. 1: 40; 2: 14—stations visited by them, Rithmah to Ezion-Geber, Num. 33: 18-36—all but two die from twenty years old, Num. 14: 28-30; Deut. 2: 14. Return to Kadesh, Num. 20: 1; 33: 36; Jud. 11: 16, 17—Sabbath-breaker stoned, Num. 15: 32-36—rebellion of Korah, Num. 16; Deut. 11: 6—fourteen thousand die of plague, Num. 16: 41-50—Miriam's death, Num. 20: 1—murmur for water at Meribah—refused a passage by Edom, Num. 20: 14-21. March from Kadesh to Beeroth and Mount Hor, or Mosera—Aaron's death, Num. 20: 22, 29; 33: 37; Deut. 10: 6—defeat King Arad, Num. 21. March to Zalmonah and Punon, Num. 33: 41, 42; 21: 6; Deut. 2: 8—murmur—bitten by serpents—healed on looking to the brazen serpent, Num. 21: 4-9. March to Oboth to the mountains of Abarim or Pisgah, Num. 21: 10-20; 33: 43-47; Deut. 2: 13-24—defeat the Amorites, Num. 21: 21-31; Deut. 2: 26-37. March by Bashan to the plains of Moab, opposite Jericho, Num. 21: 33; 22: 1; 33: 48, 49—defeat Og, king of Bashan, Num. 21: 33-35; Deut. 3: 1-17—Balak sends for Balaam to curse them, Num. 22: 24; Deut. 23: 3, 4—corrupted by the Moabites, Num. 25—the plague stayed by Phinehas, Num. 25: 5-18—conquest of Midian, Num. 31—numbering of the people, Num. 26—covenant with the LORD, Deut. 29—death of Moses—mourning for him, Deut. 34. Their provision in the wilderness, Deut. 8: 4; 29: 5, 6; Neh. 9: 21—circumcision omitted, Josh. 5: 5, 7—piety of those who entered Canaan, Josh. 23: 8; Jer. 2: 2, 3; Judg. 2: 7-10.

Joshua appointed to succeed Moses, Num. 27: 18-23; Deut. 31: 23.

MEDIA (me'di-a), "the middle land," the country of the Medes, bounded on the north by part of the Caspian Sea; on the south by Persia, Susiana and Assyria; on the east by Parthia and Hyrcania; and on the west by Armenia Major. It was partly into this country that Shalmaneser carried the ten tribes captive. The Medes and Persians, who were both branches of the great Aryan family of nations, were united under Cyrus into one monarchy, B. C. 558. It is now included under the dominion of the shah of Persia.

MEDITERRANEAN SEA. This name is not found in Scripture, but the sea is frequently referred to. It is spoken of as the "great sea," Num. 34: 6, 7; Josh. 1: 4; Ezek. 47: 10, 15, 20; "sea of the Philistines," Ex. 23: 31; "sea of Joppa," Ezra 3: 7; "the sea," Josh. 15: 4, 46; "hinder sea," Zech. 14: 8; "utmost sea," Deut. 11: 24.

MEGIDDO (me-gid'do), "place of troops," an ancient royal Canaanitish city at the north-east base of Mount Carmel. The plain on the southern border of which it stood is called the "valley of Megiddo," 1 Chr. 35: 22; Megiddon, Zech. 12: 11.

MELITA (me-le'tah), now called Malta (maul'ta), an island in the Mediterranean Sea, twenty miles long and twelve broad, on the coast of which Paul was shipwrecked. Since 1814 it has been a British dependency. Its population is about 120,000, for the most part Roman Catholics excessively ignorant.

MESOPOTAMIA (mes-o-po-ta'mi-a), "middle of rivers," Heb. Aram-naharaim, "Aram of the two rivers," a province situated between the rivers Tigris and Euphrates, called by the Hebrews Padan-aram. This region, Syria or Aram, "between the two rivers," is nearly seven hundred miles long, and from fifty to two hundred and fifty broad. Here Abraham, Nahor, Sarah, Rebekah, Leah, Rachel and all the children of Jacob save Benjamin, were born. It is now under Persian rule.

MILETUS (mi-le'tus), or Miletum (mi-le'tum), a seaport city in Asia Minor, and about forty miles south of Ephesus. It originally stood on the coast; but now, by reason of the silting up of the Meander, it is ten miles inland. The ruins of the city bear the name of Melas among the Turks.

MITYLENE (mit-i-le'ne), the chief city of the island of Lesbos, in the Aegean Sea. The modern town is called Mitylen.

MIZRAIM (miz-ra'im), "distress," "straitness," the name by which Egypt is generally designated in the Hebrew Scriptures. It is a word in the dual number signifying the two Mises—i. e., the Upper and the Lower Miser, the name by which Egypt is still spoken of by the Arabs. In Isa. 11: 11 the name denotes Lower Egypt as distinguished from Pathros or Upper Egypt.

MORIAH (mo-ri'ah), "the appearance of JEHOVAH," a mountain within the walls of the east part of Jerusalem. The great Mosque of Omar is now on its summit.

MOSQUE OF OMAR. This Mohammedan temple stands in the Haram-es-Sherif, which certainly occupies the area of Solomon's Temple. The Rock under the Dome, with its interesting CAVE-CHAPEL, is supposed to indicate the spot where Abraham's altar stood on which he was ready to offer Isaac.

MOUNTAINS. Palestine is very mountainous. The expression "mountain of Israel," Ezek. 36: 1, denotes the entire country. The most celebrated were Carmel, near the Mediterranean, Josh. 19: 26; Ebal, in Samaria, 8: 30; Egedi, near the Dead Sea, 15: 62; Gaash, in Ephraim, 24: 30; Gilboa, south of the valley of Jezreel, 2 Sam. 1: 21; Gilead, beyond Jordan, Gen. 31: 21; Gerizim, in Samaria, Judg. 9: 7; Hermon, beyond Jordan, Josh. 11: 3; Hor, in Idumea, Num. 20: 25; Horeb, probably the same as, or the range of which Sinai was a part, Deut. 1: 2; Lebanon, or Libanus, which separates Canaan on the north from Syria, 3: 25; Moriah, on which the temple was built, 2 Chr. 3: 1; Nebo, a peak of Pisgah, Num. 32: 3; Olivet, on the east of Jerusalem, Matt. 21: 1; Paran, in Arabia, Gen. 14: 6; Deut. 1: 1; Peor, in Moab, Num. 23: 28; Pisgah, in the country of Moab, Num. 21: 20; Sier, in Idumea, Gen. 14: 6; Sinai, in Arabia, Ex. 19: 2; Deut. 33: 2; Sion, or Zion, in Jerusalem, 2 Sam. 5: 7; 2 Ki. 19: 21; Tabor, in Lower Galilee, to the north of the great plain, Judg. 4: 6.

MOUNT OF OLIVES (ol'ivz), or OLIVET (ol'i-ve't), called also Mount of Corruption, 2 Ki. 23: 13, a hill on the east side of Jerusalem, from which it was separated by the Kidron Valley. It derived its name from the olive trees which abounded on its sides, some of which still remain. David went up it when he fled from Absalom. It was a favorite resort of Jesus. By way of, he entered Jerusalem, Matt. 21: 1; Mark 11: 1; at night he abode in, Luke 21: 37; John 8: 1; retired to, after the Passover, Luke 21: 39; Matt. 26: 30; ascended to Heaven from, Acts 1: 12. The ridge extends about a mile from north to south, and is about two hundred and twenty feet above the site of the temple. It has three summits with distinct names.

MYRA (mi'rah), a city of Lycia, near the Mediterranean Sea, and forty miles east of Patara; here Paul embarked for Rome. Now called Dembra.

MYSIA (mis'i-a), the north-west province of Asia Minor on the Aegean Sea.

NAIN (na'in), "beauty," a town of Galilee, about two miles south of Mount Tabor, memorable as the place where CHRIST restored to life the son of a widow. The place exists under the name of Nein.

NAZARETH (naz'a-reth), "separated," "sanctified," a small city of mixed race, in Lower Galilee, about seventy miles north of Jerusalem, six west of Mount Tabor and twenty-four south-east of Ptolemais. It is not mentioned in the Old Testament. It was noted for the wickedness of its inhabitants, so much so that Nicodemus' first query, on hearing the LORD called "Jesus of Nazareth," was, "Can any good come out of Nazareth?" Here JESUS dwelt from his childhood till He commenced His public ministry; here He preached, and an attempt was made to put Him to death. After this He made Capernaum His chief place of residence, "His own City." It still exists under the name of en-Nazirah, having about four hundred inhabitants.

NEAPOLIS (ne-ap'o-lis), "new city," a seaport city on the east of Macedonia, a few miles south of Philippi. The site is occupied by the Turkish village of Kavalla, with about 6,000 inhabitants, nine-tenths of whom are Mohammedans, the rest Greeks.

NICOPOLIS (ni-kop'o-lis), "a city of victory," the name of several ancient cities. That to which Paul refers was probably in Epirus. It was founded by Augustus to commemorate the battle of Actium.

NILE, a celebrated river of Egypt which flows from south to north. It begins to swell at the middle of June, attains its greatest height in September, and subsides to its usual level about the end of October, and, on the northern part of Egypt, it spreads about twenty miles on each side. When the waters subside, the inhabitants sow their seed, which settles into the mud, and without further trouble produces a rich crop. It is called Sihor, "the black river," Josh. 13: 3; Jer. 2: 18; and the river of Egypt, Heb. Nahar Mitzraim, Gen. 15: 18.

NINEVEH (nin'e-veh), "habitation of Ninus," the ancient capital of Assyria. Its founder, according to Assyrian mythology, was the son of Nimrod. It is said to have been sixty miles in circumference, and in the time of Jonah its population must have been 600,000. It outstripped even Babylon itself in its dimensions. Its walls were sixty miles in compass, one hundred feet in height, and so thick that three chariots abreast could be driven along their top; and they were defended by 1,500 towers, each 200 feet high. In the year 601 B. C. it was completely destroyed by fire, and soon after the time of CHRIST not a trace of it could be found. By recent excavations on the site many remarkable sculptured monuments have been discovered, which from their structure and inscriptions, illustrate certain notable features of that ancient city, and confirm notices of it in the histories of ancient authors.

NO, "place," "portion," a once populous city of Egypt, generally thought to be Thebes or Diospolis. In Nah. 3: 8 it is called "populous No," in the Heb. No-Amon—i. e., No of Amon, meaning the place or possessions or chief seat of the Egyptian god Amon. It originally stood on both sides of the river Nile, about five hundred miles from its mouth. In the time of its splendor it extended on both sides as far as the mountains; it had one hundred gates, and on an emergency could send into the field by each of these gates twenty thousand fighting men and two hundred chariots. About 81 B. C., after a siege of three years, it was finally destroyed by Ptolemy X. Extensive ruins still mark its site. It is impossible to wander among these scenes and behold these hoary yet magnificent ruins without emotions of astonishment and deep solemnity. Everything around testifies of vastness and of utter desolation. All is gloomy, awful, grand. The walls of all the temples are covered with hieroglyphics. Many of these afford happy illustrations of Egyptian history.

NOB (nob), "a high place," a small town built on a conical rocky tell about two miles north of Jerusalem.

NOPH (noff), a city of Egypt, the ancient Memphis, capital of the country in the time of the patriarchs.

ON, "light," "the sun," rendered in the Septuagint version Heliopolis, "city of the sun," one of the oldest cities in the world. In Jer. 43: 13 it is called Beth-Shemesh, in Ezek. 30: 17 Aven. It was situated in the land of Goshen, in Egypt, about twenty miles from Memphis. The site of the city is now occupied by low mounds, the only remains of its famous temple being a granite obelisk about sixty-eight feet high.

OPHIR (o'fir), "abundance," a country which abounded in gold and precious stones. Its locality has not been identified; some place it on the east coast of Africa, and some in India.

PALESTINE (pal'es-teen), "land of strangers or emigrants," called Canaan, Num. 33: 5; Land of Promise, Gen. 13: 15; Land of Jehovah, Hos. 9: 3; Land of Israel, 1 Sam. 13: 19; Immanuel's Land, Isa. 8: 8; the Holy Land, Zech. 2: 12. The Hebrew word Pelesheth, usually rendered Palestine, is also sometimes rendered Philistia, Ps. 60: 8; 87: 4; 98: 9, and Palestina, Ex. 15: 14; Isa. 14: 29, 30. The name Palestine originally meant only "the land of the Philistines." Its boundaries are described by Moses, Num. 34: 1-12. Modern Palestine is divided into two pashalics—Sidon, including Western Palestine, and Damascus, comprehending all east of Jordan. Palestine is now "a land of ruins." Everywhere are seen the remains of cities and villages.

PAMPHYLIA (pam-fil'e-a), "a nation made up of every tribe," a province of Asia Minor, bounded on the east by Cilicia, on the west by Lycia, on the north by Pisidia, and on the south by the Mediterranean.

PAPHOS (pa'fos), a famous city of Cyprus, situated on the western coast of the island. Its modern name is Baffa, where ruins are found.

PATARA (pat'a-rah), a seaport town of Lycia, in Asia Minor, with a large harbor on the east side of the river Xanthus, and about forty miles west of Myra. The site of the city is now a desert. Ruins of great extent are seen rising above the mounds of sand which cover the place.

PATMOS (pat'mos), one of the Sporades, "the scattered isles," a rocky and bare island in the Aegean Sea, situated about forty-five miles westward of Miletus. It is about thirty Roman or twenty-eight English miles in circumference. It has a safe and large harbor. It is now called Patino, with a population of about 4,000. It was the place of John's exile, where he wrote the REVELATIONS.

PEOR (pe'or), "the cleft," a mountain in Moab, near to Pisgah.

PERGAH (per'gah), a city of Pamphylia, on the Cestrus, about forty miles north from the Mediterranean shore.

PERGAMOS (per'ga-mos), "height, elevation," a city of Mysia, in Asia Minor, situated about twenty miles from the sea on the river Cai-cus, "in one of the most lovely and fertile valleys of the world." Under the Romans it became the capital of a province called Asia Propria. It was famous for its immense library, collected in rivalry of that of Alexandria. From it our "parchment" (pergamenum) derives its name. It was the headquarters of the opposition to CHRIST and His Gospel in that region, Rev. 2: 13. The modern city, called Bergamo, abounds in ruins of great extent. Its population is estimated at from 14,000 to 30,000, of whom 3,000 are Greeks, 300 Armenians and the rest Turks.

PERSIA (per'zhya, Heb. Pharas), an ancient kingdom of Asia. In the height of its glory it was 2,800 miles long and 2,000 broad, and included parts of Europe, Asia and Africa. From the south of the Caspian Sea to Hindostan, a continued chain of deserts extends; and in the southern provinces the plains, as well as the mountains, are sterile and bare. The northern districts, on the contrary, are remarkable for their beauty and fertility. The rivers of Persia are few and small; and instead of falling into the sea, most of them flow into lakes in the interior. The established religion is the Mohammedan, but there are still some who adhere to the ancient worship of fire.

PHENICE (fe-ni'se), "palm," a seaport town, more properly Phoenix, now Lutro, on the south-west shore of the island of Crete.

PHILADELPHIA (fil-a-del'fi-a), "brother love," a city of the province of Lydia, in Asia Minor, about twenty-five miles south-east of Sardis, and about seventy north-east of Smyrna. Its modern name is Alla Shehr. The population is about 15,000, most of whom are Turks. It contains the ruins of some twenty-five churches.

PHILIPPI (fil-lip'pi), "warlike men," "lovers of horses," one of the chief cities of Macedonia, lying on the borders of Thrace, and on the banks of the river Gangitis (now Angista), a deep and rapid stream about seventy miles north-east from Thessalonica. It was repaired and named by Philip, the father of Alexander the Great. The city is now wholly in ruins.

PHILISTIA (fil-lis'ch'a), "land of strangers," or the "land of the Philistines," embraced the coast plain on the south-west of Palestine, extending for about forty miles from Joppa to the valley of Gerar on the south, and with a breadth of from ten to twenty miles. The Philistines probably emigrated originally from Crete either directly or through Egypt into Palestine.

PHOENICIA (fe-nish'i-a) or PHOENICE (fe-ni'se), a small country on the coast of Syria, stretching from the promontory of Carmel about one hundred and twenty miles north, with an average breadth of twenty miles. The name is probably derived from the Greek phoenix (a palm tree); it does not occur in the Old Testament. Tyre and Sidon were the principal cities of Phoenicia.

PHRYGIA (frij'ya), "dry, barren," an inland province of Asia Minor. Its boundaries are not clearly defined. Its principal cities were Laodicea, Hierapolis and Colosse.

PHUT, "afflicted," a country of Africa which some have identified with Nubia, others have supposed that it was west of Lybia on the north coast of Africa; but more generally it has been identified with Lybia.

PISGAH (piz'gah), "the heights, an isolated peak," the name of the range of hills of which Nebo was one of the peaks. Moses is sometimes said to have viewed Canaan from Nebo, and sometimes from Pisgah.

PISIDIA (pi-sid'e-a), "a pitch tree," a mountainous province of Asia Minor, having Phrygia on the north and Pamphylia on the south.

PONTUS (pon'tus), "the sea," a province of Asia Minor, bounded on the north by the Pontus Euxinus (Euxine Sea), whence it took its name, on the south by Cappadocia, on the east by Colchis, and on the west by Paphlagonia and Galatia. Under Nero it became a Roman province along with Cappadocia.

PTOLEMAIS (tol-e-ma'is), a seaport town of Canaan, on the shore of the Mediterranean, about twenty-seven miles south of Tyre. It was an important city, well fortified, in the reign of Ptolemy Philadelphus, the king of Egypt, who greatly enlarged and beautified it. On his third missionary journey Paul visited it, and "saluted the brethren and abode with them one day;" it was formerly called Accho, Ju. 1:31; is now called Akka or St. Jean d' Acre. Its population at present is about 5,000.

PUTEOLI, a seaport of Campania in Italy, in the Bay of Naples. Here the apostle stayed a few weeks on his way to Rome, Acts 28:13, 14. The present city is called Pozzuoli.

QUICKSANDS, or SYRTES, sand-banks on the coast of Africa over against Sicily, fatal to ships, Acts 27:17.

RABBAH (rab'bah), "a great city," the capital city of the Ammonites, stood near the source of the river Jabbok, called Rabbath-beni-Ammon, Deut. 3:11; Rabbath of the Ammonites, Ezek. 21:20. Its modern name is Ammân. Its ruins lie twenty-two miles east of Jordan.

RAMAH (ra'mah), "a high place," a city of Benjamin, near to Gibeah; here the Jewish prisoners were disposed of after their capital was taken, which occasioned the mourning of Rachel's daughters, Jer. 40:1; 31:15. It has been identified with Er-Ram, a small Arab village about five miles north of Jerusalem. 2. A city on the frontiers of Asher. Identified with Rameh, about seventeen miles south-east of Tyre. 3. One of the fortified places of Naphtali.

RAMESES (ra-me'ses), one of Pharaoh's treasure cities of Lower Egypt, in the land of Goshen, was built by the Israelites. The site some suppose is to be sought in the ruins of Aboo-Kesheyd, north-east of Heliopolis.

RHEGIUM (re'ji-um), "breach," a city on the south-west coast of Italy, opposite Messina, in Sicily. Paul landed on his way to Rome, Acts 28:13. Its modern name is Reggio, the capital of Calabria, with a population of about 10,000.

RHODES, an island of the Mediterranean, about seventy-five miles east of Crete, and about one hundred and twenty miles in circumference. The city of Rhodes was celebrated for the Colossus, a brazen statue of Apollo, one hundred and five feet high, which was erected over the entrance of the harbor. The population of the island is about 20,000.

ROME (rôme), the capital of Italy, on the river Tiber, about fifteen miles from its mouth, long the mistress of the world; was founded about 748 B. C., and increased to such an extent that it covered seven hills, whence it was called urbs septicolis, "city of the seven hills." In Nero's reign (A. D. 64), about two-thirds of it was destroyed by fire, but it was rebuilt with great splendor. In the reigns of Vespasian and Trajan the population was about 2,000,000. Rome is not mentioned in the Old Testament; but the empire of Rome is referred to by Daniel, under the name of the "fourth kingdom," Dan. 2:40; 7:7, 17, 19; 11:39, 40. The population of the Roman Empire in the time of CHRIST is estimated at 85,000,000. Strangers from Rome were among those at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost; from it Claudius commanded all Jews to depart; Paul was carried to it a prisoner, and remained there two years preaching. He sent an epistle to the saints there, written from Corinth, A. D. 57 or 58. It is called "that great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth," Rev. 17:18. For centuries this great city was the capital of the "States of the Church," where the Pope had sway as a temporal prince. In the month of September, 1870, the troops of Victor Emanuel entered Rome, and in a few days the "States of the Church" ceased to exist. The Pope was deprived of his temporal power, and permitted to reside in Rome only as the spiritual overseer of the Church which owns his authority.

SALAMIS (sal'a-mis), "shaken, beaten," a city in the island of Cyprus, on its south-east coast.

SALIM (sa'lim), "peace," an ancient city, about six miles north-east of Jerusalem, near the river Jordan.

SALMONE (sal-mo'ne), the eastern promontory of the island of Crete.

SALT SEA, the name of that lake at the south-east of the Holy Land which separated it from the country of the Moabites, Gen. 14:3; Deut. 3:17; it is called also the Sea of the Plain, Deut. 4:49; the Sea, Ezek. 47:8; the East Sea, Joel 2:20; the Asphaltic Lake. The Arabs called it the Dead Sea and the Sea of Lot (Bahr Lut). It is about forty-six miles long, and a little more than ten miles broad, although these dimensions vary according to the season of the year. Its greatest depth is about thirteen hundred feet. Its surface is twelve hundred and eighty-nine feet below the level of the Mediterranean. Its waters contain twenty-six and a quarter per cent. of saline particles, while those of the ocean contain only four per cent. Its specific gravity is 1.172, so that a traveler floated in it "easily in an upright position, with head and shoulders above the water." The land around it is gloomy and barren, and an awful silence hangs over the whole scene.

SAMARIA (sa-mā'ria), a "watch-height," in Heb. Shomeron, corrupted by the Greeks into Samaria, was the capital city of the Ephraimites, situated about forty-two miles north from Jerusalem, and called after the name of the original owner (Shemer) of the hill on which it was built, about B. C. 925, by Omri the sixth king of Israel. For two centuries it was the capital of the kingdom of Israel, till the carrying away of the ten tribes by Shalmaneser, B. C. 720. The site of the city is now covered with terraced vineyards and corn-fields, amid which are groups and long ranges of columns. On one section of it stands the small village of Sebastieh, a corruption of the Greek Sebaste. The name is also applied to the country of the Ephraimites; in the New Testament, it always means the country between Judea and Galilee, west of Jordan, which belonged to the tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh. Christians were scattered through this region by persecution; Philip preached CHRIST to its inhabitants, and they received the Word.

SAMOS (sā'mos), an island in the east of the Mediterranean, about nine miles from the coast of Asia Minor, south of Ephesus. It is about seventy-two miles in circumference, and contains about 12,000 inhabitants.

SAMOTHRACIA (sam-o-thra'shya), a small island in the north-east part of the Ægean Sea, about thirty miles distant from the coast of Thracia. It is seventeen miles in circumference, is now called Samo-thraki, and contains only a single village.

SARDIS (sar'dis), capital of the ancient kingdom of Lydia, in Asia Minor, situated at the foot of Mount Tmolus, in the plain watered by the river Pactolus. Its modern name is Sart Kalessi, consisting of only a few miserable dwellings amid the ruins of former grandeur.

SAREPTA (sa-rep'tah), Luke 4:26, a Phœnician town on the shores of the Mediterranean between Tyre and Sidon. The Old Testament name is Zarephath (zar'e-fath).

SEA. The Hebrew word (yām) rendered "sea" is applied to the ocean, Gen. 1:2, 10; lakes, Job 14:11; great rivers, as the Nile, Nah. 3:8; Isa. 19:5; Amos 8:8; the Euphrates, Jer. 51:36; the sea of Gennesareth or Galilee, Matt. 4:18; the Sea of Jazer, beyond Jordan, near the city of Jazer, Jer. 48:32; the Dead or Salt Sea, Gen. 14:3; the Red Sea (called the Egyptian Sea, Isa. 11:15), Ex. 10:19, and twenty-five other passages; the Great Sea (called also the "hinder"—i. e., the western—sea, Dan. 11:24; Joel 2:20); the Mediterranean, which washes the whole western shore of Canaan, Ps. 104:25; the molten lava in the temple, 1 Ki. 7:23; 2 Chr. 4:2; the whole mighty ocean which shall give up its dead, Rev. 20:13.

The SEA or LAKE OF GALILEE (gal'i-le), a lake in the Holy Land about fourteen miles long and seven broad in the widest part. Its surface is six hundred and fifty-three feet below the level of the Mediterranean. It is called by Moses the SEA OF CHINNERETH, Num. 34:11; the New Testament writers call it the SEA OF GALILEE, Matt. 4:18; 15:29; Mark 1:16; the SEA OF TIBERIAS, John 6:1, 23; and the SEA OF GENNESARETH, Luke 5.

On this lake our LORD calmed the storm, and here His disciples were accustomed to fish.

SEIR (se'ir), "rough, bristly," the mountain district on the east of Arabah; was afterward the possession of Esau and his posterity. Hence Seir is often put for Edom or the Edomites, Ezek. 25:8. It extended from the Dead Sea to the Elanitic Gulf. 2. A mountain named as one of the landmarks on the north boundary of Judah, Josh. 15:10.

SELA, or SELAH (se'lah), "a rock," the capital of Idumea, situated near the base of Mount Hor in the Wady Mousa. Is usually known by the name Petra, which is the Greek equivalent of Sela. It consisted of dwellings cut out of the rock. It is now a lonely, deserted ruin, according to the words of the prophets.

SELEUCIA (se-leu'shi-a), a city of Syria, situated on the shores of the Mediterranean, about five miles north of the river Orontes, and about sixteen miles west of Antioch.

SEPHARVAIM (sef-ar-va'im), "the two Sipparas," a city of Mesopotamia whence colonists were brought to Samaria. It stood on the Euphrates above Babylon, on both sides of the river.

SHEBA (she'bah), "covenant," or Seba. The country or kingdom of this name comprehended the greater part of Arabia Felix, the Saba of profane history.

SHECHEM (she'kem), "shoulder, ridge," a town of the Canaanites, called also Sichem, Gen. 12:6; Sychem, Acts 7:16; and Sychar, John 4:5. It was situated in the valley between Mounts Ebal and Gerizim, about thirty-four miles north of Jerusalem and seven south of Samaria. It was called Neapolis by the Romans, a name which is still preserved in its Arabic name Nablus; it became the capital of Samaria. It has about 8,000 inhabitants, but only some fifteen or twenty Samaritan families.

SHILOH (shi'lo), "peace," a name of the MESSIAH, Gen. 49:10; comp. Mic. 5:2, 5, with Matt. 2:6, was also applied to a city of the tribe of Ephraim, among the hills half-way between Bethel and Shechem. The modern name of Shiloh is Seilun.

SHUR (shur), "a wall," a city on the confines of Egypt, somewhere near the modern Suez, and which gave name to the adjacent part of the desert.

SHUSHAN (shu'shan), "a lily," called Susa by the Greeks, the capital of the province of Elam, a fortress of the ancient Susiana or Cissia. It stood on the banks of the Choaspes. It is now a mass of ruins called Sus, lying between the Shapur and the Dizful.

SIDDIM (sid'dim), "open fields, plains," the broad plain in which Sodom and Gomorrah lay. It was "full of slime pits," Gen. 14:10.

SIDON (si'don), the Greek form of Zidon, "a fishery," the capital of Phœnicia, situated on the shore of the Mediterranean, about twenty miles north of Tyre, and about twenty south of Beirut; it was founded by Zidon, the eldest son of Canaan; judgments against it, on account of the great wickedness of its inhabitants, were foretold by Ezekiel, 28:10, and it is frequently mentioned in the Gospel history, Matt. 11:21, 22; 15:21; Mark 3:8; 7:24, 31; Luke 4:26; 6:17; 10:13, 14. Paul, in his voyage to Rome, touched at, and found Christians there, Acts 27:3. It is now called Saida, a poor town, with a population of about 7,000 Moslems and 500 Jews.

SILLOAM (si-lo'am), "sent, sending," a fountain of water rising in the southern part of the Tyropœon valley, between the upper and the lower city of Jerusalem, whence it flowed past Zion and Moriah. It is called a "pool," Neh. 3:15; John 9:7-11; spoken of as running "waters," Isa. 8:6. There were probably two pools, the upper, Isa. 7:3 (called also the King's Pool, Neh. 2:14), and the lower pool, Isa. 22:9.

SINAI (si'ni), "bush of the LORD," a mountain in the desert of Arabia, situated in the peninsula formed by the two gulfs of the Red Sea. The area of the peninsula is about 11,500 square miles. It is one of the most mountainous and intricate regions on the face of the earth. It is a desert of rocks, gravel and boulders; of gaunt mountain gorges and arid valleys and plateaus. Horeb was probably the name of the mountain group of which Sinai formed a peak. There is much difference of opinion as to which of these peaks was Sinai; the Jebel Mousa answers most fully to the descriptions of Moses, and is in all probability the true "Mount of the Law." In the library of the famous "Convent of Mount Sinai," Tischendorf found the Codex Sinaiticus, which is the oldest and the only complete uncial MS. of the New Testament hitherto discovered.

SMYRNA (smer'nah), "myrrh," a city of Ionia, in Asia Minor, on the east shore of the Archipelago, or Ægean Sea, and about fifty miles north of Ephesus. It is now called Ismir by the Turks. Its population is estimated at about 130,000.

SODOM (sod'om), "burning," a city in the "plain of Jordan," near by, or on the ground now covered with the Dead or Salt Sea; on account of the extreme wickedness of its inhabitants, it was consumed with fire from heaven, and swallowed up by an earthquake. The name is used metaphorically, Rev. 11:8. Sodoma is the Greek form, Rom. 9:29.

SYENE (si-e'ne), "opening or key," an ancient city in the southern frontiers of Egypt, on the east of the Nile, and about five hundred miles south of Alexandria. The modern city of Aswan stands near its ruins.

SYRACUSE (sir'a-kuse), a noted city on the south-east coast of the island of Sicily. In the modern town, which is a place of some importance, are to be found some ruins of the ancient city.

SYRIA (sir'e-a), an ancient kingdom, situated on the north frontiers of Canaan, and of which Damascus for a long time, and afterward Antioch, was the capital. It was known to the Hebrews under the name of Aram.

TABOR (tā'bor), "mound, quarry," a celebrated mountain in Palestine, six miles east of Nazareth, on the northern side of the plain of Esdraelon, with a graceful, rounded summit. Its height above the sea is 1,865 feet. It is supposed, but not proven, to be that on which CHRIST was transfigured, and which is called by Peter the holy mount. 2. A city at the foot of the mountain, also called Chisloth-Tabor. 3. An oak or grove of oaks in Benjamin, 1 Sam. 10:3.

TADMOR (tad'mor), "palm tree," a city once in great renown, built by Solomon in the midst of a desert, about halfway between Damascus and the Euphrates, at the foot of a range of chalky hills. It retained this name till the conquest of Alexander the Great, when it was changed to Palmyra. Its ruins exhibit innumerable and most magnificent specimens of architecture, covering several miles.

TAHAPANES (ta-hap'a-nes), an ancient city of Lower Egypt, called Tehaphnehes, Ezek. 30:18; Tahpanhes, Jer. 43:7; 44:1; 46:14, and Hanes, Isa. 30:4.

TARSHISH (tar'shish), "hard," an old celebrated, opulent, cultivated, commercial city, which carried on trade in the Mediterranean and with the seaports of Syria. This was probably the city of Tartessus, in Spain, then a Phœnician colony.

TARSUS (tar'sus), the capital of Cilicia, in Asia Minor, on the banks of the river Cydnus, the native place of Paul, Acts 21:39. As a seat of Greek philosophy and literature it ranked with Athens and Alexandria.

TEKOA or TEKOA (te-ko'ah), "a pitching of tents," a city six miles south of Bethlehem, the ruins of which bear the name Teku'a.

THEBEZ (the'bez), "brightness," or Thebes, not the celebrated Egyptian city (see No), but a city of the tribe of Ephraim, situated near to Shechem and thirteen miles south-west of Bethshan. It is represented by the modern village of Tubds.

THE HOLY LAND was bounded by Arabia on the east; on the south by the wilderness of Paran, Idumea and Egypt; on the west by the Mediterranean; and on the north by the mountains of Lebanon. Canaan proper was about one hundred and fifty-eight miles long, and on an average about forty broad. As occupied by all the tribes, including those on the east of Jordan, it consisted of about 19,000 square miles. But as extended by conquest in the time of David and Solomon the kingdom reached to the Euphrates, and to the remotest confines of Edom and Moab, 1 Ki. 4:21. It has been distinguished by various names, such as Canaan, the Land of Promise, Judea, Palestine and the Holy Land. It is described as "a land flowing with milk and honey." It was well watered, very fruitful, abounding with rich pastures and flowers, and much diversified with hills and valleys. From its position its climate was very hot during eight months in the year. It is described in reference to many of its natural advantages, Deut. 8:7-9; 11:10-12; promised to Abraham, Gen. 12:7; its boundary, Ex. 23:31; Num. 34:1; Josh. 1:3; conquered by Joshua, 11:16; its kings enumerated, 12:9; the names of those who were to divide it, Num. 34:16; how to be divided, 26:52; divided by lot, Josh. 14:1, etc.; its borders not conquered, 13:1; Judg. 2:3; its ruined cities to be rebuilt after the return of the Israelites from their dispersion, Isa. 49:19; 61:3; 62:9; 64:3; 61:4; Ezek. 36:33; what portion of it will be for the sanctuary, 45: 1, etc.; for the city, 6; for the prince, 7; its boundary, 47: 13; its division by lot, 48: 1. At the time of CHRIST it was divided into five provinces, Judea, Samaria, Galilee, Perea and Idumea. This once beautiful land has been constantly suffering under the horrors of servitude and frequent wars. After the destruction of Jerusalem, A. D. 71, the land remained almost desolate till about the fourth century, when pilgrims began to resort to it. In the beginning of the seventh century it was occupied by the Saracens, who held it till it was taken by the Crusaders in the twelfth. For about eighty years after that it was the scene of constant wars between the Christians and the Saracens. After passing through various revolutions it was finally absorbed in the Turkish empire in 1317. Its once noble cities are now poor villages, and most of the former villages are utterly extinct. Its barren, poverty-stricken and altogether ruinous condition affords a remarkable example of the fulfillment of the divine threatening, "He turneth rivers into a wilderness, and the water-springs into dry ground; a fruitful land into barrenness, for the wickedness of them that dwell therein," Ps. 107: 33, 34.

THESSALONICA (thes-a-lo-ne'ka), the capital city of Macedonia, situated on the Thermaic Gulf (Gulf of Saloniki). It was anciently called Therma. Here Paul, Silas and Timothy planted a church, and to the Christians here Paul sent two epistles. Its modern name is Saloniki, and it has a population of about 70,000.

THE THREE TAVERNS, a place on the Applan Way, about thirty-three Roman miles south of Rome.

THYATIRA (thi-a-ti'rah), a city of Lydia, in Asia Minor, about twenty-seven miles north of Sardis, and fifty-six north-east of Smyrna. Its modern name is Ak Hissar, with a population of about 15,000, between 300 and 400 of whom are nominal Christians.

TIBEREAS (ti-be'ryas), a city on the western shore of the Sea of Galilee. It was built by Herod Antipas, the murderer of John the Baptist, in honor of the emperor Tiberius, and during the Roman supremacy was the metropolis of Galilee. It was noted for several centuries after the destruction of Jerusalem for its rabbinical academy. Here the Jewish Mishna was completed. The modern city is called Tubarieh. In 1837 it was nearly destroyed by an earthquake, six hundred of the inhabitants perishing in the ruins. It contains about two thousand inhabitants, of whom a few are Christians, eight hundred Jews, and the rest Mohammedans. It is one of the four holy cities of the Jews (the others being Jerusalem, Hebron and Safed), in which prayers are offered for the world twice every day.

TOPHET (to'fet), or more correctly TOPHETH, 2 Ki. 23: 10, a place on the south-east of Jerusalem, in the "valley of the son of Hinnom" by "the entry of the east gate." It became in later times the scene of sacrifices to Baal. It received its name from toph, a drum, which was beaten to drown the cries of the victims.

TRACHONITIS (trak-o-ni'tis), "rugged region," a small rocky district east of Jordan, of which Philip was tetrarch. Identified with the modern Lejah, south of Damascus, and in the centre of the kingdom of Bashan. Its Hebrew name was Argob.

TROAS (tro'as), a seaport town near to the Hellespont, between the promontories Lectum and Sigeum, south of the site of ancient Troy; sometimes considered as belonging to the Lesser Mysia. It must, if we may judge by the ruins, have been of considerable extent. Indeed, it was of importance as the point of arrival and departure for those journeying between Macedonia and certain Asiatic districts. It was here that Paul had the heavenly vision which led him to cross over into Europe with the Gospel message. It is now called Eski Stamboul.

TROCYLLIUM (tro-gil'le-um), a cape and town on the Ionian coast, between Ephesus and the mouth of the Meander at the foot of Mount Mycale over against Samos.

TYRE (tire), "rock," an ancient and flourishing city of Phœnicia, on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea. There were two cities of the same name; one, the most ancient, was situated on the mainland, and was destroyed by Alexander the Great; the other stood upon a small island, about two hundred yards from the coast. It is called the daughter of Zidon, Isa. 23: 12, and is frequently noticed in the Scriptures. The "coasts of Tyre" were once visited by CHRIST; the Gospel was received there. The predictions against Tyre have been so fully verified that it is now a miserable ruin, unoccupied except by a few fishermen as "a place to spread nets upon," Ezek. 26: 14. Its modern name is Sur.

UR, "fire, light," an ancient city of Chaldea, the native place of Terah and Abraham, has been identified by some with Mugheir, some desolate mounds situated about six miles west of the Euphrates, and midway between the ruins of Babylon and the Persian Gulf. But possibly Edessa, the modern Orfah or Urfah, occupies the site of "Ur of the Chaldees."

UZ, "sandy, soft soil," a country in Arabia, where Job resided; its situation is uncertain, but probably it adjoined Bashan on the east; it is first mentioned in Gen. 10: 23.

VALLEY, low ground lying between hills, as of Siddim, where stood Sodom and Gomorrah, Gen. 14: 3; of Shaveh, or the King's Dale, 17; Eshcol, Num. 32: 9; Jezreel (ESDRAELON), Hos. 1: 5; Bochim, Jud. 2: 5; Gad, 2 Sam. 24: 5 (margin); Jericho, Deut. 34: 3; Lebanon, Josh. 11: 17; the Passengers, or Hamon-gog, Ezek. 39: 11; Achor, Josh. 7: 24; Isa. 65: 10; Hos. 2: 15; Ajalon, Josh. 10: 12; Sorek, Jud. 16: 4; Ela, 1 Sam. 21: 9; Rephaim, or giants, Josh. 15: 8; 18: 16; 2 Sam. 5: 18; Isa. 17: 5; Berachah, 2 Chr. 20: 26; Hinnom or Tophet, Josh. 18: 16; 2 Ki. 23: 10; Jer. 7: 32; Megiddo, 2 Chr. 35: 22; Zech. 12: 11; Salt, 2 Sam. 8: 13; Succoth, Ps. 60: 6; 108: 7; Baca, Ps. 84: 6; Gibeon, Isa. 28: 21; Jehoshaphat, or D. cision, Joel 3: 2, 14; Shittim, 18; Moab, Deut. 34: 6; Zephathah, 2 Chr. 14: 10; Zeboim, 1 Sam. 13: 18; Gerar, Gen. 26: 17; Hebron, 37: 14.

WILDERNESS. The Heb. word midbar, usually translated "wilderness," is derived from a root which signifies "to lead to pasture;" and means a pastoral country or district as distinguished from an agricultural. The midbar of Syria and Arabia was inhabited for the most part by nomads, who lived in tents. Mention is made of the wilderness of Arabia, Shur, Paran, Jericho, Judah, Engedi, Ziph, Maen. Beersheba, etc., Ex. 14: 3; 15: 22; Num. 10: 12; 13: 3; 14: 2, 29; Deut. 1: 19; 32: 10; Luke 8: 29; the Hebrews thus named the common ground near cities and villages, which remained uncultivated, and was destined for feeding their cattle, 1 Ki. 19: 15; Isa. 40: 3; Matt. 3: 1; 15: 33; Luke 15.

ZIKLAG (zik'lag), "pressed," a city on the south of Judea; was given by Achish, king of Gath, to David for an asylum from the rage of Saul.

ZION (zi'on), "dry, sunny mount," called Sion in the New Testament, the highest point in Jerusalem, being 2,539 feet above the level of the Mediterranean. See JERUSALEM.

ZOAN (zo'an), "low," a very ancient city of Egypt (built seven years after Hebron), not far from the Mediterranean, near the mouth of the Tanitic branch of the Nile, and long of great note. It was called TANIS by the Greeks; now Sân, an insignificant village.

ZOAR (zo'ar), "smallness," originally called Bela, one of the five cities which rebelled against Chedorlaomer. It seems to have stood near the base of the mountain range at the south-east corner of the Dead Sea.

COMPLETE INDEX AND CONCISE DICTIONARY

OF THE

HOLY BIBLE:

IN WHICH THE VARIOUS PERSONS, PLACES, AND SUBJECTS MENTIONED IN IT ARE ACCURATELY REFERRED TO; AND EVERY DIFFICULT WORD BRIEFLY EXPLAINED.

DESIGNED TO FACILITATE THE CONSULTATION AND STUDY OF THIS SACRED VOLUME.

AARON, a'ron [enlightener?], was of the family of the Kohathites and of the tribe of Levi, Ex. 6.16-20. He was the son of Amram and Jochebed, and elder brother of Moses;—was called by God to be the high-priest of the Israelites;—was born in the year of the world 2430, 774 after the flood, and 1574 before Christ;—appointed to assist Moses, and to be specially useful as an excellent speaker, Ex. 4.14-16;—meets him in the wilderness, 4.27;—goes with him to Pharaoh, 5.1, &c.;—married Elisheba, the daughter of Amminadab, and had four sons, 6.23;—along with Hur, stayed the hands of Moses while the Hebrews fought with Amalek, 17.10-12;—he and his sons set apart for the priest's office, 28.1, &c.; 40.13;—solemnly consecrated, Le. 8.1, &c.;—commanded to burn incense before the Lord every morning and evening, Ex. 30.7, 8; to make atonement with the blood of the sin-offering once every year, 10;—makes the golden calf, 32.1; Ac. 7.40;—Moses prays for him, De. 9.20;—offers for himself and the people, Le. 9.1, &c.;—resignedly held his peace when his two sons were consumed for offering strange fire, 10.3;—solemnly blesses the people, 9.22, 23;—instructed how to bless the people, Nu. 6.23-26;—he and Miriam unjustly complain of Moses, 12.1, &c.;—stayed the plague, after Korah's rebellion, by going between the living and the dead, 16.48;—his rod buds, 17.8; He.9.4;—sins at Meribah, for which he is not allowed to enter Canaan, 20.7-13;—dies in Mount Hor, 20.28; cf. De.10.6;—aged 123 years, 33.39;—in his office as high-priest was a type of Jesus Christ, He.5.4; he is called 'the saint of the Lord,' Ps. 106.16.

AARONITES, a'ron-ites, the offspring of Aaron, 1 Ch.12.27; 27.17;—were so numerous as to have assigned for them thirteen cities, Jos.21.13-19;—Eleazar, Aaron's son, was their chief, Nu.4.16.

AB, the Chaldee name of the eleventh month of the Jewish civil year, and the fifth of their sacred, corresponding to part of our July and August;—was not used till after the return from Babylon. It does not occur in the O. T. This month is always mentioned as the 'fifth,' Zec.7.5; 8.19.

ABADDON, a-bad'don, and APOLLON (the destroyer), the former the Hebrew, and the latter the Greek name of the angel of the bottomless pit, the king of the Apocalyptic Locusts, Re.9.11.

ABAGTHA, a-bag'thah, one of the seven chamberlains in the palace of Sennacherib, Is. 37.

ABANA, ab'a-nah (Gr. Abana), one of the two rivers of Damascus, 2 Ki.5.12. It rises in the centre of the Anti-Lebanon range, runs through the city, and falls into a lake about twenty miles to the east.

ABARIM, ab'a-rim (the passages), Je. 24.20; De.32.49, a range of high and rugged hills on one of which (Nebo)

Moses died, lying along the north-east shore of the Dead Sea, Nu.27.12; 33.47, 48; De.32.49. See NEBO, PHOR, and PISGAH.

ABASE, to lower, or bring into contempt, Job 40.11; Is.31.4; Da.4.37; Mat.23.12; 2 Co.11.7; Phi.4.12.

ABASING, humbling, 2 Co.11.7.

ABATE, to grow lower or less, Ge.8.3; Le.27.18; De.34.7.

ABBA, ab'bah, a Syriac word; the emphatic form of the Heb. Ab, signifying Father, Mar.14.36; Ro.8.15; Ga.4.6. As the Greek word rendered Father is always joined with it, this may express the greater arduity of affection and filial confidence in the use of the phrase.

Apiece, to each one's share, separately, Nu. 3.47; Lu. 9.3; Jn. 2.6.

Apocrypha [hidden, secret], the word is used in its ordinary sense in Mar. 4.22. About the end of the second century the word began to bear the signification 'spurious.' The name is first found in the writings of Clement Alexandrinus (died about A.D. 215) to denote a number of books sometimes placed between the Old and New Testaments. It was not admitted by ancient Christians into the canon of Scripture. It was never received by the Jews, nor by Philo nor Josephus. Though forming no part of the sacred canon, some parts of it are of historical value, as the Books of the Maccabees.

Apollonia, ap-poi-lo-ni-a, a city of Macedonia, situated on the north of Amphipolis, and in which was a temple of Apollo;—Paul passed through it on his way to Thessalonica, Ac. 17.1.

Apollos, a-pol'los, a Jew of Alexandria, one of John's disciples, an eloquent preacher of the gospel;—taught assiduously while he knew only the baptism of John, Ac. 18.24.—instructed by Aquila, &c., 26.—a party at Corinth attached to him, 1 Co. 1.12; 3.4, &c.

Apollyon, a-pol'yon, Re. 9.11. The Greek equivalent of the Heb. title ABADDON.

Apostasy, a departure from a religious profession;—the causes and danger of it, Mat. 12.43; 13.21; Jn. 6.60-66; 1 Ti. 4.1; He. 6.4; 10.26, 38; 2 Pe. 2.20.—of man, Ge. 3.6; 6.1-6.—of many of the disciples of Jesus, Jn. 6.66.—of some early Christians, 1 Ti. 4.1.—of the last days, Da. 7.25, 26; 2 Th. 2.3-10; 1 Ti. 4.1-3.

Apostles [sent forth, messengers]. The twelve disciples to whom our Lord intrusted the organization of his church. The characteristic features of their office were, (1) That they should have seen the Lord, and been ear and eye witnesses of what they testified, Jn. 15.27.—(2) They must have been immediately called and chosen by Christ himself, Lu. 6.13.—(3) They were inspired, Jn. 16.13; 1 Co. 2.10. (4) They had the power of working miracles, Mar. 16.20; Ac. 2.43. Their names, Mat. 10.5.—Christ's charge when he sent them forth, Mat. 10.5-42.—their power of binding and loosing, Mat. 18.18; 16.19; Jn. 20.23; 1 Co. 5.45.—

power of working miracles, Mat. 10.1, 8; Mar. 16.20; Lu. 9.1, 2; Ac. 2.43; 3.6; 19.11, 12.—to do greater works than even Jesus had done, Jn. 14.12.—their words were the words of God, Mat. 10.20, 40; 2 Co. 5.20; 1 Th. 2.13; 4.8.—witnesses of Christ's resurrection, Ac. 1.22; 4.33; 10.40, 41.—witnessed the ascension of Christ, Lu. 24.50, 51; Ac. 1.2, 9.—hated by the Jews, Mat. 10.22; 24.9; Lu. 21.17; Jn. 15.18.—their sufferings, 1 Co. 4.9.—false ones complained of, 2 Co. 11.13. The name is used once in the New Testament, He. 3.1, as a descriptive designation of Christ, as emphatically the sent of God.

Apostleship, the office of the apostles, Ac. 1.25; Ro. 1.5; 1 Co. 9.2; Ga. 2.8.

Apotary, one who compounds or prepares drugs or perfumes, Ex. 30.25, 35; Ec. 10.1.

Approve, to like or commend, Ps. 49.13; 1 Co. 16.3; Phi. 1.10.

Apron, a cloth hung before, Ge. 3.7; Ac. 19.12.

Aquila, ak'we-la [an eagle], a Jew of Pontus, in Asia Minor, who, with his wife Priscilla, had been driven from Rome by the decree of the emperor Claudius. Paul finds them at Corinth, on his first visit to that city, Ac. 18.2; they go with Paul to Syria, 18.

Ar, ar [a city], the capital of Moab, south of the river Arnon, and on the east of the Dead Sea;—it was burned by the Ammonites, Nu. 21.28.—cf. Is. 15.1. The ruins bear the name of Rabba.

Arab, 'rab [ambush], a town in the mountains of Judah, Jos. 15.52.

Arabab, ar-ra-bah [desert], the name given to the whole Jordan valley, down to eastern gulf of the Red Sea, a distance in all of about 150 miles. The name is found only once in the English Bible, Jos. 18.18, where it is the name of a district in Benjamin, called also Beth-Arabab, Jos. 15.61.

Arabia, a-ri-ba [wild desert], an extensive country of Asia; is about 7000 miles in length, and 1000 in breadth. It is bounded by the Indian Ocean on the south, the Red Sea and the Isthmus of Suez on the west, Canaan and part of Syria on the north-west and north, and the mountains of Chaldea and the Persian Gulf on the east. It is divided by the Greek geography phers into Arabia Petrea, or the Rocky, on the north-west, comprehending what was formerly the land of Midian; Arabia Deserta, or the Desert, on the east of Canaan, the country of the Ishmaelites, now in country of the Bedouins; and Arabia Felix, or the Happy, on the south. It contains vast sandy deserts in the interior, but on the coasts it is fertile and beautiful. Its earliest name in Scripture is the 'east country,' Ge. 25.6;—and its inhabitants were called 'children of the east,' Ju. 6.3; 7.12. From it Solomon received gold, Ac. 1.11;—the burden or punishment of, Is. 21.13; Je. 25.24;—Paul went into it, Gal. 1.17.

Arabians, descendants of Ishmael, Ge. 25.13, 14;—brought flocks to Jerushaphat, 2 Ch. 17.11;—God helped Uziah against them, 2 Ch. 26.7;—some of them present in Jerusalem when the apostles preached, Ac. 2.11;—prophecies concerning, Is. 21.11-17; 42.11; 60.7; Je. 25.23, 24.

Arad, Arad [a wild ass], a Canaanitish city in the south of Palestine, Nu. 21.1. See HORMAH.

Arab, Arab, Ezr. 2.5.
Arām, Arām [high region], the high-land country, 2000 feet above the level of the sea, between the Tigris and Mediterranean, peopled by descendants of Shem, Ge. 10.22, 23; 22.21; 1. Ch. 1.17.

Ararat, Ararat, the name of a country, most probably a portion of Armenia, on the 'mountains' of which the ark rested after the flood, Ge. 8.4. It is nowhere in Scripture given as the name of a mountain. The 'mountains' of Ararat are now identified with that range which rises in the valley of the Aras, the ancient Araxes, and is terminated in two peaks, the loftiest of which rises to a height of 17,750 feet above the level of the sea. The expression, 'the land of Armenia,' in 2 Ki. 19.37, and Is. 38.16, is in the original Ararat. Jeremiah (51.27) speaks of Ararat as one of the countries of the north, i.e. north of Babylon.

Aranaah, ar-aw'nah, or ORNAN, a Jebusite who sells his threshing-floor to David for 600 shekels of gold, 1 Ch. 21.25; 2 Sa. 24.24.

Archangel, the chief angel, 1 Th. 4.16; Jude. 9.

Archelaus, Ar-ke-la'us [prince of the people], son of Herod the Great;—succeeds his father, who died the same year our Saviour was born, and reigns in Judea, Mat. 2.22.

Archers, persons who shot with the bow, in hunting or in battle;—Ishmael was an archer, Ge. 21.20;—see 1 Sa. 31.3; Ch. 10.3; Job 16.13; Is. 22.3; Je. 51.3.

Arches, buildings in the form of a bow, such as are used in bridges, windows, vaults, &c., Ezr. 4.10.

Archi, Archi, a town or district on the border of Ephraim, near Bethel, Jos. 16.21;—celebrated as the birth-place of Hushai, one of those who adhered to David during the rebellion of Absalom, 2 Sa. 15.32; 16.16.

Archippus, Ar-kip'pus [master of the horse], a pastor of the church of Colosse, exhorted by Paul, Col. 4.17;—Paul salutes him by Philemon as his 'fellow-soldier,' Phile. 2.

Arcturus, Ark-tu'rus [bear-keeper], the name given by the ancients to the brightest star in the constellation Boötes, and sometimes to the whole constellation. The older interpreters understand by it the constellation Ursa Major, which is most probably the correct reference, Job 9.9; 38.32.

Ardon, ar'don [descendant], the last-named of the three sons of Caleb, 1 Ch. 2.18.

Areli, ar-eli [heroic], a son of the patriarch Gad, Ge. 46.16.

Areopagite, the title of the judges of the supreme court of Athens, the Areopagus.

Areopagus, Ar-e-op'a-gus [the hill of Mars], a place where the magistrates of Athens held their supreme council, and also the council itself;—Paul was cited before this court, Ac. 17.19-32.

Artas, ar'e-tas [graver], the king of Syria, father-in-law to Herod Antipas, at the time the governor of Damascus sought to apprehend Paul, Ac. 9.23, 24; 2 Co. 11.32, 33.

Argob, argob [stony or stone-heap], a district in the half-tribe of Manasseh in Bashan, on the east of the Lake of Galilee, originally ruled over by Og, De. 4.4, 13. It extended 22 miles from north to south, and 14 from east to west. It contained sixty walled towns, 'and though a vast majority of them are deserted they are not ruined,' De. 3.4, 14; 1 Ki. 4.13.

Aridai, a-rid'dai, one of Haman's sons, Es. 9.8.

Aridatha, a-rid'a-thah, one of Haman's sons, Es. 9.8.

Ariel, Ar'e-el [the lion of God], (1) The name of one of Ezra's chief men, Ezr. 8.16;—(2) A name given to Jerusalem, Is. 29.1, 2, 7, and in Ezr. 4.15, 16 to the altar of burnt-offerings.

Arimathea, ar-e-ma-the'a [the double heights], a city of Judah, the birth-place of Joseph the counsellor, in whose sepulchre our Lord was laid, Mat. 27.57; Jn. 19.38. Some have identified it with Ramah, Samuel's birth-place (1 Sa. 1.1, 19), but on insufficient grounds.

Arioch, Ar'e-ok [lion-like], (1) King of Ellasar, Ge. 14.1, 9;—(2) The captain of the royal guard, into whose care Daniel and his companions were committed, Da. 2.24.

Arisai, a-riss'a-i, a son of Haman, Es. 9.9.

Arise, to rise up, Ac. 20.30;—to repent, Ep. 5.14;—comforted, Am. 7.2.

Aristarchus, ar-is-tar'kus [best prince], a Thessalonian who accompanied Paul to Ephesus and shared his labours, Ac. 19.29; 20.4; 27.2; Col. 4.10.

Aristobulus, ar-is-tob'ul-lus, the household of, mentioned Ro. 16.10.

Ark, of Noah, Ge. 6.14;—it was from 100 (comp. Ge. 5.32; 7.36) to 120 years in building (comp. Ge. 6.3; 1 Pe. 3.20). According to the usual calculation it was 450 feet long, 75 wide, and 45 deep; divided into three stories.

Ark of Bulrushes, in which Moses was exposed among the flags of the Nile, Ex. 2.3.

Ark of the Covenant (Jos. 3.6; He. 9.4), a small chest, made of acacia or shittim-wood, overlaid with gold. It was about four feet and a half long, two feet and nine inches broad, and as much in height. Within it were deposited the two tables of the moral law, De. 31.26, a golden pot of the manna, Ex. 16.33, and Aaron's rod that budded, Nu. 17.10; and the top of the chest was covered with two golden cherubim. Here the lid is called the mercy-seat, over which the Shakinah hovered like a visible cloud, the emblem of Jehovah's presence. The ark was lost when the temple was destroyed. Though a similar ark was made after the Jews returned from Babylon, yet it never regained its sacred contents;—its dimensions, Ex. 25.10;—made by Bezaleel, 37.1;—placed in the holy of holies, Ex. 26.33; He. 9.3, 4;—carried to the river Jordan, which is divided at its approach, Jos. 3.15;—carried around Jericho, and said to have 'compassed the city' when its walls fell down at the time of its destruction, Jos. 6.6-20;—taken by the Philistines, 1 Sa. 4.11;—Dagon falls before it, 5.3;—returned, 6.10; received by Abinadab, at Kirjath-jearim, where it remained 20 years, 7.1;—brought from thence in a new carriage, when Uzzah was smitten for laying his hands on it, 2 Sa. 6.1, &c.;—received by Obed-Edom, 10;—brought to Jerusalem, 15;—taken with him by David when he fled from Absalom, but sent back again, 15.24;—brought to the temple of Solomon, 2 Ch. 5.2;—the glory of God covers it, and fills the temple, 13;—apsalm composed on the removal of it, Ps. lxxviii;—called the ark of God's strength, 2 Ch. 6.41; Ps. 132.8;—and ark of the testimony, Ex.

30.6; Nu. 7.89;—of the law, Ex. 25.22;—of God, 1 Sa. 3.3;—of the Lord, Nu. 10.33; 2 Sa. 6.2;—referred to as the glory of Israel, 1 Sa. 4.21, 22. It was eminently symbolical of the presence of the Lord, and before it the mind of the Lord was consulted, Jos. 7.6-9; Ju. 20.27; 1 Ch. 13.3.

Ark of the Testament, seen in vision by John, Re. 11.19.

Arkites, a branch of the family of Canaan which settled in Phenicia, Ge. 10.17; 1 Ch. 1.5. Their capital, Arka, still exists as a small village on the north-west slope of Lebanon.

Arm, metaphorically used for strength, 1 Sa. 2.31; Is. 51.9.

Arm of God, his almighty agency, Je. 27.5; 32.17; Is. 52.10; 53.1; 63.12.

Armageddon, Ar-ma-ged'don [the mountain of Megiddo], a name used emblematically for a place of great slaughter and mourning, Re. 16.16, when allusion is made to that great battle-field, the plain of Esdraelon, on the southern border of which stood Megiddo, Ju. iv. 5; 19. 6, 33; vii. 2 Ch. 35.20-24.

Armenia, ar-mē-ne-a [high-land], a large country of Western Asia, on the north of Mesopotamia, and on the east of Cappadocia. It is generally mountainous, and gives rise to the Tigris and the Euphrates. It is 430 miles from east to west, and 300 from north to south. It is divided into 15 provinces, of which Ararat is the central. It was reduced to a Persian province of Cyrus. The Armenians profess Christianity, but in a very corrupted state, having departed very far from the purity of the gospel, they form a distinct religious community, known by the name of the Armenian Church, which is governed by four patriarchs, by archbishops, doctors, secular priests, and monks. Armenia is now subject to the Turks. In 2 Ki. 19.37; Is. 37.38, the Hebrew word Ararat is rendered by the word Armenia. This country is identical with Togarmah, Ge. 10.3; Ezr. 27.14; 38.6.

Armour, a weapon of war, 1 Sa. 17.54;—the Christian, Ro. 13.12; 2 Co. 6.7; Ep. 6.13, &c.

Ashur, ash'ur [happy, prosperous], (1) The son of Shem, founded Nineveh, Ge. 10.11;—(2) A posthumous son of Hezron, Ch. 2.24;—his descendants, 4, 5.

Asia, as'he-a, one of the quarters into which geographers have divided the earth;—has been the scene of the most wonderful events in the history of man;—here the human race were created;—the Jews were planted;—the Sacred Scriptures chiefly indited;—the Son of God accomplished our redemption;—and from it the gospel was diffused through the world. Asia mentioned in the N. T., for the word is not found in the O. T., is usually divided into two parts, Asia Major and Asia Minor. Asia Major comprehends by far the most extensive eastern parts of the continent;—Canaan, Assyria, Syria, Arabia, Persia, Mesopotamia, Armenia, and Cilicia. Asia Minor, in the form of a peninsula, is bounded on the north by the Euxine Sea, on the south and west by the Mediterranean Sea, and on the east by Armenia, &c. It is about 960 miles in length, and 400 in breadth; and the chief divisions of it are, Mysia, Lydia, Caria, Lycia, Pamphylia, Pisidia, Galatia, Lycania, Phrygia, Bithynia, Paphlagonia, Pontus, Cappadocia, Cilicia, and the islands of Cyprus and Rhodes. As used in Ac. 9.26; 13.1, it means Proconular Asia, comprehending only Phrygia, Mysia, Caria, and Lydia.

Asleep, to take rest, Jonah 1.5; Mat. 8.24;—to die, Ac. 7.60; 2 Pe. 3.4;—a term only applicable, in denoting death, to the death of the righteous, 1 Co. 15.18; 1 Th. 4.13, 15.

Assnapper, as-nap'per, an Assyrian prince, Ezr. 4.10.

Asp, a small poisonous serpent, which kills within a few hours, De. 32.33; Job 20.14, 16; Is. 11.8; Ro. 3.13. The same word is rendered adder in Ps. 58.5; 91.13.

Asriel, as'-re-el [the help of God], a son of Gilead, also of Manasseh the patriarch, 1 Ch. 7:14.

Ass The ass constituted a considerable part of the wealth of ancient times, Ge. 12:16; 30:43; Job 1:3;—Saul searches for 1 Sa. 9:3;—rode upon by great men: Abraham, Ge. 22:3;—Jair's thirty sons, Ju. 10:3, 4;—Abdon's forty sons, 12:13, 14;—Christ, Mat. 21:5.

—of BALAAH, speaks, Nu. 22:28.

—, wild, described, Job 39:5; Is. 32:14; Ho. 8:9;—the natural man likened to, Job 11:12;—Ishmael is likened to, Ge. 16:12.

Assault, a violent attack, Es. 8:11.

Assay, to try or examine, De. 4:34; Ac. 9:26; He. 11:29.

Assemblies, meetings of Christians, not to be forsaken, He. 10:25;—masters of, Ec. 12:11.

Assembly a company met, Ex. 12:6; Ps. 89:7; Ac. 19:32.

Assent, to agree to in judgment, Ac. 24:9.

Ashur, ash'ur [a step], the second son of Shem, Ge. 10:22, who gave name to Assyria, Ho. 14:3; 5:13; 12:1.

Ashurim [steps], an Arab tribe descended from Dedan, Ge. 25:3; = Ashurites, 2 Sa. 2:9.

Assist, to help, Ro. 16:2.

Assistance, divine help, necessary in all our undertakings, Je. 10:23; Jn. 15:5; 1 Co. 15:10; 2 Co. 3:5; Phi. 2:13; 1 Ti. 1:12.

—, promised upon proper application, Ps. 37:45; Is. 58:9; Je. 29:12, 13; Mat. 7:11; 21:22; Lu. 11:9; Ja. 1:5; 1 Jn. 5:14.

—, instances and acknowledgment of such, Ge. 24:12; 1 Sa. 10:2; Ki. 19:20; 20:2; 2 Ch. 13:13; Job 42:10; Ps. 3:4; 118:5; 120:1.

Associate, to join together, Is. 8:9.

Assos, ash'sos, a seaport in Mysia, in the north-west of Asia Minor, about 30 miles south of Troas, Ac. 20:13, 14;—its ruins are still found.

Assuage, to ease or abate, Ge. 8:1; Job 16:5, 6.

Assurance, (1) Of understanding, i.e. perfect knowledge and entire persuasion of the doctrine of Christ, Col. 2:2.—(2) Of faith, a firm belief in Christ, entire trust in his sacrifice and priestly office, He. 10:22. (3) Of hope, a firm conviction that God will grant what he has promised, He. 6:11. This word is commonly used to denote a firm persuasion of our being in a state of salvation. But this assurance does not belong to the essence of faith. It is a result or consequence of faith, posterior to it in the order of nature, and frequently so also in the order of time. This grace of assurance has been attained by saints, Job 19:25; Ps. 17:15; 23:4; 73:24; Ro. 8:38, 39; 2 Ti. 1:12; 4:18; 1 Jn. 2:5, 14, 18; 3:9;—we are exhorted to seek after it, 2 Co. 13:5; He. 6:11; 1 Th. 5:21; 2 Pe. 1:10;—people of God sometimes deprived of it, Job 13:24; 23:9; 29:3; Ps. 44:24; 77:7; 88:14; Is. 50:10.

Assyria, as-sy'-re-a, the country of Assyria and the Assyrian empire are to be distinguished. The empire comprehended Babylonia and Mesopotamia. In its widest sense the Assyrian empire comprehended all the countries which lay between the Mediterranean and the Indus, Ge. 2:14; 2 Ki. 15:29; 17:6; Is. 11:11; 19:23, 24, 25; Zep. 2:13, &c.;—many of the prophecies of Nahum and Zephaniah were fulfilled in its overthrow.

Assyrians, the people of Assyria proper, of which Nineveh was the capital. Their country lay on the Tigris, and was bounded on the north by the mountains of Armenia, in the south by Susiana and Babylonia, on the east by a part of Media and the mountain range of Zagros or mountains of Kurdistan, and on the west by the Tigris and Mesopotamia. Its modern name is Kurdistan. In extent it is about the size of Great Britain. Their conquest of Syria foretold, Is. 8:4, &c.; 10:5, &c.;—to be punished, ro. 12, 26; 14:24; 30:31; 31:8;—their glory and destruction, Eze. 31:3;—to be wasted, Mi. 5:6; Zep. 2:13. The recent discoveries that have been made among the ruins of Nineveh throw much light on the history of the Assyrian empire.

Astonied, or ASTONISHED it generally means filled with perplexity, fear, or wonder, Ezr. 9:3, 4; Is. 52:14; Da. 3:24; 4:19; Mat. 7:28; 22:33; Lu. 2:47; 5:9; Ac. 9:6.

Astonishment, surprise, amazement, De. 28:28, 37; 2 Ch. 7:21; Ps. 60:3; Je. 8:21; 42:18; Eze. 4:16; 23:33.

Astray, out of the right way, Ps. 119:176; Pr. 5:23; 1 Pe. 2:25.

Astrologers, men who, by observing the motion of the heavenly bodies, pretend to foretell future events, Is. 47:13; Da. 1:20; 2:27; 4:7; 5:7.

Asuppim, one of the apartments of the temple, probably where the stores were kept, 1 Ch. 26:15, 17.

Asyncretus, a-sin'kre-tus, a Christian at Rome, Ro. 16:14.

Atad, at'ad [a thorn], a place where solemn mourning for seven days was made for Jacob, Ge. 50:10, 11. From this circumstance it was afterwards called ABEL-MIZRAIM.

Ataroth, at'ar-oth [crows], (1) A town east of Jordan, Nu. 32:3.—(2) A town on the border of Ephraim, Jos. 16:2, 7.—(3) A place in the tribe of Judah, 1 Ch. 2:54.

She destroys the seed-royal, 2 Ki. 11:1; 2 Ch. 22:10;—her death, 2 Ki. 11:2; 2 Ch. 22:16;—(2) One of the sons of Jeroham, 1 Ch. 8:26.—(3) The father of Jeshiah, Ezr. 8:7.

Atheists, the proper designation of those who deny the being of God, Ps. 14:1; 53:1; Pr. 30:9;—deny his providence, Job 21:15; 22:13; 34:9; Ps. 10:11; 73:11; 78:19; 94:7;—deny him in their works, Ex. 5:2; Job 31:28; Tit. 1:16.

Athens, ath'ens [city of Minerva], a city of Greece, the capital of Attica, situated about 46 miles east of Corinth. It was founded by Cecrops about 1550 years before Christ, and therefore it is one of the most ancient remaining in the world. It was the most eminent in population, wealth, magnificence, commerce, literature, philosophy, oratory, poetry, and the fine arts. Idolatry in it was notorious; and the number of their gods is reckoned by Hesiod at 30,000. Petronius said it 'was easier to find a god in Athens than a man.' It produced Solon, Socrates, Demosthenes, &c., besides many renowned generals;—here Paul preached, Ac. 17:16–22. It was governed by the Romans before the time of Christ; and in the fourth and fifth centuries it was pillaged by the Goths. Since 1455 it was under the slavery of the Turks. It suffered dreadfully in the war between the Greeks and Turks, yet it bravely sustained three sieges; twice in the year 1822, and finally in 1826; and now it is free, the capital of the kingdom of Greece. Its population is above 40,000.

Athirst, thirsty, dry, Ju. 15:18; Ru. 2:9; Mat. 25:44;—a desire for happiness, Re. 21:6; 22:17.

Attonement, the AT-ONE-MENT, the setting AT-ONE of two parties who were at enmity. The word is used to signify reconciliation or expiation. It is found only once (Ro. 5:11) in the New Testament, but frequently in the Old. The Hebrew word so rendered means a covering, Ps. 32:1. It is translated reconciliation, Le. 6:30; 8:15; Eze. 45:15; Da. 9:24.—The great annual day of atonement, the Jews, Le. 23:26;—sacrifices on it, Nu. 29:7, 8;—manner in which they were to be offered, Le. 16:1–24.

Atonement of Christ, his covering, or expiating the sins of men by suffering as their substitute or surety, Is. 53:5–7, 12; Mat. 20:28; 26:28; Ju. 6:51; Ro. 3:25; 5:6–9; 2 Co. 5:21; Ga. 1:4; 3:13; Ep. 1:7; 1 Ti. 2:6; Tit. 2:14; He. 9:

26; 7:27; 1 Pe. 2:24; 3:18; 1 Jn. 1:7; 2:2; 4:10; Re. 1:5; 5:9;—the great theme of apostolic preaching, 1 Co. 1:23;—necessary for the expiation of sin, Is. 59:16; Lu. 24:26, 45; Ac. 17:3; He. 2:10; 9:22;—made once and finished, He. 7:27; 9:26, 10:10–14; 1 Pe. 3:18;—effects reconciliation with God, Ro. 5:10; 2 Co. 5:18–20; Ep. 2:13–16; Col. 1:20–22; He. 2:17;—was voluntary, Ps. 40:6–8; Jn. 10:17, 15, 17, 18; 14:1; Ep. 5:2;—faith or trust in it necessary for benefit, Ro. 3:25; 1 Pe. 2:7;—typified in the sacrifices of the Levitical law; in Isaac, Ge. 22:2; in the passover, Ex. 12:2, &c.

Babbler, a prattler, or senseless talker, Ec. 10:11; Ac. 17:18; 1 Ti. 6:20; 2 Ti. 2:16.

Babel, ba'bel [confusion, mixture], TOWER of, mentioned only once in Scripture, built in the plain of Shinar, 102 years after the flood. Materials of brick were prepared three years, and the building was carried on twenty-two years. It was of prodigious extent and height. About 1700 years after its erection, Herodotus saw a structure at Babylon, consisting of eight towers, raised one above another, and each 75 feet, in whole 600; and above the highest was built the temple of Belus. Strabo says it was 660 feet in height. The top of the tower was reached by an easy sloping ascent on the outside of the building, which went round it in a spiral form. In different portions were large rooms, with arched roofs, supported by pillars. The temple of Belus was supposed to be the ancient tower, but it is probable that it was a much more recent building. The building of Babel, and the confusion of tongues there, Ge. 11:1–9. The name Babel (in Heb.) was afterwards applied to the city Babylon, Ge. 10:10, and to the whole province of which it was the capital, Eze. 23:17, margin.

Babes, infants, Ex. 2:6; Lu. 1:41, 44; 2:12, 16;—weak, or foolish, Is. 2:4; He. 5:13;—humble and teachable persons, God reveals divine truth to them, Mat. 11:25; Lu. 10:21.

Babylon, bāb'lon [confusion, mixture], in Hebrew and Chald. Babel, the capital of the country called Shinar in Genesis, and in the later Scriptures Chaldea. Besides its application to the city of Babylon, the name (in Heb.) is also used to denote the district of Chaldea lying between the Tigris and the Euphrates (2 Ki. 24:1; 25:7), as well as Babylonia, the province of the Assyrian empire (2 Ch. 32:31; 33:11), and also Persia, Ezr. 5:13. The city of Babylon was the capital of the province of Babylon, and of the Chaldean empire. It was one of the most magnificent cities that ever existed. It was built by Nimrod, the great-grandson of Noah, in the place where the tower of Babel was erected. This city was an exact square, built on a large plain, and was 56 miles in circumference, 14 miles on each side. The walls were 87 feet thick, 335 in height, and 100 gates of solid brass, 25 on each side. It had fifteen streets crossing one another at right angles, each 150 feet wide; and the whole city contained 676 squares. The famous hanging gardens, as they are termed, were a succession of terraces, raised on arches. The river Euphrates ran through this city. Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, in 1648 years after Nimrod, and 588 before Christ, burned the temple of Jerusalem, and carried many of the Jews to it, 2 Ki. 25:8, 9; Je. 52:12-30;—the inhabitants were remarkable for their superstitions, lewd, and debauched practices, and, in consequence, severe judgments were specially threatened against them, Is. 13:1-22; 14:22, 23; 47:10-15;—its destruction foretold, Is. 13:1, &c.; 14:4, 47:1;—by the Medes and Persians, 21:2;—their idols cannot save them, 46:1; Je. 52:15, 18, 35; 51:1, &c.;—Daniel was a captive in it, Da. 1:1, 2;—the king built a great golden image, 1-7;—was besieged by Cyrus (B.C. 538), and the king, Belshazzar, was slain, 5:17-31;—Cyrus liberated the Jews, and sent them to rebuild the temple, 2 Ch. 36:22;—Darius, king of Persia, demolished its gates and walls, B.C. 538;—Xerxes pillaged the temple of Belus in the year 478;—Alexander the Great intended to renew it, but he soon died, 323;—Seleucus Nicator carried away about 500,000 people to a new city called Seleucia on the Tigris;—a few people continued till the first century of Christ; but, in the second, it was deserted, and fell into ruins. The ruins of this once famous city are found near the modern village of Hillah, on the west bank of the Euphrates, about 50 miles south of Bagdad. The most remarkable of all the mounds found in that region is the vast ruin called Birs Nimrud, about 6 miles south-west of Hillah, and which is supposed by some, though on insufficient grounds, to represent the tower of Babel. The mound called Babel is supposed to represent the temple of Belus; the mound of the Kasr ('palace') the great palace of Nebuchadnezzar; and the mound of Amran the 'hanging gardens.' There are many other great masses of ruins on both sides of the Euphrates not yet fully explored.

Babylon the Great, said also to be 'the mother of harlots, and abominations of the earth,' is a symbolical title of Papal Rome, or the antichristian power, represented by the Popish church, Re. 17:5;—its fall predicted, 14:8; 18:2;—description of certain of its features, 18:1-14.—The Babylon mentioned in 1 Pe. 5:13 is supposed by some to have been a place in Egypt, and by others the enigmatical title of Rome (Re. 17:5); but most probably it refers simply to the Chaldean Babylon, where that epistle was composed, and where it is known a large number of Jews resided.

84:6;—the plur. of this word is rendered 'mulberry-trees' in 2 Sa. 5:23, 24; 1 Ch. 14:15.

Back Parts of God, denote the less glory of his presence, Ex. 33:23.

Bezer, be'zer, a town of Reuben, one of the cities of refuge east of Jordan, De. 4.43; Jos. 20.8.
Bible, the name used since about the fourth century to denote the volume of sacred writings. It is from the Greek word biblos, signifying book. The different parts of this sacred volume were composed at different periods, during a space of about 1600 years from the time of Moses downward. The books constituting the O. T. (thirty-nine in number) were collected in the time of Ezra and Nehemiah, after the return from Babylon. The collection of the books of the N. T. (twenty-seven in number) was gradually formed during the second century. The first complete translation of the Bible into English was completed by Wyckliffe, in 1384, about sixty years before the discovery of the art of printing. The N. T. was first printed by Tyndale at Worms in 1525, and the Pentateuch in 1530. Till his death, in 1536, he was engaged in sending forth different editions of the N. T., and of portions of the O. T. Coverdale's translation was published in 1535, and was the first complete English Bible printed; it was dedicated to Henry VIII. Tyndale's version was completed by Matthew, and printed in 1537. In 1539, Coverdale's Bible, revised under the sanction of Cranmer, was published. It was printed in large folio, and called the Great Bible. In 1540 another edition of it was printed 'by authority,' with a preface by Cranmer, and hence was called Cranmer's Bible. During the brief reign of Edward VI. eleven editions were printed. During Mary's persecution, Whittingham, Knox, &c., in their exile, made a new translation in Geneva. The N. T. was printed in 1557, the Old in 1560. It was called the Geneva Bible. Archbishop Parker, with the sanction of Queen Elizabeth, and aided by various bishops, revised the existing translations, and published an edition in 1568, which was called the Bishops' Bible. This continued to be in common use in the churches, as reprinted in 1572, under the name of Matthew Parker's Bible, for about forty years. King James resolved to publish a revised translation, and for this purpose appointed 54 learned men, 47 of whom only undertook the work, which was completed and published in 1611, and has ever since been our Authorized English Version. The division of the Scriptures into chapters and verses is comparatively a modern invention; and, having been resorted to for the purpose of facilitating reference, and not for distinguishing the several subjects, the divisions are not always the most fortunate. The division into chapters, as they now stand in the Old and New Testaments, is generally ascribed to the schoolmen who, with Cardinal Hugo of St. Cher, prepared in A.D. 1240 a concordance for the Vulgate translation. The Latin Bible, with Astle's or brief notes, published by this cardinal, was the first that contained chapters. The verses into which the New Testament is divided were introduced by Henry Stephen in 1551, and in this he followed the plan which had been applied by the Masoretes to the Hebrew Scriptures. Bichri, bik'ri [first-born, or first-fruits], the father of Sheba, 1 Sa. 20.1, 2, 6, 22.

Caln, repose, rest, Ps. 107:29; Jonah 1:11, 12; Mat. 8:26.

Calneh, kal'ne [fortified dwelling], a city on the west bank of the Tigris, built by Nimrod, Ge. 10:10; supposed to be the same as Calno, Is. 10:9, and Canneh, whose inhabitants traded with the Tyrians, Eze. 27:23;—its site identified by some with the modern Affer, 50 miles south-east of Babylon.

Calvary, kal'va-re [skull], mentioned but once, in Lu. 23:33 in the Greek Cranion, a skull, as the place where Christ was crucified. It is a term adopted from the Vulgate version, so called because executions were performed there, and skulls were probably left lying on the ground; or probably because it was a bare round spot like a skull. In Jn. 19:17 it is called Golgotha. The identity of the present site of Calvary is doubtful.

Calve, to bring forth young, Job 21:10; 39:1; Ps. 29:9; Je. 14:5.

Calves, young cows, Ps. 68:30; Ho. 10:5; 13:2; He. 9:12, 19;—of the lips, figuratively represents praise to God, Ho. 14:2; Je. 13:15.

Camel [carrier], a large quadruped, with a long and slender neck, long legs, and short ears; and which can carry a heavy burden, and travel long without drink, during intense heat. The Bactrian camel has two humps on its back, while that generally mentioned in Scripture has only one. Abraham had many, Ge. 12:16;—Job had three thousand, Job 1:3;—coarse raiment made of their hair, Jahn, Mat. 3:4; 2Ki. 1:8; Eze. 13:4. The dromedary is a smaller and nimbler species of the camel, Is. 66:20; Je. 2:23.

Camon, ka'mon [full of stalks], the burial-place of Jair the Gileadite, Ju. 10:5.

Camp, the order of tents for the Hebrews in the desert; forty-one encampments in the journey through the wilderness are mentioned, Nu. xxxiii. The form of encamping described, Nu. 2:2, 3;—the tabernacle was placed in the midst, and Moses, Aaron, and their families had their tents on the east of it; and the angel of the Lord went before the camp, Ex. 14:19;—an army in the open air, 1Sa. 4:6.

Camphire, a plant of great beauty and fragrance found in Egypt and the East, called al-henna and khofreh by the Nubians. From its leaves an orange dye is made, Ca. 1:14; 4:13.

Cana, ka'nah, OF GALILEE [reedy], (1) A village about eight miles north of Nazareth, and sixteen from the lake;—Jesus' first miracle here, Jn. 2:1, &c. It was the native place of Nathanael, 21:2. The true site of Cana is disputed. The probability is that Kana-el-Yellil is the true site. (2) A town of the tribe of Asher, near Sidon, Jos. 19:28.

Canaan, ka'nan [low or lowland], (1) The fourth son of Ham, who sported with his father's shame, Ge. 9:22;—was cursed, 25;—his posterity was numerous and was subjugated by the Israelites, the descendants of Shem, thus fulfilling Noah's prophecy, 2Ch. 8:7-9. His eldest son Zidon was founder of the city of the same name. (2) THE LAND OF, so named from Canaan, the son of Ham, bounded by Arabia on the east; on the south by the wilderness of Paran, Idumea, and Egypt; on the west by the Mediterranean; and on the north by the mountains of Lebanon. Canaan proper was about 158 miles long, and on an average about 40 broad. As occupied by all the tribes, including those on the east of Jordan, it consisted of about 19,000 square miles. But as extended by conquest in the time of David and Solomon the kingdom reached to the Euphrates, and to the remotest confines of Edom and Moab, 1Ki. 4:21. It has since been distinguished by other names, such as the Land of Promise, the Holy Land, Judea, and Palestine. It is described as 'a land flowing with milk and honey.' It was well watered, very fruitful, abounding with rich pastures and flowers, and much diversified with hills and valleys, resembling the southern counties of Scotland. From its position its climate was very hot during eight months in the year;—described in reference to many of its natural advantages, De. 8:7-9; 11:10-12;—promised to Abraham, Ge. 12:7;—its boundary, Ex. 23:31; Nu. 34:1; Jos. 1:3;—conquered by Joshua, 11:16;—its kings enumerated, 12:9;—the names of those who were to divide it, Nu. 34:16;—how to be divided, 26:52;—divided by lot, Jos. 14:1, &c.;—its borders not conquered, 13:1; Ju. 2:3;—its ruined cities to be rebuilt, after the return of the Israelites from their dispersion, Is. 49:19; 54:3; 52:9; 54:3; 61:4; Eze. 36:33;—what portion of it will be for the sanctuary, 45:1, &c.;—for the city, 6;—for the prince, 7;—its boundary, 47:13;—its division by lot, 48:1. At the time of Christ it was divided into five provinces, Judea, Samaria, Galilee, Perea, and Idumea. This once beautiful land has been constantly suffering under the horrors of servitude and frequent wars. After the destruction of Jerusalem, A.D. 71, the land remained almost desolate till about the 4th century, when pilgrims began to resort to it. In the beginning of the 7th century it was occupied by the Saracens, who held it till it was taken by the Crusaders in the 12th. For about 80 years after that it was the scene of constant war between the Christians and Saracens. After passing through various revolutions it was finally absorbed in the Turkish empire in 1317. Its once noble cities are now poor villages, and most of the former villages are utterly extinct. Its barren, poverty-stricken, and altogether ruinous condition affords a remarkable example of the fulfilment of the divine threatening, 'He turneth rivers into a wilderness, and the water springs into dry ground; a fruitful land into barrenness, for the wickedness of them that dwell therein,' Ps. 107:33, 34. Its cities, mountains, rivers, brooks, and valleys are mentioned each apart.

Canaan, Language of, Is. 19:18, the language of the Jews in Palestine, the Hebrew.

Canaanites, idolaters, to be exterminated, Ex. 23:31; 34:12; Nu. 33:50; De. 20:16;—not wholly conquered by Joshua, 16:10; 17:12; Ju. 1:27, &c.; 2:20; 3:1, &c.;—six nations of, Ex. 3:8, 17; 23:23; 32:2.

Candace, kan-da'se, a queen of Ethiopia, that region in Upper Nubia called by the Greeks Meropé;—her high treasurer converted by the preaching of Philip the evangelist, Ac. 8:27.

Candle, light originally with oil-lamps, Job 18:6;—the soul, Pr. 20:27;—ministers, Mat. 5:15.

Candlestick, for the tabernacle, formed of gold, with six branches, and with oil, Ex. 25:37; 37:17;—stood in the holy place, on the south side, i.e. on the left of the person entering, and opposite the table of show-bread, Ex. 26:35;—shown in vision to Zechariah, Zec. 4:1;—the seven churches, Re. 1:20. In Mat. 5:15, a lamp-stand.

Candour, fair, open, and impartial dealing, commended and exemplified, 2Sa. 12:7; Ps. 15:2, 3; Mat. 7:1, 12; 2Co. 1:12.

Cane, a tall sedgy plant with a hollow stem, 1Ki. 14:15; Job 40:21; Is. 19:6; 35:7;—common in Arabia and Syria;—used in writing. The Hebrew word is usually rendered reed, except in Is. 43:24 and Je. 6:20, where it is rendered cane. Sweet cane (reed of fragrance), enumerated among other aromatic substances, Ca. 4:14; Eze. 27:17. See CALAMUS.

Canneh, kan'ay [a plant], Eze. 27:23; same as Calneh or Calno.

Canker [gangrene], an eating sore ending in mortification, 2Ti. 2:17; Ja. 5:3.

Canker-worm, one that preys upon the fruits, and is much like to the locusts, Joel 1:4; Na. 3:15, 16;—elsewhere called the caterpillar, Je. 51:27; Ps. 105:34.

Canticles, kan'ti-kels [song], the Latin name given to the Songs of Solomon.

Capernaum, ka-per'na-um [city of comfort], a city on the north-west shore of the Sea of Galilee, and distant about ninety-six miles from Jerusalem, Mat. 4:13, 14;—here Christ preached to multitudes, and performed many mighty works, Mat. 8:5; Lu. 7:1; Mat. 8:14; Lu. 4:38; Mat. 9:1; Mar. 2:1; 3:33; Lu. 4:33. Christ uttered a fearful prophecy against, Mat. 11:23; Lu. 10:15. In Christ's day it was a flourishing town, Mat. 11:23;—Jesus very frequently visited this city, it was called 'his own city,' Lu. 4:16-31. The site of this city is still matter of dispute.

Caphtor, kaft'or [chaplet, knop], the original seat of the Philistines, De. 2:23; Am. 9:7;—it is called an 'isle' or 'country,' Je. 47:4. Some say that it was Cappadocia, others the island of Cyprus, others the coasts of the Egyptian Delta. Most probably it was Upper Egypt.

Caphtorim, kaft'or-im, the Philistines, De. 2:23;—the descendants of Mizraim, Ge. 10:14.

Cappadocia, ka-pa-do'she'a, the most eastern province of Asia Minor, extending from Mount Taurus to the Euxine Sea, and was bounded by Pontus on the north, Lycaonia and part of Armenia on the south, Galatia on the west, and by the Euphrates on the east. It contained many rich and populous cities;—persons from it present in Jerusalem, when the apostles preached, Ac. 2:9;—Peter addresses the strangers in, 1Pe. 1:1. It became a Roman province A.D. 17. It was wrested from the Romans by the Turks, under whose dominion it continues. A number of Christians still remain, but greatly corrupted. It is now called Amasia.

Captain, a military officer, Jos. 10:24; Ju. 11:6, 11; Is. 22:3;—the praetorian prefect, Ac. 28:16;—the superintendent of the priests who kept watch in the temple by night, Ac. 4:1; 5:24;—Christ, captain of salvation, He. 2:10.

Captive, one taken prisoner, Ge. 14:14; Ex. 12:29; Ps. 106:46; 137:3; Je. 13:17, 19; Da. 11:8.

Captives, female, how to be treated, De. 21:10.

Chaldea, kal-dē'a [Heb. Kasdim], a country in Asia, which lay eastward of Syria. It was situated on the banks of the Tigris and the Euphrates, extending southward to the Persian Gulf. It is first mentioned in Ge. 11.28. Its soil was very fertile. It was well watered by the annual inundations of the Tigris and the Euphrates, Je. 50.10; 51.24,35; Ezr. 16.29; 23.16. The two names Chaldea and Babylonia were often applied to the same country, Je. 24.5; 25.12; 50.8; Ezr. 12.13. By the conquest of neighbouring tribes and nations the Chaldeans founded the vast empire, which, from them, was called Chaldea. From 1650 it has been under the dominion of the Turks.

Chaldeans, or CHALDEES (Heb. Kasdim), denotes until the captivity the inhabitants of Chaldea (Shinar), the capital of which was Babylon, 2 Ki. xxv.1; Is. 13.19, 23.13; 45.14; Je. 21.4. But in the book of Daniel the Chaldeans are mentioned in connection with the magicians and astronomers as a distinct priestly class. The Chaldeans were one of the original Cushite tribes that inhabited the plains of Chaldea. They gradually gained the ascendancy over the other tribes, and gave name to the whole country. The language of this old Cushite tribe was the learned language for scientific and religious literature, and all who became acquainted with that 'learning' (Da. 1.4) were called Chaldeans. They were the learned class, which comprehended the priests, magicians, and astronomers.

When the race of man had greatly increased on the earth, wickedness in every form began to abound, every imagination of the thought of the human heart was only evil continually. But in the midst of the world of crime and guilt 'Noah was a just man and walked with God.' For 120 years God warned mankind of the coming deluge by means of Noah. They repented not at the warning, at last the flood came and swept them all away. The history of this is given in Ge. vi. viii. The deluge lasted for 12 lunar months and 10 days. Noah and his family were 370 days in the ark. Referred to in N. T., Mat. 24. 37; Lu. 17. 26; 2 Pe. 2. 5.

Egypt, ē-yipt, a much renowned kingdom of antiquity, situated in the north-east of Africa; and extending about 530 miles in length and 250 in breadth. It was called by the Hebrews 'the land of Mizraim,' the form of the word being duai to denote the two divisions of Upper and Lower Egypt. The Coptic name is Keme, meaning black, so called from its dark alluvial soil. In Is. 11. 11 it is called Pathros; in Ps. 87. 4, Rahab; in Ps. 105. 23, 27, 'the land of Ham.' The Arabs call it Mizra [red mud]. The arts and sciences were very early cultivated here, and maintained a greater degree of perfection for some ages than was found in any other nation. In its ancient glory it is said to have sustained about eight millions of inhabitants, and was the granary of the world. The river Nile runs through it northward to the Mediterranean, and waters it by its wide inundations, which spread fertility over its whole extent. The pyramids of Egypt are above 3000 years old, and stand south-west of Grand Cairo. The largest, that of Cheops, is 474 feet high, and covers a space of about 13 acres. They were the mausoleums

First mentioned in Nu. 22:1;—spies sent to view it, Jos. 2:1;—taken by Joshua, 6:20;—rebuilt by Hiel, 1 Ki. 16:34;—here was a school of the prophets, 2 Ki. 2:4, 5, 15;—Elisha healed its waters, 2:19-22;—Christ passed through, Lu. 19:1;—near it he healed two or perhaps three blind men, Mat. 20:29-34; Mar. 10:46-52; Lu. 18:35;—called the 'city of palm-trees,' De. 34:3; 2 Ch. 28:15. It is now a small village called Riha or Eriha, with about 200 inhabitants.

Jerioth, jer-i'oth [timidity], wife of Caleb, 1 Ch. 2:18.

Jeroboam, jēr-o-bō'am [increaser of the people], (1) The son of Nebat, opposes Solomon, 1 Ki. 11:26;—addressed by the prophet Ahijah, 29;—made king by the ten tribes, 12:12;—sets up the worship of the calves, 28;—opposed by the prophet at Bethel, 13:1;—his death, after a reign of twenty-two years, 14:20;—(2) The son of Joash, succeeds him as King of Israel, 2 Ki. 13:13; 14:16;—during his reign luxury, pride, oppression, and idolatry prevailed, Am. 2:6-16; v. vi.;—dies after a reign of forty-one years, 2 Ki. 14:29.

Jerubbaal, je-rub-bā'al [let Baal plead], surname of Gideon, Ju. 6:32; 7:1.

Jernei, jēr-e'i [founded of God], a wilderness, westward of the Dead Sea, and not far from the desert of Zin, in which Jehoshaphat obtained a signal victory over the Ammonites, Moabites, &c., 2 Ch. 20:16, &c.

Jerusalem, je-rū-sa-lem [foundation or habitation of peace], the metropolis of the kingdom of Judah, and the seat of government during the reigns of David, Solomon, and their successors. It is distant from the Dead Sea and Jordan valley 15 miles, and from the Mediterranean sea 31 miles. It was called Salem [peace], in the time of Abraham, Ge. 14:8; He. 7:2. It is so called also in Ps. 76:2; and it was called Jebus at the time Israel obtained possession of the Holy Land, Jos. 15:8; 18:28; 1 Ch. 11:4. It seems probable, therefore, that the name Jerusalem is merely a compound of the terms Jebus and Salem. It is called Zion, 1 Ki. 8:1;—city of God, Ps. 46:4;—city of the Great King, Ps. 48:2;—the holy city, Ne. 11:1-18;—city of solemnities, Is. 33:20. In its most flourishing state it consisted of four parts, built on four hills; namely, Zion, Acra, Moriah, and Bethetha. In fact, the whole foundation was a high rock, with four heads or hills, and with steep ascents on every side, except the north; and surrounded with a deep valley, which was embosomed with hills. The city was encompassed with three walls, over which there were towers, and appears to have been about 4½ miles in circumference. It was taken by the children of Judah, Ju. 1. 8; partly inhabited by the Jebusites, 21;—by David, 2 Sa. 5. 6; 1 Ch. 11. 4;—expulsed with, and threatened for its crimes, Je. 1. 15; ii. 3; 4. 19; v. 19; &c.; 11. 1, &c.; Eze. xxi. 22. 1, &c.;—described as an exposed infant, 16. 1, &c.;—taken by Nebuchadnezzar, 2 Ki. 25. 4; 2 Ch. 36. 17; Je. 39. 1; 52. 4, &c.;—burned, 52. 12;—represented as a female captive, Is. 3. 26;—its desolation lamented, La. 1. &c.;—its captivity represented by a figure, Eze. 1. 5; 1;—to be rebuilt, Je. 31. 38;—built after the captivity, Ne. 3. 1, &c.;—after much opposition, 4. 1, &c.;—its walls finished, 6. 15;—its inhabitants chosen by lot, 11. 1, &c.;—the dedication of its walls, 12. 27;—its future state, Eze. 48. 30;—its new name, 35;—Christ's lamentation over it, Mat. 23. 37;—foretells the destruction of the temple, and of it, 24. 28;—it represents the gospel, Ga. 4. 26;—a new one descending from heaven, Re. 21. 10. About seventy years after Christ it was besieged, taken, sacked, and burned by Titus. Above 1,000,000 of the Jews perished, and 97,000 were taken prisoners; and our Saviour's prediction—that it should become a heap of ruins—was fully verified. It gradually became settled again; but in the year 134 the Emperor Adrian banished all the Jews, prohibiting their return on pain of death. The temple was demolished, and the site ploughed up. Several hundred years after, this city was again rebuilt. In the year 614 the Persians captured it, and 90,000 Christians were slain. In 637 the Saracens seized it, and kept it till 1079, when the Turks became its masters. It was taken by the first Crusaders in 1099, and held by the Christians till 1187, when it was taken by Saladin. After varied changes it was taken by the Sultan Selim I. in 1517. In 1542 its present walls were built by Soliman the Magnificent. In 1832 the Pasha of Egypt occupied it, but in 1841 it once more passed under the Turkish sceptre. Under the auspices of the 'Palestine Exploration Fund' it is now being explored by means of excavations, which have already brought to light many very interesting facts regarding the ancient city, over the ruins of which the modern one is built. Its present population is about 16,000, of whom 4000 are Moslems, 8000 Jews, 8000 Greeks, 1300 Latins, and about 900 of various nations.

Journeys of the Israelites, or their marches from the time they left Rameses, in Egypt, till they pitched their camp in Gilgal, in the Land of Promise, seem to have been fifty-two in number, Ex. 12:37; 13:20; 14:2; 15:27; 16:1; 17:1; Nu. 33:1, &c.; Jos. 4:19. When they left Egypt the number of males above twenty years of age was 603,550, and when they entered Canaan it was 607,730.
Joy, or gladness, is an agreeable sensation of the mind, arising from the possession or anticipation of something esteemed valuable, pleasant, or good. Is a gift of God, Ps. 4:7; Ec. 2:26; 5:19, 20. Natural joy arises from things which are earthly and perishing, Ec. 5:9; 8:16; Ec. 7:14. Religious and spiritual joy, experienced by the people of God, arises from a warrant to claim God as their Father and portion, 2 Co. 6:18; La. 3:24; Hab. 3:17, 18;—Christ as their all-sufficient Saviour, Ju. 6:37; He. 7:25;—to expect all, while in this world, that God knows to be good for them, Ps. 34:10; 84:11;—and a glorious inheritance beyond the grave, 1 Pe. 1:3, 4;—in its nature and properties it is pure, refined, and unknown to the men of the world, 1 Co. 2:14;—sources or causes of it, Ju. 15:10, 11; 16:24; 17:13; Ac. 2:28; Ro. 15:13;—its sources remain unchangeable, He. 13:5, 8;—it is unspeakable, 1 Pe. 1:8;—it shall be eternal, Is. 35:10; Ju. 16:22. The joy of the wicked is delusive, Pr. 14:13; short-lived, Job 20:5; Ec. 7:6.
Jozabab, jor'a-kar [Jehovah-remembered], one of the two servants who assassinated Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, in Millo, 2 Ki. 22:20, 21.
Jubilee, the grand sabbatical year among the Hebrews, and celebrated at the end of every seven times seven years, Le. 25:8, 9;—this was the year of general release, not only of all debts, like the common sabbatical or every seventh year, but of all slaves, and of all lands and possessions which had been sold, or otherwise alienated from the families and tribes to which they originally belonged, 10-17.
Judah, jód'ah [the praise of the Lord], the fourth son of Jacob by Leah, Ge. 29:35;—saves Joseph from death, 37:26;—his sons by Shuah, 38:34;—his guilty connection with Tamar, his daughter-in-law, 35;—his confession of his guilt, 26;—pleads with his father to send Benjamin, along with his brothers, into Egypt, 43:3;—intercedes with Joseph not to detain Benjamin, and offers himself in his room, 44:18-34;—is constituted, by his father's prophetic blessing, the head of his brethren, from whom their kings were to descend, 49:8-10;—his tribe, and that of Simeon, war with the Canaanites, Ju. 1:1, 17;—their inheritance, Jos. 15:1, &c.;—warned by the example of the ten tribes, Ho. 4:15;—Moses' blessing on the tribe of De. 33:7;—the boundaries and principal towns of the tribe of, Jos. xv.;—they anointed David king in Hebron, 2 Sa. 2:1-11;—at the division into two kingdoms the tribe of Benjamin alone adhered to that of Judah, 1 Ki. 12:16-19;—the remaining ten tribes constituting the kingdom of Israel.

Judazing, or attempting to induce the Gentile converts to join with Christianity the religious rites of the Jews, plainly condemned, Ga. 3:1, &c.; 5: 1, 6, 12; Col. 2:8, 16.
Judas, jód'as, the graced form of the Heb. JUDAH [celebrated], (1) The author of 'the epistle of Jude,' the 'brother of James,' Lu. 6:16;—called Lebbeus, Mat. 10:3;—Thaddeus, Mar. 3:18;—his question to Jesus, Ju. 14:22.—(2) Iscaariot, is called the 'son of Simon,' Ju. 6:21. The word Iscaariot may mean a man of Kerioth (a town of Judah, Jos. 15:25). He was one of the twelve disciples of our Lord;—censures Mary for anointing Jesus, Ju. 12:4;—his treachery foretold, Mat. 26:21; Mar. 14:18; Lu. 22:21; Ju. 6:71; 13:21;—agrees with the priests, Mat. 26:14; Mar. 14:10; Lu. 22:3;—betrays Jesus in the garden, Mat. 26:47; Mar. 14:43; Lu. 22:47; Ju. 18:3;—hangs himself, Mat. 27:3; Ac. 1:16.—(3) Of Galilee, his insurrection, Ac. 5:37.—(4) or BARSABAS, commended, Ac. 15:22, 32.
Judea, jü-dé'a, the Greek form of JUDAH, the two words being frequently used indiscriminately for the country of Judah, 1 Sa. 23:3; 2 Ki. 24:20; 2 Ch. 2:7;—sometimes the whole land of Canaan, Mat. 24:16; Ac. 1:8. Daniel (2:25; 5:13) uses this name to denote the land of the Jews generally. The province of Judea lay in the south of Palestine, and extended from the Jordan to the Mediterranean. In the N. T. it is this province which is generally meant by the name Judea, Lu. 5:17; Mat. 4:15; Ju. 4:47, 54. In Lu. 1:5 it denotes the whole of Palestine.
Judge, to try a cause, Ex. 18:13; 1 Co. 6:2;—to censure rashly, Mat. 7:1; 1 Co. 4:3;—to condemn or punish, Ro. 14:13; He. 13:4.

Julia, jū'lī-a, a friend of Paul's, to whom he sends his salutations, Ro. 16: 15.

Julius, jū'lī-us, the centurion of Augustus' band, to whose care Festus committed Paul, to be conveyed prisoner to Rome, Ac. 27: 1;—showed much kindness to Paul, 2;—saved him from the murderous design of the soldiers, 43.

Jumping, leaping or skipping, Na. 3: 2.

Junia, jū'nī-a, an early convert to Christianity, of whom Paul speaks in honourable terms, Ro. 16: 7.

Juniper, the Heb. word so rendered probably denotes a species of broom: the Spanish broom. This wood burns with a remarkably bright flame, and emits great heat, Ps. 120: 4;—Elijah rested under shade of, 1 Ki. 19: 4, 5.

Jupiter, jū'pī-ter (helping father), perhaps derived from Ja, Yao, or Yehovah; the supreme god of the heathens, whom they regarded as the chief governor of heaven and earth, and whom they represented as notorious for his wicked and lascivious intrigues;—the inhabitants of Lystra called Barnabas Jupiter, Ac. 14: 12;—his priests wished to offer sacrifice to Paul and Barnabas, 13, 18.

Jushabhesed, jū-shāb'he-sed [re-turner of kindness], one of the posterity of king David, 1 Ch. 3: 20.

Just, upright or righteous, God is perfectly and essentially, De. 32: 4; Is. 45: 21; Zep. 3: 5;—Christ is, Ac. 3: 14;—the Just One, 7: 52; 1 Pe. 3: 18;—good men are, in respect of honesty and equity in their transactions, Ge. 6: 9; Pr. 3: 33; 4: 18; 10: 7; Mat. 1: 19; Lu. 2: 25.

Justice, required of man, De. 16: 20; Ps. 82: 3; Mat. 7: 12; Lu. 6: 31; Ro. 13: 7; Phi. 4: 8; Is. 56: 1; Eze. 45: 9; Mi. 6: 8.

Justice of God, the infinite rectitude of his nature, by which he must extend to every one his due, Ge. 18: 25; De. 32: 4; 2 Ch. 19: 7; Job 8: 3; Ps. 145: 17; Je. 9: 24; 32: 18; Da. 9: 14; Eze. 18: 25; Re. 15: 3; 19: 1, 2.

Justification. This word occurs only in Ro. 4: 25; 5: 16, 18. It denotes that relation to the law of God into which a sinner is brought by virtue of the righteousness of Christ being imparted to him. It is a judicial act of God proceeding from his infinite heart of compassion. It involves pardon and restoration to the divine favour; is an individual and instantaneous act, admitting of no degrees, Jn. 5: 24; Ro. 8: 1;—not to be attained by the law, Ac. 13: 39; Ro. 3: 20; 8: 3; Ga. 2: 16; 3: 11; He. 7: 19;—nor by any other performance, Job 9: 25; 4; Ps. 130: 3; 143: 2;—is given unto us by the grace of God, Ro. 3: 24; 4: 4; 11: 5; Ep. 2: 8; 2 Ti. 1: 9; Tit. 3: 5;—through the merits and blood of Christ, Ac. 13: 38; Ro. 5: 9, 10; 1 Co. 1: 30;—by the means of faith, Ro. 3: 22; 4: 16; Ga. 2: 16; 3: 11, 24; Ep. 2: 8; He. 10: 38; 11: 7;—it is an act of justice as well as of grace; the law being perfectly fulfilled, and divine justice satisfied, by Christ, Is. 42: 21; Ro. 3: 24;—is complete and blessed, 8: 30-39.

—effects or blessings of, are entire freedom from all penal evil in this life, and that which is to come, Ro. 8: 28; 1 Co. 3: 22;—peace with God, Ro. 5: 1;—access to God through Christ, with filial confidence, Ep. 2: 18; 3: 12;—the joyous attainment of eternal life, Ro. 5: 9; 8: 30.

Keilah, ke'ilah [fortress], a city of Judah, north-west of Hebron, Jos. 15: 44;—saved by David from the ravages of the Philistines, 1 Sa. 23: 1-5;—here Abiathar came to David, 6;—from it David and his men departed, being warned by God, 12: 13;—rulers from, assisted Nehemiah in rebuilding Jerusalem, Ne. 3: 17, 18;—has been identified with Kila, a ruin situated on a cliff 8 miles from Eleutheropolis [Beit Jibrin].

Kemuel, kēm'u-el [assembly of God], (1) The third son of Nahor, and father of Aram, Ge. 22: 21;—(2) A prince of the tribe of Ephraim, one of those appointed to divide the land of Canaan, Nu. 34: 24.

Kenath, kē'nath [possession], a city of Bashan in Argob, 1 Ch. 2: 23;—was taken by Nobah a Manassite, and called after his own name, Nu. 32: 42. Now Kunawat.

Kenaz, kē'naz [hunting], the fourth son of Eliphaz, the son of Esau, and one of the dukes of Edom, Ge. 36: 15;—the name also of the father of Othniel and the brother of Caleb, Ju. 1: 13; 3: 9.

Kenites, kē'nites [smiths, or dwellers in a nest], an ancient people, who inhabited a district lying to the westward of the Dead Sea, and extending their borders far into the Arabian desert;—Jethro, a 'priest of Midian,' the father-in-law of Moses, was one of them, Ju. 1: 16;—the land promised to the Hebrews, Ge. 15: 19;—for the sake of Jethro, they were not cut off, but allowed to dwell in the tribe of Judah, 1 Sa. 15: 6; Ju. 1: 16.

Kenizites, kē'niz-ites, one of the tribes of the ancient Canaanites, who seem to have dwelt in the mountains of Judah, Ge. 15: 19.

Kerchiefs, used by the false prophets, were head-tiers, turbans, or veils bound to the head so as to cover the face, Eze. 13: 21.

Kerioth, kēr'oth [cities], (1) A city of Judah, Jos. 15: 25, supposed to have been the birth-place of Judas Iscariot;—(2) of Moab, Je. 48: 24;—called Kinnoth, Am. 2: 2.

Kernel, the substance within a shell, Nu. 6: 4.

Keturah, ke-tū'rah [incense], the wife of Abraham, Ge. 25: 1;—called also his concubine, and by some thought to have been so, long before the death of Sarah, 1 Ch. 1: 32;—her descendants, the Keturite Arabs, Ge. 25: 2-4; 1 Ch. 1: 32.

Key, literally, an instrument to open a lock, Ju. 3: 25;—figuratively, an emblem of power and government, Is. 22: 22; Re. 3: 7; 9: 1; 20: 1;—the authoritative administrations of the gospel, in publishing its truths, dispensing its ordinances, and pointing out the characters both of the righteous and the wicked, Mat. 16: 19; Jn. 20: 23.

Keziz, kē'ziz [the end], VALLEY OF, a place mentioned among the cities of Benjamin, Jos. 18: 21.

Kibroth-Hattaavah, kib'roth-hat-ta'-vah [the graves of lust], the place where Israel loathed the manna, and lusted after other food; and where they were smitten with a great plague, Nu. 11: 4, 34, 35.

Kick, figuratively, to rebel wantonly and stubbornly against God, 1 Sa. 2: 29; De. 32: 15.

Kidneys, the inward parts of some animals, Ex. 29: 13; Le. 9: 10.

Kidron, or CEDRON, kī'dron [turbid], a brook which ran through the valley of Jehoshaphat, on the east side of Jerusalem, between the city and the Mount of Olives;—David crossed it in his escape from Absalom, 2 Sa. 15: 23;—near by it, Asa, Hezekiah, and Josiah burned the idols and abominations of their predecessors, 1 Ki. 15: 13; 2 Ki. 23: 4; 2 Ch. 29: 16;—Christ passed it in his way to Gethsemane, Jn. 18: 1.

King, a relation, Le. 18: 6; 20: 19; 2 Sa. 19: 42; Mar. 6: 4.

See each of these kings in their names. —After their return from Babylon, the Jews had no kings for about 400 years; but were ruled by deputy-governors under the Persians or Greeks. Subsequently to that period, Hircanus, Aristobolus, Jannæus, and his sons Hircanus and Aristobolus, all high-priests, ruled with supreme power. After these governed Herod the Great, Archelaus, Herod Agrippa, and Agrippa his son, who all were tributary to the Romans; and during the reign of the last of these Jerusalem was destroyed by Titus (A.D. 70). Kingdom of God, or of HEAVEN, the church of Christ, on earth, or in celestial glory, or inclusive of both states; announced by Daniel, Da. 4: 7, 9, 22;—by John the Baptist, and by Jesus, Mat. 3: 2; 4: 17; 10: 7; 12: 28; Mar. 1: 15; Lu. 10: 9, 11; 17: 20;—a subject for prayer, Mat. 6: 10; Lu. 11: 2;—to be sought for, Mat. 6: 33; Lu. 12: 31;—the qualifications for it, Mat. 7: 21; Mar. 9: 37; Lu. 9: 62; 13: 24; Jn. 3: 3; Ac. 14: 22; Ro. 14: 17; 1 Co. 6: 9; 15: 50; 2 Th. 1: 4, 5.

Kings, their duty, De. 17: 14; 2 Sa. 23: 3; Ps. 120: 10; Pr. 14: 35; 16: 12; 17: 20; 28: 25; 31: 4;—the Israelites desire one, 1 Sa. 8: 5;—the Israelites forewarned of the consequences of having one, 1 Sa. 8: 11, &c.;—respect due to them, Pr. 24: 21; Ec. 8: 2; Ro. 13: 1; 1 Pe. 2: 13, 14, 17;—under the control or direction of God, Ps. 76: 12; Pr. 21: 1;—the ceremony of making one, 2 Ki. 11: 12;—precepts about them, Pr. 25: 1;—the misery of having a foolish and bad one, Pr. 25: 18; 29: 12; Ec. 4: 13; 10: 5, 6, 16;—their power, Ec. 8: 2, 4; 10: 20;—Books of, contain the annals of the Jewish nation from the close of David's reign to the destruction of the kingdom of Judah and the desolation of Jerusalem, together with the subsequent liberation of Jehoiachin from his prison in Babylon, a period of about 427 years. Probably they were compiled by Jeremiah or Ezra from previously existing records which had been written by several of the prophets.

Kings' Dale, probably the plain of Rephaim, or the valley of Jehoshaphat, Ge. 14: 17, comp. 2 Sa. 18: 18.

Kinsfolk, relations, 1 Ki. 16: 11; 2 Ki. 10: 11; Job 19: 14; Lu. 2: 44; 21: 16.

Kir [a wall], the country between the Black Sea and the Caspian, to which the Syrians, and part of the Hebrews, were carried captive by the Assyrians, 2 Ki. 16: 9;—prediction of Amos concerning, Am. 1: 5; 9: 7.

Kir-Harsheth, kir-hār'e-sheth [brick fortress], a principal city of the Moabites, ravaged by Jehoram, 2 Ki. 3: 25;—long after ruined by the Assyrians, and by the Chaldeans, Is. 15: 1; 16: 7, 11; Je. 48: 31;—called also Kir-Harsheth, Is. 16: 11;—Kir-Harsheth, 2 Ki. 3: 25; and Kir-Heres, Je. 48: 31, 36. It stands on the southern frontier of Moab, about ten miles from the south-east corner of the Dead Sea. At Dibon, in this region, was discovered in 1866 the celebrated Moabite stone, a black basaltic block containing a Phœnician inscription relative to the deeds of a Moabite king in his war against Joram, king of Israel. See MESHA.

Kirioth, kir'e-oth [cities], a city of Moab, which was ruined when that country was conquered by Nebuchadnezzar, Am. 2: 2;—called Kerioth, Je. 48: 24.

Kirjathaim, ker'jath-ā'im [the two cities], also called Kiriathaim, (1) A city of the Reubenites, on the east of Jordan, and 10 miles west of Medeba, Nu. 32: 37; Je. 48: 1, 23; Jos. 13: 19;—(2) A city of Naphtali, 5 miles north-west of the head of the Sea of Galilee.

Ch. 6, 76—probably same as Kartan, Jos. 1.32.
Kirjath-Arba, ker'jath-ár'bah [city of Arba], the ancient name of Hebron, the place where Sarah died, Ge. 23.2; Jos. 14.15; 20.7.
Kirjath-Buzoth, ker'jath-hú'zoth [a city of streets], the royal residence of Balak, Nu. 22.39.
Kirjath-Jearim, ker'jath-jé'rim [the city of woods or forests], a town of Judah, on the confines of Benjamin, Jos. 15.9;—its inhabitants receive the ark from the Philistines, 1 Sa. 7.1;—from it David removed the ark, 1 Ch. 13.6;—called Kirjath-Arim, Ezr. 2.25;—Baalah, Jos. 15.9, 10;—Baale of Judah, 2 Sa. 6.2;—Kirjath-Baal, Jos. 18.14. Now called Kuryet el-Enah, 8 miles west of Jerusalem.

Nicolas, nik'o-las [conqueror the people], a proselyte of Antioch and one of the deacons of the church in Jerusalem, Ac. 6: 5.

Nicopolis, ni-kop'o-lis [a city of victory], the name of several ancient cities. That to which Paul refers was probably in Epirus. It was founded by Augustus to commemorate the battle of Actium, Tit. 3: 12.

Night, used for a season of adversity, Is. 21: 12;—a time of ignorance, Ro. 13: 12;—death, Jn. 9: 4.

Night-hawk, probably the night-owl, an unclean bird according to the law, De. 14: 15; Le. 11: 16.

Night-watches, the periods into which the night was divided, for changing the watchmen or sentinels, Ps. 63: 6; 119: 148. There were four night-watches: (1) From sunset to the third hour of the night, Mar. 11: 11; Jn. 20: 19. (2) From the third hour of night to midnight, (3) Cock-crowing, to the third hour after midnight. (4) To the twelfth hour of the night, called also morning, Jn. 18: 28.

Nile, a celebrated river of Egypt, which flows from south to north. The great problem of its source has not yet been conclusively settled. The great lake Nyanza in Africa near the equator is supposed to be its main source. It begins to swell at the middle of June, attains its greatest height in September, and subsides to its usual level about the end of October, and, on the northern part of Egypt, it spreads about 20 miles on each side. When the waters subside the inhabitants sow their seed, which settles into the mud, and without further trouble produces a rich crop. It is called Sihor [the black river], Jos. 13: 3; Je. 2: 18;—and the River of Egypt, Heb. Nahar Mitzraim, Ge. 15: 18.

Nimrah, nim'rah [limpid, pure], a place 2 miles east of the Jordan, on the road from Jericho to Es-Salt; also called Beth Nimrah and Nimrin, Nu. 32: 3, 36.

Nimrim, nim'rim [limpid, pure], 'the waters of,' same as Nimrah, Is. 15: 6; Je. 48: 34, comp. Nu. 32: 3, 36.

Nimrod, nim'rod [rebel], the son of Cush, and founder of the Babylonian empire;—his exploits, Ge. 10: 8-10.

Nineveh, nin'e-veh [habitation of Ninus], the ancient capital of Assyria, usually called Ninus by the Greeks and Romans, after the name of its founder who, according to Assyrian mythology, was the son of Nimrod. The marginal reading of Ge. 10: 11 is to be preferred. It is said to have been 60 miles in circumference, and in the time of Jonah, its population, reckoning children the fifth part, must have been 600,000. It outstripped even Babylon itself in its dimensions. Diodorus Siculus affirms that its walls were 60 miles in compass, 100 feet in height, and so thick that three chariots abreast could be driven along their top; and they were defended by 1500 towers, each 200 feet high. In the year 606 before Christ, it was completely destroyed by fire; and soon after the time of Christ not a trace of it could be found. Jonah preaches there, Jonah 3: 3;—spared on repentance, 10: 11;—threatened with destruction, Na. i. iii. The last notice of it in Scripture is in Zep. 2: 13-15, about 630 B.C. It was for a long time well nigh forgotten. Shapeless mounds opposite Mosul were all that tradition could point to as remaining of it. By recent excavations on the site, commenced in 1842 by M. Botta, French consul at Mosul, and in 1845 by Layard and others, many remarkable sculptured monuments have been discovered, which, from their structure and inscriptions, illustrate certain notable features of that ancient city, and confirm notices of it in the histories of ancient authors.

Nisan, nī'san [month of flowers or new day], the first month of the Jewish ecclesiastical year, Ne. 2: 1. It began about the time of the vernal equinox, as the civil year like that of the Egyptians began about the time of the autumnal equinox. See ABIB.

Nisroch, nis'rok [great eagle], an idol of the Assyrians, (1 Ki. 19: 37; Is. 37: 38.

Nitre, Pr. 25: 20; Je. 2: 22, not saltpetre, but natron or soda, a natural mineral alkali, an incrustation found at the bottom of various lakes in Egypt after the summer heat has evaporated the water. It is used for washing.

No [place, portion], a once populous city of Egypt, generally thought to be Thebes or Diospolis, Je. 46: 25; Eze. 30: 14, 15, 16. In Na. 3: 8 it is called 'populous No,' in the Heb. No-Amōn, i.e. No of Amōn, meaning the place, or possessions, or chief seat of the Egyptian god Amōn. It originally stood on both sides of the river Nile, about 500 miles from its mouth. In the time of its splendour it extended on both sides as far as the mountains; it had 100 gates; and on an emergency could send into the field by each of these gates 20,000 fighting men and 200 chariots. About 81 B.C., after a siege of three years, it was finally destroyed by Ptolemy X. Extensive ruins still mark its site. 'It is impossible to wander among these scenes and behold these hoary yet magnificent ruins without emotions of astonishment and deep solemnity. Everything around testifies of vastness and of utter desolation.—All is gloomy, awful, grand.—The walls of all the temples are covered with hieroglyphics. Many of these afford happy illustrations of Egyptian history.'—Robinson.

Noah, nō'ah [rest], the tenth in descent from Adam through Seth. He was the son of the second Lamech the son of Methuselah, and was born forty-six years after the death of Adam, and fourteen after that of Seth. He was contemporary with Enos for sixteen years, and with Terah the father of Abraham 128 years. Born, Ge. 5: 28;—his character, 6: 9;—forewarned to build the ark, 13: 14, &c.;—saved from the deluge, 8: 1;—offered sacrifice to God, 22: 2;—his intoxication, 9: 21;—died 350 years after the flood, aged 950 years, 22: 2;—his descendants, 10: 1;—mentioned together with Job and Samuel as singularly righteous, Eze. 14: 14;—his faith celebrated, He. 11: 7;—called a preacher of righteousness, 2 Pe. 2: 5.

Nob [a high place], a small town built on a conical rocky tell about 2 miles north of Jerusalem;—David fled to, 1 Sa. 21: 1;—here Doeg, by Saul's orders, murdered eighty-five priests with their families, 22. 18, 19;—here the Benjamites resided after the captivity, Ne. 11. 32.

Nobles, persons of high birth and station, Ex. 24. 11; Ju. 5. 13;—not many such effectually called, 1 Co. 1. 26.

Nod [banishment], a land so called from Cain's having fled to it, Ge. 4. 16.

WORSHIP

Publicans, tax-gatherers or officers who farmed the taxes and public revenues exacted by the Romans from the Jews. The Roman senate farmed the taxes to persons who undertook to pay a certain sum into the treasury (publicum, hence publicani).
Such contracts were generally in the hands of the richest class among the Romans, who employed agents who were the actual gatherers of the taxes.
These agents were called portitores
by the Romans, and it is to them that the name publicans (tellones) is exclusively given in the New Testament. Zaccheus is supposed to have belonged to the first of these classes, and Matthew to the second. As a rule they were so oppressive in their exactions, and wicked in their practice, that they were abhorred by the Jews as the very refuse of mankind,
Mat. 9. 11; 18. 17; Mat. 2. 16; Lu. 5. 30;

Red Sea, an arm of the Indian Ocean, which stretches along the west side of Arabia, and the east of Ethiopia and Egypt. Its length is about 1400 miles, and its average breadth about 150. Its western arm, the Gulf of Suez, is about 190 miles long, and its eastern, the Gulf of Akaba, about 112 miles. It is frequently simply designated 'the sea,' Ex. 14. 2, 9, 21; Jos. 24. 6, 7, &c. In Is. 11. 15 it is called 'the Egyptian Sea.' Its name in Hebrew is 'the Sea of Sûph,' Ex. 10. 19; 13. 18; 15. 4, 22, &c. This Hebrew name (Sûph) is supposed to mean 'weedy,' hence 'the weedy sea.' 'The appellation 'Red Sea' as applied distinctively to the two Gulfs of Suez and Akaba is comparatively modern. It seems to have been applied to them only as continuations of the Indian Ocean. This makes it probable that the term 'Red' was derived from the corals of the Indian Ocean.' Passage of the Israelites over the western arm, Ex. xiv. 19, referred to, De. 11. 4; Ju. 11. 16; Ne. 9. 9–11; Ps. 66. 6; 76. 36, &c. Here the manna was first gathered, Ex. 16.1; 17.1. It is now called el-Kaa.
Sinai, sin' [bush of the Lord], a mountain in the desert of Arabia, situated in the peninsula formed by the two gulfs of the Red Sea. The area of the peninsula of Sinai is about 11,500 square miles. It lies between the Gulf of Suez on the west and the Gulf of Akabah (Sinus Aelaniticus) on the east. 'It is one of the most mountainous and intricate regions on the face of the earth. It is a desert of rocks, gravel, and boulders; of gaunt mountain gorges and arid valleys and plateaus.' The Israelites come thither, Ex. 19.1.—the ten commandments delivered from it, 20.1, &c.; De. 5.4, &c.—represents the law, Ga. 4.24.—the terrors of it not affecting Christians, He. 12.18, &c. Horeb was probably the name of the mountain group of which Sinai formed a peak. There is much difference of opinion as to which of these peaks was Sinai; the peak of Sufsafeh, which rises abruptly from the plain of Rihah, answers most fully to the descriptions of Moses, and is in all probability the true 'Mount of the Law.' In the library of the famous 'convent of Mount Sinai,' Tischendorf found (4th Feb. 1859) the Codex Sinaiticus, which is the oldest and the only complete uncial MS. of the New Testament hitherto discovered. According to him it was written in the fourth century by four different but contemporary scribes.

43. 19; Lu. 8. 3;—ministers of Christ so called, 1 Co. 4. 1, 2; Tit. 1. 7; 1 Pe. 4. 10.

Stiff-necked, obstinate, stubborn, Ex. 32. 9; 33. 3; De. 10. 16; Ac. 7. 51.

Stocks, an instrument of punishment, a bar of wood to which prisoners were chained by the feet, Ac. 16. 24.

Stoics, a sect of heathen philosophers, who received their name from the Stoa, or porch at Athens, where they were taught by Zeno (born B.C. 360). They were 'severe and lofty Pantheists, whose principle was that the universe was under the law of an iron necessity, the spirit of which was what is called the deity; and that a passionless conformity of the human will to this law, unmoved by all external circumstances and changes, is the perfection of virtue,' Ac. 17. 18.

Stomacher, a piece of dress, worn either as an upper garment, or a kind of girdle, Is. 3. 24.

Stone, Christ called the tried, &c., Is. 28. 16;—cut out without hands, Da. 2. 34;—a living, 1 Pe. 2. 4;—a heart of, meaning one which is unfeeling and obdurate, Eze. 11. 19; Zec. 7. 12;—a white one, given as the symbol of pardon or acquittal, Re. 2. 17.

Y.

Yarn, linen, brought from Egypt by Solomon, 1 Ki. 10:28; 2 Ch. 1:14.

Yea, YEA, and NAY, NAY, our speech required to be; or our affirmations and denials to be simple, and free from oaths, Mat. 5:37; Ja. 5:12.

Year, is either solar, or lunar, or civil. The solar year is measured by the apparent motion of the sun through the twelve signs of the zodiac, and consists of 365 days, 5 hours, and 48 minutes. The lunar is measured by twelve lunations, or revolutions of the moon from change to change, and is eleven days less than the solar, consisting of 354 days, 8 hours, and 48 minutes. And the civil is that which, for convenience, computes by whole days; and among us consists of 365 days, and every fourth year of 366. Among the Hebrews the year was partly lunar and wandering, and partly solar and fixed. It consisted ordinarily of twelve, and occasionally of thirteen synodical months, alternately of twenty-nine and thirty days each, so that two months included two moons, and the one of these years 354 days, and the other no less than 383 days. As the former of these falls eleven days short of the true or solar year, they were compelled, in order to keep their festivals at the proper season, to add a whole month to the year as often as it was needful, commonly once in three, and sometimes once in two years. This intercalary month was added at the end of the year, after the month Adar, and was therefore called Veadar, or a second Adar. The year was also distinguished into the civil, and the sacred or ecclesiastical year. The civil year commenced on the fifteenth of our September, because it was an old tradition that the world was created at that season; and by it they computed their jubilees, and dated all contracts, the birth of children, and the reign of kings. The months of this year, consisting alternately of twenty-nine and thirty days, are exhibited in the following table, with the corresponding months of our year:—

1. Tisri, to part of Sept. and Oct.
2. Marchesvan or Bul, Oct. and Nov.
3. Chisleu or Kisleu, Nov. and Dec.
4. Thebet, Dec. and Jan.
5. Sebat, Jan. and Feb.
6. Adar, Feb. and Mar.
7. Nisan or Abib, Mar. and April.
8. Jyar or Zif, April and May.
9. Sivan, May and June.
10. Thammuz, June and July.
11. Ab, July and Aug.
12. Elul, Aug. and Sept.

Year, the sacred or ecclesiastical, began in March, or the first day of the month Nisan, because at that time they departed out of Egypt, Ex. 12:1; Re. 2:5;—by this year they computed their festivals, and the prophets also occasionally dated their oracles and visions, Zec. 7:1. The months of this, with the corresponding months of our year, are here presented:—

1. Nisan or Abib, Mar. and Apr.
2. Jyar or Zif, Apr. and May.
3. Sivan, May and June.
4. Thammuz, June and July.
5. Ab, July and Aug.
6. Elul, Aug. and Sept.
7. Tisri, Sept. and Oct.
8. Marchesvan or Bul, Oct. and Nov.

Zerubbabel, ze-rub'ba-bel [born in Babylon], or ZOROBABEL, the son of Shealtiel, and of the royal race of David, Ezr. 3. 2; Mat. 1. 12;—the same with Shekhazzar, his Chaldean name, Ezr. 1. 8, 11; 5. 14, 16;—to his care Cyrus committed the sacred vessels sent back to Jerusalem which had been carried to Babylon to the number of 5400, 1. 1-11;—with him went up from Babylon to Jerusalem 42,360 Jews, together with 7337 servants, 2. 64, 65;—was zealous in rebuilding the temple, Ezr. 5. 2; Hag. 1. 12;—was encouraged by the prophets Haggai and Zechariah, Hag. 1. 1, &c.; Zec. 4. 6-10.
Zeruiah, zēr-u-rā'ah [wounded], one of David's two sisters, and mother of Joab, Abishai, and Asahel, 2 Sa. 2. 18; 3. 39; 8. 16; 16. 10; 1 Ch. 2. 16.
Ziba, zē'bah [statue], servant of king Saul, his treachery, 2 Sa. 16. 1; 19. 24.
Zibiah, zib-rā'ah [seven], the mother of king Joash, 2 Ki. 12. 1.
Zichri, zik'ri [remembered], the name of several of the posterity of Benjamin, 1 Ch. 8. 19, 23, 27; also 2 Ch. 17. 16.
Zidkijah, zid-ki'jah [the justice of the Lord], one who sealed the covenant with Nehemiah, Ne. 10. 1.
Zidon. See SIDON.
Zif [bloom-month], the second month of the Jewish sacred year, and the eighth of their civil year, agreeing to part of our April, 1 Ki. 6. 1, 37; also called Jyar.

Ziklag, zik'lag [pressed], a city in the south of Judah, allotted to Simeon, Jos. 15. 31, 19. 5;—was given by Achish, king of Gath, to David for an asylum from the rage of Saul, 1 Sa. 27. 6;—was burned by the Amalekites, 30. 1;—David repaired and dwelt in it, 2 Sa. 1. 1.
Zillah, zil'ah [a shadow], one of the wives of Lamech, and mother of Tubal-Cain, Ge. 4. 19.
Zilpah, zil'pah [a dropping], the handmaid of Leah, and concubine of Jacob, Ge. 29. 24; 30. 9, 10; 35. 36.
Zilthai, zil'thi [shadow, i.e. protection, of Jehovah], one of the posterity of Benjamin, 1 Ch. 8. 20.
Zimran, zim'ran [celebrated in song], son of Abraham by Keturah, Ge. 25. 2.
Zimri, zim'ri [celebrated in song], (1) A general in the army of Elah, king of Israel, murders and succeeds him, 1 Ki. 16. 10;—burns himself, 18.—(2) The son of Salu, a prince of a chief house of the Simeonites, slain by Phinehas for criminal connection with Cozbi, the daughter of Zur, a prince of Midian, Nu. 25. 14, 15.
Zin [a low palm-tree], a wilderness to the south-west of the Dead Sea;—the Israelites come thither, Nu. 20. 1;—rebelled in, 27. 14; De. 32. 51.
Zion, zī'on [dry, sunny mount], called STON in the New Testament, the highest point in Jerusalem, being 2539 feet above the level of the Mediterranean. This height was the Salem of Melchizedec, and was afterwards occupied by the Jebusites till it was taken by David, 2 Sa. 5. 9; 1 Ch. 11. 7;—sometimes denotes the whole city, Ps. 149. 2; 88. 2; Is. 33. 14; Joel 2. 2;—after the captivity the name given to the eminence on which the temple was built. Symbolically given to the habitation of the redeemed, He. 12. 22; Re. 14. 1;—daughter of Jerusalem, Is. 1. 8.

Ziph, zif [a flowing], the name of a city of the tribe of Judah a few miles from Hebron on the borders of the wilderness of Ziph, where David concealed himself from Saul, 1 Sa. 23. 14, 15, 19; Ps. 54. title.
Zippor, zip'por [small bird], the father of Balak, king of Moab, Nu. 22. 2; 23. 18; Jos. 24. 9.
Zipporah, zip'pō'rah [little bird], one of the seven daughters of Jethro, and the wife of Moses, Ex. 2. 21;—bare to him two sons, 22. 4. 20;—circumcised them, 25;—she with her sons were brought by her father to Moses in the wilderness, 18. 1-6.
Zithri, zith'ri [protection of Jehovah], son of Uzziel, Ge. 6. 22.
Ziz [a flower], a hill in the south of Judah, near which the Moabites and Ammonites were destroyed by God, for the help of Jehoshaphat, 2 Ch. 20. 16-25.
Zoan, zō'an [low], a very ancient city of Egypt (built seven years after Hebron), not far from the Mediterranean, near the mouth of the Tanitic branch of the Nile, and long of great note, Nu. 13. 22; Ps. 78. 12, 43; Is. 19. 11; 30. 4; Eze. 30. 14;—was called TANIS by the Greeks; now Sān, an insignificant village.
Zoar, zō'ar [smallness], originally called Bela, one of the five cities which rebelled against Chedorlaomer, Ge. 14. 2;—for its safety Lot interceded, and to it he fled, 19. 20-23;—it seems to have stood near the base of the mountain range at the S. E. corner of the Dead Sea, De. 34. 3; Is. 15. 5.
Zobah, zō'bah [station], a portion of Syria constituting one of the kingdoms of Aram, lying between Hamath and the Euphrates;—against the kings of which Saul fought, 1 Sa. 14. 47;—David smote the king of, 2 Sa. 11. 3; 1 Ki. 11. 24.

Zohelath, zō'he-leth [a serpent], a stone by En-Rogel, 1 Ki. 1. 9.
Zophar, zō'far [sparrow], one of Job's three friends who came to visit him; called the Naamathite, probably because he came from Naama, probably some place in Idumea, Job 11. 1;—answers, Job 11. 1, &c.;—his second speech, 20. 1, &c.
Zophim, zō'him [waters], a place on the 'top of Pisgah' to which Balak brought Balaam, Nu. 23. 14.
Zorah, zō'rah [hornet's town], a city of the tribe of Dan, near the border of Judah, not far from Eshtaol, Jos. 19. 41;—here Samson was born, and buried, Ju. 13. 2-25; 16. 31;—men sent from, to spy the land, 18. 21;—rebuilt and fortified by Rehoboam, 2 Ch. 11. 10;—called Zareah, Ne. 11. 29;—Zoreah, Jos. 15. 33.
Zuph, zū'f [honey-comb], (1) A Levite, the great-grandfather of Elkanah, the father of Samuel, 1 Sa. 1. 1; 1 Ch. 6. 34, 35.—(2) The place where his posterity dwelt was thus named, 1 Sa. 9. 5.
Zur [stone], a prince of Midian, whose daughter was killed by Phinehas for criminal connection with Zimri, Nu. 25. 15;—was himself slain, 31. 8.
Zurishaddai, zū'ri-shad'i [the Almighty my rock], the father of Shalumi, chief of the tribe of Simeon at the departure of the Hebrews from Egypt, Nu. 1. 6; 7. 36.
Zuzims, zū'zims [the prominent ones], a race of giants who dwelt beyond Jordan, and who were conquered by Chedorlaomer and his allies, Ge. 14. 5;—supposed by some to be the same with the ZAMZUMMIMS, De. 2. 20, 21;—were allied to the Rephaim and other gigantic races who originally inhabited Palestine.

GARDENS OF DAMASCUS. [Genesis, ii:8-14].—"And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed." The Garden of Eden was located, it is supposed by some, in the northeast of Arabia, at the junction of the Euphrates and Tigris rivers. Its real position, however, is in doubt. The picture, "Gardens of Damascus," is given here because Damascus comes nearer illustrating for us what an Eastern garden is, than any other city of which we know; and from the mountain we see here rising from the gardens of Damascus, an observer can see the mountains on the borders of the Eastern desert toward the confines of Mesopotamia, where the original Garden of Eden is supposed by some to have been situated. The gardens of Damascus are little enclosed plantations which encompass the city and extend for several miles into the plain.

THE FIRST BOOK OF MOSES, CALLED GENESIS,

That is, GENERATION (Heb. BERESHITH, in the beginning). In this book we have the writings of Moses covering 2369 years, viz. the creation of all things; the original happiness and fall of man; the expulsion from Eden; the progress of various arts, the general corruption of society, and the deluge sent to punish it; the preservation of Noah and his family in the ark, and their repeopleing the earth; God's confounding of languages at the building of the tower of Babel, with his marvellous providences towards the families of Lot and Nahor, but especially of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph.

CHAPTER I.

1 The creation of heaven and earth, 3 of the light, 6 of the firmament, 9 of the earth separated from the waters, 11 and made fruitful, 14 of the sun, moon, and stars, 20 of fish and fowl, 24 of beasts and cattle, 26 of man in the image of God. 29 Also the appointment of food.

IN the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.

2 And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep; and the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.

3 ¶ And God said, 'Let there be light: and there was light.'

4 And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided the light from the darkness.<sup>1</sup>

5 And God called the light Day,<sup>2</sup> and the darkness he called Night.<sup>3</sup> And the evening<sup>4</sup> and the morning<sup>5</sup> were the first day.<sup>6</sup>

6 ¶ And God said, 'Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters.'

CHAPTER I. Ver. 1. That is, in the beginning of time, God created the elements out of which all things in heaven and earth were formed. According to the teachings of chemistry there are about seventy different kinds of atoms which are the elements God used as material to build the universe. He. 11. 3, 'Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear.' Ps. 102. 25, 'Of old thou hast laid the foundation of the earth, and the heavens are the work of thy hands;' 2 Pe. 3. 5; Je. 10. 12; 51. 15; Ex. 31. 17; 20. 11; Ps. 33. 6, 9; 89. 11, 12; 146. 6; 148. 1-6; Is. 44. 24; Zec. 12. 1; Ac. 14. 15; 17. 24; 4. 24; Is. 42. 5; Re. 4. 11; 10. 6; 14. 7; Ro. 1. 19, 20; 11. 36. The word ELOHIM, here rendered God, is plural, and denotes the WORSHIPFUL ONES, the Divine Persons, who equally concurred in the creation of all things. 1 Co. 8. 6, 'The Father, of whom are all things;' Mat. 11. 25, 'He is Lord of heaven and earth;' Ep. 3. 9, 'God created all things by Jesus Christ;' Jn. 1. 1-3, 'In the beginning was the Word (the Son), and the Word was with God, and the Word was God: all things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made;' Col. 1. 16; Pr. 8. 27-30; Job 26. 13, 'By his spirit he garnished the heavens;' Ps. 33. 6, 'All the host of them were made by the spirit of his mouth;' 104. 30.—[This verse is the introduction to the whole Bible. It is the introduction to history, for it marks the boundary between time and eternity. It cannot be, as has been generally supposed, a mere summary of what follows

—a mere heading to the chapter; for it mentions the 'heaven' first, whereas in the following verses 'the earth' is first spoken of. This of itself is sufficient to show that ver. 1 refers to a prior act of God—an event anterior to those described in the subsequent part of the chapter. The terms 'heaven and earth' may mean the universe of mind and matter. Then heaven would include the celestial spheres with angels and spirits, and the earth would include all the animals which the researches of geology have brought to light, entombed in the various strata. The 'heaven and the earth,' whose creation is thus simply announced, embraced the whole pre-adamic universe. The fact of its creation at some undefined past age is recorded; and then it is indicated that from some cause the earth having been reduced to chaos, God put forth anew creative power, and prepared it for a new race of animals, and for the noblest of all—man. P.]

Ver. 2. Earth, deep, and waters, signify the same mingled mass of earth and water. 2 Pe. 3. 5, 'The earth standing out of the water, and in the water.'—It was without form; without any agreeable shape, order, or ornament: and void, without either vegetables to furnish it, or animals to inhabit it. And the Spirit of God in His almighty power proceeding from the Father as the source of all and through the Son as the Mediator moved upon this mingled mass, to prepare it for the intended separation of earth and water, and for the production of vegetables and animals. — [Philosophy can explain the observed laws of motion both on earth and in the heavens; but never can account for its origin. Moses, divinely instructed, ascribes it directly to the Spirit of God: From him originates also every spiritual movement of the soul in returning to God and entering his kingdom. Jn. 3. 5. C.—And the earth was, or had become, waste and desolate. Its physical features were reduced to utter confusion; its elements were in complete disorder—chaos reigned entirely. Darkness was upon the face of the deep. This implies that there was some dense mist or cloud hovering over the earth's surface, so as totally to exclude light from without. The introduction of light, and the succession of day and night, prove that at the very commencement of what is usually called the creative week the sun existed, and the diurnal motion of the earth on its axis was in operation. P.]

Ver. 3. 2 Co. 4. 6, 'God commanded the light to shine out of darkness.' It, as well as all things else, was produced by Christ, who is God's personal Word, Jn. 1. 3; his wisdom and power, 1 Co. 1. 24. God created all things through Jesus Christ. The Son is not only the Mediator of Redemption, but also of Creation, Administration, and Consummation. He is the Alpha and the Omega.

Ver. 4. God divided the light from the darkness, by making them to take different places by turns; the light always shining upon the one half of the mingled mass, and the darkness covering the other; in much the same manner as our sun by turns illuminates the one half of the globe and leaves the other in darkness.

Ver. 5. The time of the first revolution of the dark-

14 ¶ And God said, Let there be <sup>9</sup>lights in the firmament of the heaven, to divide the day from the night;<sup>4</sup> and let them be for signs,<sup>5</sup> and for seasons, and for days, and years:

15 And let them be for lights in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth: and it was so.

16 And God made two great<sup>6</sup> lights; the greater light to rule the day,<sup>7</sup> and the lesser light to rule the night: he made the stars also.

17 And God set them in the firmament of the heaven, to give light upon the earth, 18 And to <sup>8</sup>rule over the day and over the night, and to divide the light from the darkness: and God saw that it was good.

All that had been done in the interval was a re-arrangement of matter; now life is introduced, and it requires not simply constructive, but creative power. The three expressions, great whales, every living creature that moveth, and every winged fowl are introduced so as to embrace all forms of animal life in air and water.—F.

forth abundantly the moving<sup>8</sup> creature that hath life,<sup>9</sup> and fowl that may fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven.<sup>1</sup>

21 And God created<sup>2</sup> great whales, and every living creature that moveth, which the waters brought forth abundantly after their kind, and every winged fowl after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

22 And God <sup>3</sup>blessed<sup>3</sup> them, saying, Be fruitful, and multiply, and fill the waters in the seas, and let fowl multiply in the earth.

23 And the evening and the morning were the fifth day.

24 ¶ And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind: and it was so.

25 And God made the beast of the earth after ness and of the light were the first day; for both the light and the darkness existed together at the same time, but on different parts of the mingled mass.

Ver. 6. This firmament includes the region of the sun, moon, stars, and comets: and the air or atmosphere which surrounds our earth, and separates between the water which is in the clouds and that which is in the seas and rivers. Ps. 33: 6, 9, 'By the word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth. He spake, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast;' Job 37: 18, 'He spread out the sky, which is strong, and as a molten looking-glass;' Job 26: 13; Ps. 136: 5; Je. 10: 12; 51: 15; Zec. 12: 1; Je. 10: 13, 'There is a multitude of waters in the heavens, and he causeth the vapours to ascend from the earth;' Job 26: 8, 'He bindeth up the waters in his thick clouds, and the cloud is not rent under them;' 38: 22-26, 'Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow, and of the hail, which I have reserved? Who hath divided a water-course for the overflowing of waters, to cause it to rain upon the earth?' Job 37: 11; Ec. 11: 3; Ps. 148: 4.—[The firmament, or more literally 'the expanse,' is the atmosphere. At first the body of water on the earth's surface seems to have been in contact with another form of water like a dense mist, hovering over the earth. By the atmosphere, and the light acting upon it, the mist was absorbed, and raised in the form of clouds high above the earth. The Hebrew word translated 'above' in ver. 7 signifies 'upon,' as a sustaining power, thus describing with scientific precision the action of the atmosphere in supporting the water. P.]

Ver. 7. [The use of the word 'made' in this and other parts of the narrative must be carefully noted. It must not be confounded with 'created.' 'In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.' He called the universe into existence; but all his subsequent work upon inanimate matter was a work of re-arrangement, which is expressed by the word made, or some such phrase as 'let there be.' P.]

Ver. 9. Job 38: 8-11, 'Who shut up the sea with doors, when I made the cloud the garment thereof, and thick darkness a swaddling-band for it, and brake up for it my decreed place, and set bars and doors, and said, Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further?' 26: 10, 'He compassed the sea with bounds;' Ps. 24: 1, 2, 'The earth he founded upon the seas, and established it upon the floods;' 136: 6, 'He stretched out the earth above the waters;' Ps. 104: 5-9; 33: 7; 2 Pe. 3: 5; Je. 5: 22; Pr. 8: 29. But the whole globe of earth and sea was hung upon nothing, Job 26: 7. The approbation of the second day's work was deferred till the separation of the waters was completed; and we have it, ver. 10.—[Let the waters gather themselves. No direct force of living agency is employed upon the waters; but such an arrangement of the earth's surface is implied as would bring the waters together by the law of gravitation. Some portions of the earth's crust were depressed, some upheaved. The sacred writer takes no notice of this. He has nothing to do with geology. But the Psalmist appears to indicate the way in which the waters were made to gather themselves. See Ps. 104: 7-10. P.]

sense here. It signifies 'land,' as contradistinguished from 'sea,' whereas in ver. 1 it signifies 'world,' as contradistinguished from 'heavens.' P.]

Ver. 11. Ps. 104: 14, 15, 'He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and herb for the service of man; that he may bring forth food out of the earth, wine, and oil, and bread;' Job 28: 5. The purpose of the writer of Genesis was not to give a scientific description of the order of Creation, but it was to make it clear that God was the author of all things. Moses saw that God and not chance was the creator of all.

Ver. 14. According to verse 14 God appointed the sun to be the great light in the firmament and the moon to reflect that light. The sun is in itself a very extensive body of light; and the moon, though it hath no light in itself, enlightens our earth by reflecting the light of the sun; and both are called great lights, since by reason of their nearness they appear to us much larger than any of the stars. These lights not only form the day and night, but also form or mark out the seasons of sowing, planting, reaping, sailing, travelling, or the like; and are for signs of the weather, and sometimes of remarkable phenomena. Ps. 136: 7-9, 'God made great lights—the sun to rule by day, and the moon and stars to rule by night;' 74: 16, 17, 'The day is thine, the night also is thine: thou hast prepared the light and the sun. Thou hast made moon and winter;' 104: 19, 20, 'He appointed the moon for seasons; the sun knoweth his going down. Thou makest darkness, and it is night;' De. 4: 19, 'The sun, moon, and stars, even all the host of heaven, God hath divided unto all nations;' for use; Job 38: 12; Ps. 8: 3, 4; 148: 3, 5; 119: 91; Je. 31: 35; 33: 25; Mat. 16: 2, 3, 'When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather, for the sky is red. And in the morning, It will be foul weather to-day, for the sky is red and lowering;' Lu. 21: 25, 26, 'There shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars: men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth;' Mat. 24: 29; Is. 13: 10; Eze. 32: 7; Joel 2: 10-31; 3: 15; Ac. 2: 19, 20; Jos. 10: 13.

Ver. 16. [The specific object of the two great lights is mentioned; that of the stars is not. The former had an important bearing upon the earth as the abode of man; the latter had not, and consequently the writer simply mentions them to show that they are the work of God. In the 17th and 18th verses allusion is made mainly, if not exclusively, to the sun and moon. They are the rulers of the day and of the night—regulating their length, the amount of their light or darkness, and the intensity of their heat or cold. P.]

Ver. 20. [The Hebrew words may be more intelligibly translated, 'Let the waters swarm with swarms of living creatures.' There is no allusion to any productive power in the waters. God was the producing cause; the waters were merely the place in which that cause operated. The next clause ought to be rendered, 'And let fowl fly above the earth,' &c. The original does not signify that the fowls were produced in the water. P.]

Ver. 21-25. Ac. 17: 25, 'He giveth to all life, and breath, and all things;' Ps. 104: 24-26, 'The earth is full of his riches,' minerals, vegetables, animals. 'So is this great sea, wherein are things creeping innumerable, both small and great beasts. There is that Leviathan, whales, crocodiles, and other sea monsters; Ps. 50: 10, 11, 'Every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills. I know all the fowls of the mountains; and the wild beasts of the field are mine,' by creation; Job 40: 15. God's blessing gave the animals a power to propagate their kinds. Ps. 107: 38, 'He blesseth them, so that they are multiplied greatly;' Job 43: 12; Ps. 144: 13, 14.

Ver. 26. The plural is not here used for the singular in the manner of some modern kings. There is not in Scripture one instance of a sovereign's speaking of himself only in the plural number, we, us, our. But the plural us here denotes a consultation of the divine Persons concerning the production of that species of creatures which was to be the most perfect under heaven, and in which the glory of God was to be forever most illustriously manifested in his work of redemption.—The image of God on man includes, (1) The resemblance of his soul, in respect of spiritual substance, understanding, and will. (2) The happiness of his state, and his honourable dominion over the creatures. (3) And chiefly the moral conformity of his soul to God, in spiritual knowledge, righteousness, and holiness. Ec. 12: 1, 'Remember thy Creators,' Heb., i.e. Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, 'in the days of thy youth;' Job 35: 10, 'Where is God my Maker?' Heb.; Is. 54: 5, 'Thy Maker, the Lord of hosts;' 1 Jn. 5: 7; Ec. 7: 29, 'God made man upright;' Col. 3: 10, 'Renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him;' Ep. 4: 24, 'The new man after God is created in righteousness and true holiness;' 2 Co. 3: 18 with Ex. 15: 11; Ge. 5: 1; 9: 6; Ps. 8: 4-8, 'Man—thou hast made a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honour. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet; all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field, the fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea; and whatsoever creeping thing passeth through the paths of the sea;' Ge. 2: 19, 20; 9: 2; Job 5: 23; Je. 27: 6.—[The order of creation was from the lowest forms of vegetable and animal life upwards. Man, as the highest of all, was made last. But man's creation is distinguished in another way. It was not merely accomplished by a divine thought—it was also the subject of a divine council; 'Let us make man.' As in the divine name Elohim, so in this form of expression there seems to be distinct indication of plurality in the Godhead. And yet the whole structure of the sentence shows that there is unity joined with plurality; for in ver. 27 it is said, 'So (as had been decreed in the divine council) God created man in his own image.' It will be observed that the word 'created' is here again used. We can scarcely suppose that the two words 'image' and 'likeness' are synonymous. It seems probable that the former was intended to express man's likeness to God intellectually and physically; he was in his knowledge and commanding aspect God's representative, his image upon earth. The other word most probably refers to man's moral nature, in which he also resembled God. P.] his kind, and cattle after their kind, and every thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind:<sup>4</sup> and God saw that it was good.

26 ¶ And God said, 'Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth.'

27 So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him: male and female created he them.

28 And God blessed them; and God said unto them, 'Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth<sup>5</sup> upon the earth.'

29 ¶ And God said,<sup>6</sup> Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed,<sup>7</sup> which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat.

CHAP. II.

4 Vegetables and animals are arranged each after his kind, and referred to no higher denomination. But when MAN is to be formed, we read, in ver. 26: 'Let us make man in our image.' So God created man in his own image. Now what is the apostle telling us, He. 1. 3. 'The Son is the express image of the Father's person.' He is further described, 1 Ti. 3. 16, as 'God manifest in the flesh.' Being thus ever seen in the eternal purpose, Ep. 1. 9, he constitutes the glorious original after which man is formed. Of the image of God in man, knowledge, righteousness, and holiness are the principal features, Ep. 4. 24; Col. 3. 10; but every other attribute of God, even eternity, Job 10. 28, is, in created measure, exhibited in man.—C.

5 Heb. creepeth. 6 It is to be remarked, how, at every successive act of creation, ver. 5, 9, 11, 24, 26, 28, 30, God speaks, Ps. 33. 9, that is, 'The Lord that was with God' (Ps. 8. 22, 31), and was God, and without whom was not any thing made that was made, Jn. 1. 3.—C.

7 Heb. seed. 8 Heb. a living soul.

2 In this verse the historian takes as it were a retrospective look at all that had been done as related in the preceding chapter—the creation of the universe, 'in the beginning,' and the rearrangement of the earth's surface, and the production of vegetables and animals during the six days.—P.

CHAPTER II.

1 The first sabbath. 4 The manner of the creation. 8 The planting of the garden of Eden, 10 and the river thereof. 17 The tree of knowledge only forbidden. 19, 20 The naming of the creatures. 21 The making of woman, and institution of marriage.

2 And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made: and he rested<sup>3</sup> on the seventh day from all his work which he had made.

3 And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it; because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made.<sup>4</sup>

4 ¶ These are the generations<sup>5</sup> of the heavens and of the earth when they were created, in the day<sup>6</sup> that the LORD God made the earth and the heavens,

5 And every plant of the field before it was in the earth, and every herb of the field before it grew: for the LORD God had not caused it

CHAPTER II. Ver. 2. [This signifies that God ceased from his work during the seventh day, having completed it in six days. The whole of the seventh day was a rest, as is stated in the second clause of the verse. P.]

Ver. 3. [Blessed. This is the third recorded blessing, see ch. 1. 22, 28; and when applied to the Sabbath-day, endows it with the gift of peculiar fruitfulness and multiplication of good. The honour or dishonour of the Sabbath has ever been the means and the evidence of a fruitful or barren, a growing or a withering, church. —Seventh. Here commences that remarkable reference to the number SEVEN, that will be found to continue to the end of the Scriptures. Six days of blessed work, closed by a seventh of sanctified rest, is the original week of creation, and well represents every form of perfection exhibited in the subsequent working of God. —Sanctified. This sanctification includes the separation of the day from common uses, and the dedication of it to the service of God. C.]

Ver. 4. [This is the commencement of a new section, and also, as it appears, of a new narrative, to a large extent complete in itself. It is a narrative of creation from a human point of view; whereas the first section of the book contains a narrative of creation from a divine point of view. The first narrative embraces the universe, giving a full account of the origin of the vegetable and animal world. The second is mainly concerned with man, and those things necessary for his support. In the first the divine Being is uniformly called Elohim, a name expressive of infinite power; in the second he is called Jehovah Elohim, expressing power in conjunction with immutability, so as to inspire man with implicit faith. Jehovah is the incommunicable name of God; it is not, and it cannot be, given to another. In our version it is almost universally rendered LORD.—This section terminates with the fourth chapter, and its subject is the history of man from his origin to the end of Cain's posterity. P.]

Ver. 5. God, by his creative power, brought the vegetables at first to perfection through the exercise of his will acting through soil, sun, rain, and other natural causes.—[Plant. The creation and ordering of sun, moon, stars, and earth, are mighty works, not unworthy of omnipotence; but the lowliest plant or herb equally owes its origin and qualities to God: rightly considered, it no less illustrates his wisdom, power, and goodness. There is no difference to God between the formation of a sun and a blade of grass.—Kain. Rivers, springs, rain, and dew, are appropriate emblems of grace. They are formed without man's aid, they are continued

Ver. 28. Pr. 10. 22, 'The blessing of the Lord maketh rich,' i.e. numerous and happy; Ps. 128. 1-4, 'Blessed is every one that feareth the Lord—thou shalt eat the labour of thine hand—thy wife shall be as a fruitful vine, thy children like olive plants round about thy table,' many, healthful, comely, and prosperous; 1 Ch. 26. 4-8. Obed-edom had a large and happy family, for God blessed him. And 1 Ch. 4. 10; Job 42. 12; Ps. 107. 38; Ge. 1. 22; 8. 17.—[The second blessing, adding to the former (ver. 22), conquest over the earth, and universal dominion over the living creatures. C.]

Ver. 29. Ac. 17. 25, 28, 'He giveth all things. In him we live, and move, and have our being;' Ps. 104. 14, 15, 'He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and herb for the service of man, that he may bring forth food out of the earth—wine, and oil, and bread;' Ps. 145. 15, 16, 'The eyes of all wait upon thee, and thou givest them their meat in due season;' 147. 9, 'He giveth to the beast his food;' Pr. 30. 8; Ps. 111. 5; Mat. 6. 11, 25, 26; Ac. 14. 17; Is. 33. 16. But it doth not appear that either men or animals would have eaten flesh during the state of innocence.

Ver. 30. [There is a difference between the food assigned to man and that given to the lower animals. The former had the higher classes of vegetable products—the cereal grain and fruits; the latter had 'every green herb.' There is no mention of animal food having been permitted. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Stand still, my soul, and consider this wonderful work of God! O how his eternal power and Godhead shine forth in forming so vast, so well furnished worlds of creatures, rational and irrational, animate and inanimate! What infinite wisdom appears marked in the vast variety, the comely order, and the mutual subserviency of all things to the good of one another, and to his glory! What goodness, in forming such multitudes of beings to partake of his bounty as their all in all! and especially towards man, in forming him after his own image, and in so preparing this lower world to be a commodious lodging for him in his way to the mansions of light! Let me, then, in all things—in heaven, in earth, in air, in sea, and in land—in grass, in herbs, in trees, in sun, in moon, in stars, in fishes, in fowls, in cattle, and creeping things—in angels and in man—behold the excellences of my God! Let me enjoy God himself in all things, and all things in God! Let me use them all as his property, his product, and for his glory and honour! And notwithstanding my nothingness, confusion, darkness, and deadness, let me hope that my all-creating God—Father, Son, and Holy Ghost—will fashion me, as an abridged world, into a monument of redeeming mercy, to the praise of the glory of his grace! Am I a Christian philosopher? Let me, as I have access, contemplate the creatures of God, in their almost infinitely diversified natures, qualities, and uses! Light and celestial luminaries, in their mysterious nature, extensive range, prodigious but duly proportioned distance, rapid motions, and powerful influences—Air, fixed and unfixed, inflammable and unflammable, in its fluidity, weight, elasticity, and usefulness for forming of wind, promoting of animal life, transmission of light, and the like—Water, in its fluidity, plenteousness, dispersion, saltiness or freshness, penetration, and fitness for forming rains, dews, sea-productions: and for promoting trade and intercourse between nations—Earths, stones, metals, moulds, in their adhesion, ductility, forms, colours, and uses—Vegetables, in their structure, growth, curious parts, almost infinitely diversified forms, colours, and uses—Animals, in their curious parts, connected structure, mysterious life, and dependence on food; their motions in limits, fitness for procreation and self-preservation, beautiful forms, melodious, awful, or plaintive sounds, exquisite and diversified smell and taste: and, along with these, the unlimited divisibility of matter, the laws of air, attraction, gravitation, electricity, magnetism, of muscular motion, and of nervous influences—Rational spirits, in their powers of thinking, willing, recollection, sociality, and union with bodies—as proofs of the existence and manifestations of the mysterious nature and manifold perfections of God, my God in Christ, of whom, through whom, and to whom, are all things. Let me always consider his creatures as memorials of his creating, preserving, and ruling powers, and as means of delightfully and awfully impressing my heart with his presence, observation, and influence! Let me rejoice to view all creatures as formed and fitted for subserving and promoting God's great and principal work of our redemption through Christ, and multitudes of them as instituted emblems of his persons, perfections, relations, and operations, as manifested in it! Let me, by faith, appropriate a particular new covenant-right to and property in them all, in and through Christ as my head and husband, as means of my present and pledges of my future and everlasting enjoyment of God as my ALL IN ALL: as means of exciting and leading me habitually to think on, admire, adore, and live to his glory, while I remain here in his lower sanctuary on earth; and to be always mild and humble, as brother and sister to, and dependent on, the meanest animal, insect, or atom in it!

7 Two things were wanting to the economy of creation at this period—rain to moisten, and man to till the ground. The place of the rain is supplied, according to our translation, by a mist going up by exhalation, and descending again as dew. The Septuagint translate it by a word signifying 'a spring or fountain,' and other high authorities translate it 'a food,' which, rising from the earth, watered the garden. In whatever sense we understand it, Moses ascribes the effect, not to what is commonly called nature, but traces it directly to God.—C.

9 Heb. dust of the ground. 1 The formation of man from dust or earth, rendered incoherent from dryness, and subject to be carried about by every wind, is revealed and recorded as a wonderful example of the work that God can produce from the most unpromising materials; whilst it is no doubt intended to represent all pride, and inculcate humility.—C.

9 We are accustomed to say, a man is dying, just as we say a fire is dying—that is, one part dies, another is following, till finally the whole expires. Just so is man, since the death entered by sin. Every moment of his life, some part of the youngest, and the healthiest is actually dying; and this process goes on till, at last, like the dark perishing in the midst of the ashes its own burning has produced the light of life is extinguished, and man returns to the dust from which he was taken.—C. The peculiar grammatical construction of the Hebrew here—the finite verb being preceded by its own infinitive—gives greater emphasis to the sentence. It conveys the idea of absolute certainty. Spiritual death is inevitable; it took effect immediately upon the act of disobedience.—P.

19 And <sup>out</sup> of the ground the LORD God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air, and brought them <sup>unto</sup> Adam,<sup>2</sup> to see what he would call them: and whatsoever Adam called every living creature, that was the name thereof.

without his help, and they produce, by their diffusion, a universal fruitfulness, which no plan of human wisdom and no combination of human agency could ever possibly effect. Springs (Jn. 4. 14), rivers (Jn. 7. 38), rain (Is. 55. 10), dew (Ho. 4. 5), are appropriate. C.—This clause may be translated, 'No plant of the field was yet in the land, and no herb of the field put forth shoots; for,' &c. The meaning is, that while herbs and plants had been originally formed by an immediate exercise of supernatural power, they were left to propagate and spread naturally. Hence moisture and cultivation were requisite. This explanation appears to be given as introductory to the account of the planting of the garden of Eden, and the arrangements made for its irrigation and culture. P.]

Ver. 7. God, with most exquisite art and skill, formed man's body of the dust, and created, in personal union with it, a rational soul; and so made him a human person, capable of exercising the functions of all sorts of life. Is. 64. 8, 'Lord, thou art our Father; we are the clay, and thou our potter; and we are all the work of thy hand;' Ro. 9. 20; Ps. 100. 3, 'God made us, not we ourselves;' Ps. 139. 14, 15, 'I am fearfully and wonderfully made;' 1 Co. 15. 47, 'The first man is of the earth, earthy;' Job 33. 6, 'I am formed out of the clay;' 4. 19, 'Men dwell in houses (bodies) of clay; their foundation is in the dust;' Job 33. 4, 'The Spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life;' 27. 3, 'The spirit, or breath, of God is in my nostrils;' Zec. 12. 1, 'The Lord formeth the spirit of man within him;' hence he is called (He. 11. 9) 'the Father of spirits;' Nu. 16. 22; 27. 16, 'The God of the spirits of all flesh.'—[From a divine point of view, man is created in the image of God—his soul immortal, his moral nature pure and perfect, his intellect capable of apprehending truth. From a human point of view, he is composed of a body of dust formed from the kindred dust of the earth, and of a living spirit breathed into it by the Creator. P.]

Ver. 8-16. Man being thus formed, the Lord graciously placed him in a garden which was an emblem of the heavenly state, called the paradise of God, Re. 2. 7; in a garden, which himself had planted on the third day, ch. 1. 11; in a garden, eastward from Canaan, in Eden, a spot of pleasure, which probably lay not far from the ancient Babylon, where the rivers Euphrates on the west, and Hiddekel or Tigris on the east, joined into one, and watered the garden; and after running a little southward were parted into the two streams of Gihon on the east and Pison on the west; in a garden decked and enriched with every choice and fruitful vegetable; the principal of which were, the tree of life, so called, because of the invigorating nature of its fruit, and because it was made a sacramental pledge of man's eternal life in heaven, provided he kept the command which God made to him;—and the tree of knowledge of good and evil, so called, because, by the fruit thereof, God tried Adam's obedience, and by the eating thereof man knew the good he had fallen from, and the evil he had fallen into.—[Ver. 8. The topographical notice here, though very brief, is definite. Eden was a large district. The garden was in the eastern part of it. A river flowing through Eden entered the garden; and either in the garden, or after emerging from it, separated into four distinct channels. Two of these bear the names of two well-known rivers, the Euphrates and Tigris; but by no legitimate mode of interpretation can they be identified with those rivers as they now exist. There is no known spot whose physical features accord with the description of the text; it is vain therefore to speculate about the site of Eden. P.—Ver. 9. Tree of life. The tree of life is an emblem of Christ, 'that eternal life that was with the Father, and was manifested to us,' 1 Jn. 1. 2. Knowledge of good, as emanating from obedience; evil, as emanating from disobedience.—Ver. 10. Eden. Nothing with certainty is known of the precise situation of Eden, but two points: that it was situated somewhere on the banks of the Euphrates and Tigris. To the Euphrates Moses refers, ver. 14, as to an object of perfect familiarity to the people whom he was leading from Egypt; and Hiddekel is identified (Da. 10. 4) with the Tigris. The Pison has been supposed to be the Phasis, a river running into the Euxine; the Gihon, to be the Araxes, which runs into the Caspian. This account cannot be received, as it appears from ver. 10 that a single river went out of the garden, which was, in its course, parted into four heads.—Ver. 12. Gold. The Bible is essentially a geographical book, and this is the most ancient specimen of geography on record. Moses, who wrote by divine inspiration, for the instruction of a people familiarly acquainted with working in gold and precious gems, describes the lands watered by the rivers of paradise, by means of these natural productions. God has gifted different lands with different forms of riches, yet exposed every country to some inconvenience or want, and by this means he has provided that, where better principles are wanting, the self-interest of nations shall promote social intercourse and prevent want. The possession and right use of riches is good, it is the love of money that the apostle pronounces 'the root of all evil.' C.—Ver. 13. It may be inferred from this passage, and from the geographical notices in Ge. 10. 6-12, that there was a primeval Cush in Central Asia, and a later Cush (called Ethiopia) in Africa. The former was the original home of the Cushites; the latter was the country to which the great body of the nation migrated, and in which they permanently settled.—Ver. 14. The Hebrew word is radically identical with the modern Arabic name of the Tigris. P.]

Ver. 16, 17. Here we have God entering into a covenant of works with Adam, and with all his natural posterity in him. This is the covenant afterwards published from Sinai, and which gendereth to bondage, Ga. 4. 24. This is the covenant which Adam transgressed, Ho. 6. 7. The breach of this covenant was necessarily supposed by the remedial one, published after the fall, Ge. 3. 15; Ro. 5. 12-21. The annexing of death to a positive command of abstinence from fruit, indifferent in itself, by an infinitely good, gracious, and wise God, inferred likewise the annexing of a glorious reward to his obedience; and in this the form of a covenant consists. The adjoining of the tree of life, and of knowledge of good and evil, to this transaction, as confirmatory seals of life or death; the frequent republication of the moral law, in a covenant form, to men, when they could not keep it as such, Le. 18. 5; De. 27. 26; Mat. 19. 17; Ga. 3. 10, 12; Ro. 10. 5; 3. 27, but especially the crediting of Adam's first sin to his natural posterity Ro. 5. 12-19, plainly establish this point. Here we have the parties of a covenant: God, manifesting his supreme authority, his unbounded goodness, and infinite condescension, on the one hand; and Adam, as without sin and righteous, capable of performing whatever God required, Ge. 1. 26, 27; 5. 1; Ec. 7. 29, and as the common head and representative of all his posterity, Ro. 5. 12-19; 1 Co. 15. 22, on the other.—Here we have a condition required—abstinence from the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, which supposed and implied perfect obedience to the whole law of God written on man's heart, or revealed to him. The end of this covenant being to render mankind happier than the duties of the natural state necessarily entitled them to be, it was proper that some positive institution should be added to the natural laws inscribed on the heart of Adam at his creation, and which might promote obedience to them. This institution, relative to the tree of knowledge, which, being in the midst of the garden, was almost continually in his view, was extremely proper, as it tended, (1) To manifest the high government of God over men, as one who could enact his good will into an exact law. (2) To render Adam's obedience or disobedience, and consequently the justice of God in rewarding or punishing him, more conspicuous, Ro. 3. 4. (3) To

to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field.<sup>3</sup> but for Adam there was not found an help meet for him.

21 And the LORD God caused a 'deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept: and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof.

22 And the rib, which the LORD God had taken from man, made<sup>4</sup> he a woman, "and brought her unto the man.

23 And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman; because she was 'taken out of man.

24 Therefore 'shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife; and they shall be one flesh.

25 And they were both naked, the man and his wife, and were not 'ashamed.<sup>5</sup>

1 The word serpent signifies creeping; and is, in ordinary language, used to describe the manner of progression of a great variety of animals—some venomous, and some innocuous. In seeking the meaning of a scriptural word, we should always have reference, not to common use or representation, but to the Scriptures themselves. Accordingly in Re. 20. 2, we read of 'the dragon, that old serpent, the devil, and Satan'; and consequently, we find that the tempter was called the serpent, not because of employing the form or body of an animal, but because of the subtle, cunning, hidden, and creeping manner in which he effected his wicked purpose.—C.

CHAPTER III.

1 The serpent deceiveth Eve. 6 Man's shameful fall. 9 God arraigneth them. 14 The serpent is cursed. 15 The promised seed. 16 The punishment of mankind. 21 Their first clothing. 22 Their casting out of paradise.

NOW the serpent<sup>1</sup> was more 'subtile than any beast of the field which the LORD God had made. And <sup>b</sup>he said unto the woman, Yea,<sup>2</sup> hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?

2 And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden:

3 But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye 'touch it, lest ye die.

4 And the 'serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die:

5 For God doth know, that in the day ye eat mark that, even in paradise, he held all which he enjoyed of God as his great Creator and Father, and ought to do nothing without his allowance. (4) To be a standing monitor to Adam, that he was fallible, and needed to take heed to his ways, and watch against every spiritual enemy; that he was not come to his full happiness and rest, since, even in paradise, he was under remarkable restraint; that his happiness lay in God himself alone; and that nothing was to be desired, but in submission to his will, and for his sake. (5) To be a summary of the law of nature, by obedience to which he might honour God, loving him with all his heart, soul, mind, and strength, and loving himself, and his posterity as himself. Here is a penalty threatened in case of disobedience—certain, manifold, and dreadful death, viz. (1) Death legal, or a sentence of condemnation fixing upon the covenant-breaker in the very moment he begins to transgress. (2) The execution of this sentence in real death, which is either spiritual, comprehending everything relative to the soul's loss of God's favour and image, and to its defilement and misery in this life, Ro. 1. 28-31; 3. 10-18; 8. 7, 8; Ep. 2. 1, 3, 12; or natural, which comprehends every calamity on the body, and whatever its comfort depends upon in this world, Ge. 3. 16, 19; De. xxviii.; Ec. 12. 7; 2 Pe. 3. 12; or eternal, comprehending all the misery of loss or of pain, to which the lost are for ever subjected in hell, Mat. 25. 41; Re. 14. 10, 11.—In the express annexing of so great a death especially to the breach of the positive part of the law of the covenant, a promise of a life directly opposite as the reward of perfect fulfilment of the condition was implied; comprehending the continuance of the natural and spiritual life, which he had, in all the vigour, comfort, and prosperity of it; and the enjoyment of a more glorious and eternal life in heaven, in consequence of his finishing his course of unflinching obedience. Thus the sum of the covenant was, Mat. 19. 17, 'If thou wilt enter into life eternal, keep the commandments'; Ga. 3. 10, 12, 'The man that doeth these things shall live in them'; 'Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them'; Eze. 18. 4, 'The soul that sinneth, it shall die.' The fruit of the tree of life, as a seal of the covenant, confirmed the promise of life upon condition of perfect obedience; and the fruit of the tree of knowledge confirmed the threatening of death annexed to disobedience. The representation of all Adam's natural posterity in him was most reasonable and kind; as it was the shortest, and, humanly speaking, the safest means of securing their eternal happiness. The whole tenor of this covenant was so highly equitable and gracious, that man's uncorrupted conscience could not but approve of it; his love to himself and his posterity could not but incline him to it; his perfect conformity to the divine image could not but make him consent to whatever terms God proposed, and to receive his favours in a method so answerable to the divine perfections.—[God speaking to the man implies the man's comprehension of God's words; and here we have the first record of human intelligence and language. C.—Ver. 17. We have here the first indication of law. There is implied also the possession, on the part of man, of a moral faculty capable of comprehending that law, and of a will capable of obeying it. P.]

Ver. 18. [A help suitable to man, intellectually, morally, and physically. P.]

Ver. 19. [Their bodies were formed of dust. So far it was a formation, not a creation; but the life was a creation. P.]

Ver. 20. [Gave, Heb. called. It is amazing how answerable their Hebrew names are to their appearance and nature. C.]

Ver. 21-24. God formed the woman of a rib, with the flesh therein, out of Adam's side, to note the wife's equality with her husband, and that she is his companion, and to be treated with the utmost kindness and affection. He brought her to Adam, to honour the institution of marriage, and to teach us that children ought to marry by the disposal or consent of their parents, and all only in the Lord, ch. 2. 21; 24. 4; 28. 2; Ju. 4. 2; 1 Co. 7. 38, 39; Adam accepted her as a help m.e.t. for him, suitable to his nature, acceptable to his person, and useful on all occasions for their mutual comfort and the propagation of their species. And God, by Adam, declared the general law of marriage, requiring the most affectionate cohabitation, inseparable union, and intimate communion during life, as if the parties were but one person. 1 Pe. 3. 1, 7, 'Wives, be in subjection to your husbands. Husbands, dwell with them according to knowledge, giving honour unto the wife as to the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life'; Ep. 5. 22-28, 'Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands as unto the Lord; for the husband is the head of the wife. Let the wives be subject to their own husbands in everything. Husbands, love your wives: as Christ loved the church, and gave himself for it, so ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself.' Ge. 3. 16; 1 Co. 14. 34; 7. 16; Tit. 2. 5; Col. 3. 18, 19; 1 Ti. 5. 8; 2. 11, 12; Mal. 2. 14-16; Mat. 19. 3-9; 1 Co. 7. 14, 15.—[Ver. 23. The 'deep sleep' must have been, in its effects on the whole system, somewhat similar to the state produced by chloroform. The man was unconscious of all that occurred. But it would seem that immediately after awaking the Lord revealed to him what had been done, and at the same time presented the woman. Adam, knowing how she had been formed, and perceiving her complete adaptation to his felt want, exclaimed, with joyful and thankful surprise, 'This, at length, is the very thing; bone of my bone, and flesh of my flesh.' P.]

Ver. 25. They had no cause of shame; as there was neither deformity in their bodies, nor guilt on their consciences, nor any sinful inclination in their hearts.

REFLECTIONS.—In the faith of God's institution and blessing of the Sabbath, let me always observe it as in his sight, ceasing from my own works, as he did from his. Let me never prefer the example of a wicked generation to that of God; nor prefer the pleasures of recreation or sloth, or the profits of carnal labour, to fellowship with, and enjoyment of, God and his blessings. Let my care be to receive out of his fulness, and grace for grace; to remember his mighty works of creation and redemption, and to worship him in the beauty of holiness. How easy is it for him to work, with or without means, as he pleaseth! But O how great his kindness to man! In him the animal and the angelical natures were united; the best of this world was allotted him for his residence; and while its choicest fruits were assigned him for his food, the multitudes of its animal inhabitants were subjected to his dominion and service. A woman, every way perfect, was provided for his comfort, and for the increase of mankind. Nay, God himself entered into familiar fellowship and a gracious covenant with him, in which everlasting happiness was promised to him and his posterity upon the easiest terms. But in this first Adam, as in a figure, do I not behold the second, the Lord from heaven, Jesus the Redeemer? He is indeed the Son of God, the express image of his Father's person; the image of the invisible God; the new thing created in the earth, and the blessed fruit of it, excellent and comely. He, as Mediator, is the great product of Jehovah's counsels, the illustrious ornament and glorious centre of all his works. He is our head and representative in the second and better covenant, established upon better promises. He is our spiritual parent, who communicateth to us his indelible image, and entitles us to all the fulness of God. He is our great Prophet, Priest, and Governor, to whom all things in heaven and earth are subjected for our sake. Having by his blood purchased and by his Spirit planted a gospel-church, he dwells there, and cultivates the same; and having regained the celestial paradise, there we shall be for ever with the Lord. In him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge; and having all life and fruitfulness in his own person, he giveth to us power to eat of himself, the Tree of life. Being by the infinite love of God cast into the deep sleep of suffering and death in this world, his church was formed out of his broken body and pierced side. She is divinely brought and espoused to him; and to her he cleaves, at the expense of once leaving his Father in heaven, and of now leaving his mother, the people of Israel.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 1-6. Serpents in general have a natural subtility beyond other creatures. Mat. 10. 16, 'Be wise as serpents.' But this one had an extraordinary measure of it, being actuated by a fallen angel who had just apostatized from his holy and happy state. Re. 20. 2, 3, 8, 'The dragon, that old serpent, the devil and Satan, goeth out to deceive the nations'; 2 Co. 11. 3, 'The serpent beguiled Eve through his subtility'; Jn. 8. 44, 'The devil was a murderer from the beginning, a liar, and the father of it'; 2 Co. 2. 11, 'We are not ignorant of his devices'; 11. 14, 'Satan is transformed into an angel of light.' In the temptation of our first parents, Satan acted with the utmost subtility. (1) He chose a serpent, which was seemingly simple, but really subtle, and perhaps beautiful, which might make Eve take it for an angel, to be his instrument. (2) He accosted the woman—who perhaps had only heard the terms of the covenant from Adam—in the absence of her husband. (3) According to some, he improved their being more naked than the wild beasts of the earth, to render them discontented with their condition. But thereof, then 'your eyes shall be opened; and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.

6 ¶ And when the woman 'saw' that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant<sup>2</sup> to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise,<sup>3</sup> she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat; and 'gave also unto her husband with her, and he did eat.

7 And the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed<sup>4</sup> fig-leaves together, and made themselves aprons.<sup>5</sup>

8 And they heard the 'voice of the LORD God walking in the garden in the cool<sup>6</sup> of the day: and Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the LORD God amongst the trees of the garden.

9 ¶ And the LORD God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou?

10 And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself.

11 And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree

1 It is hence probable that our first parents avoided to approach or look upon the tree of knowledge of good and evil. God is of purer eyes than to look upon iniquity, Hab. 1.13; man, his image and his servant, must not contemplate sin, Job 31. 1; Ps. 119.37—4.

2 Heb. a desire. 3 The temptation now assumed a triple form. It assailed the appetite—the tree was good for food; the eye—it was pleasant to the eyes; and the intellect which has a natural craving for knowledge—it was 'a tree to be desired to make one wise.' Dazzled and deluded by these new feelings, God and his holy law were for the moment forgotten, and the forbidden fruit was eaten.

6 Or, things to gird about. [The Hebrew word may signify anything that is girded about the person, whether a jacket or small. It is applied to a sword-belt, 1 Sa. 17.39, and to a garment of sackcloth, Is. 15.3.—P.]

7 This is the first instance of a curse; and from the details of its several parts, has no doubt contributed still further than the words serpent to suggest the idea of that animal having been employed as an instrument of the temptation. But if the curse were pronounced against a mere animal, the seed of the woman must bruise his heel. Besides the curse, Satan has a seat at enmity with the seed of the woman, a circumstance totally inapplicable to any mere animal. Let us examine the constituent of his curse, 1. Upon thy belly shalt thou go. This phrase, when applied to Satan, represents that state of abasement under righteous judgment, in which God punishes him.

2. Dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life. This phrase is employed to signify reluctant yielding to a conqueror, as in Ps. 72.9. 3. An unholiness of Satan against the human race, and specially against the seed of the woman. Christ, which unholiness is encountered by a holy enemy in Christ against all evil. 4.

whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat?

12 And the man said, The woman, 'whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat.

13 And the LORD God said unto the woman, 'What is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat.

14 ¶ And the LORD God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed<sup>7</sup> above all cattle, and above every beast of the field: upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life:

15 And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his 'heel.

16 ¶ Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children: and thy desire shall be<sup>8</sup> to thy husband, and he shall 'rule over thee.

The bruising of Satan's head, the seat and emblem of his usurped dominion over the world.—C. m Ge. 49.17. 8 Or, subject to thy husband. n 1 Co. 14.34.

it is more certain that he moved the doubt relative to God's prohibitory charge in such ambiguous terms that it was hard to discern whether he intended merely to ask if God had really forbidden the use of that fruit,—or to insinuate that the forbidding could not be the true God, who had kindly created them but just before,—or to suggest that God was a hard master, who had forbidden them to eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden in which he had placed them. (4) Finding that the woman adhered to the command, he endeavoured to make her believe that the threatening was dark in its meaning, and uncertain or false with respect to its execution. (5) He pretended a great regard for her and her husband's welfare, as if he had been extremely desirous of promoting their knowledge and happiness. (6) Perhaps he pretended that himself had acquired what knowledge he had above other brutes by eating of that prohibited fruit. It is certain he attempted to confirm his contradiction of the threatening by a solemn appeal to God. (7) Having prevailed with the woman, he by her means tempted her husband, who complied, not from any such fondness for her as rendered him willing to transgress with her, but as deceived: and the rather as he saw she did not immediately die upon her eating of the fruit. This sin of our first parents, in eating this forbidden fruit, was exceeding great. It contained, (1) Horrid unbelief to such a degree that the devil, in the form of a beast, was believed in opposition to the solemn declaration of God. (2) The most presumptuous pride, ambition, and bold curiosity; they were in paradise, and lords of the lower world—they knew and enjoyed very much—but nothing would content them but to be as God in knowledge and happiness. (3) The most shocking ingratitude and discontent; God had given them everything proper for convenience and delight—he had made them the lords of animals and earth, the companions of angels—and yet they revolted at the inconsiderable reserve of a tree. (4) The most contemptuous apostasy from and rebellion against God; they renounced his covenant of friendship, and threw off all subjection to and professed dependence on him. (5) In this one act the whole law of God was transgressed. The authority of God, which is the foundation of it, was trampled under foot; the love, which is the complete fulfilment of it, was neglected, and hatred established, Ja. 2. 10. The symbolical law, which was a summary of and a fence to the moral, was expressly contemned and violated. Nay, each of the moral precepts was plainly broken. The aggravations of this sin were no less remarkable. (1) It was committed by persons newly made after the image of God; perfectly without sin, and capable of continuing so. (2) It was committed by them just after he had graciously received them into the most honourable covenant of friendship with himself. (3) It was very early committed, perhaps on the same day they were created, Ps. 49. 12. (4) It was committed against God's most express command, and when they had the fullest warning of the danger thereby incurred to them and their seed. (5) It was committed in paradise, where God dwelt as in his temple; and where everything concurred to proclaim his infinite kindness to mankind, and invite to obedience. (6) It was committed upon a very slight and but one single temptation. (7) It was occasioned by an object of very small importance, which man had no need of in paradise. (8) It respected what had been solemnly separated to the service of God, and so amounted to a sacrilegious robbing of him. In this manner, 1 Ti. 2. 14, 'The woman being deceived, was first in the transgression;' Ro. 5. 12-19, 'By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for, or in whom, all have sinned.—Death reigned over them which had not sinned actually after the similitude of Adam's transgression. Through the offence of one man they are dead.—The judgment was by one to condemnation.—By one man's offence death reigned by one.—By the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation.—By one man's disobedience many were made sinners;' 1 Co. 15. 22, 'In Adam, by his first sin, all die.'—[Ver. 1. The character of the temptation strikingly illustrates the willness of the 'old serpent.' There is nothing at first to awaken suspicion, or to shock the moral sense. There is a sly insinuation calculated to excite natural curiosity. Then there is an assertion embodying a direct lie, combined, however, with just enough of truth to give it plausibility: 'Ye shall not die; for God doth know,' &c. The temptations of Satan still exhibit the same fatal craftiness—the same knowledge of the weakness of human nature.—It will be observed that while by the historian God is called Jehovah Elohim, Satan only uses the one name, Elohim. P.—Ver. 3. Some have supposed that Eve here stated the first untruth, by adding to the commandment of God (ch. 2. 16, 17); but there is no reasonable ground for this charge, as God may have graciously added those other limitations which she here enumerates, though not previously recorded by Moses. C.—Ver. 5. The translation here tends to create a misconception in the mind of the English reader. It would leave the impression that polytheism was already known—'Ye shall be as gods.' The fact is, however, that it is the same Hebrew word which in the first clause of the verse is rendered 'God,' and in the second 'gods.' The proper translation is, 'Ye shall be as God.' P.]

Ver. 7-13. Here we have their wretched evasions after their fall. (1) When their eyes were opened—their consciences being touched with a sense of the heinousness of their sin, whereby they had defiled their souls, and of the greatness of that misery which they had brought upon themselves and their posterity, they began to be ashamed of their nakedness, which they now found to be an occasion of sinful motions and affections; and covered with fig-leaves those parts by which the corruption of nature is propagated, upon which, for that reason, God hath put the deepest impression of shame, that fruit of sin;—and to which he appointed circumcision, the sacrament of remission, regeneration, and mortification, to be applied, ch. 17. 11. (2) When the Son of God, probably in human shape, as a pre-emptive of his future incarnation, came to seek and to save them, they, sensible of guilt and dreading punishment, foolishly sought to hide themselves from him. But 'there is no darkness, nor shadow of death, where the workers of iniquity may hide themselves,' Job 34. 22; Am. 9. 3; Ps. 139. 7-9; Pr. 15. 3; Je. 23. 24. (3) When, to convince them further, he questioned them concerning their conduct, they attempted to excuse themselves, and shift the blame upon their tempters; and, Adam appears inclined to lay the blame of his fault upon God himself, as if he had given him a tempter under the character of an helper for him, Job 31. 33; Pr. 19. 3.—[Ver. 8. 'The voice of the Lord' may signify, as in Ps. 29. 3, some manifestation of his presence in terrible commotion of the elements, which filled the guilty pair with fear; or it may perhaps be the name of the second person of the blessed Trinity, and thus equivalent to the Greek Logos.—'The wind of the day' is in the East the evening, when a cool refreshing breeze always springs up, and makes walking agreeable. P.]

Ver. 14-19. In this condemnation of the criminals, the serpent, which had been only an irrational instrument, is cursed, as a mark of God's high detestation of the crime; as Ex. 21. 28, 29; Le. 20. 15. Perhaps he had formerly moved upon the hinder part of his body, and so was numbered among the wild beasts which eat herbs, and are distinguished from creeping things, ch. 1. 25, 30. But now he and all his kind must henceforth be reckoned most despicable and detestable. They must creep along the earth, take down part of its dust with their food, Is. 65. 25; Mi. 7. 17, and must be the stated objects of the hatred of mankind. But this sentence, directed against the serpent, chiefly respected Satan and his angels. He is cursed above all the irrational animals; is left under the power of invincible folly and malice; and is in disgrace depressed below the vilest of beasts, and appointed to misery, when they have perished in death. He goes on his belly, and eats dust. His actions are base and troublesome to himself: he can never ascend higher than this world. He is trampled under the feet of Christ and his people.

THE ABANA RIVER PASSING THE GARDENS OF DAMASCUS—THE CITY KNOWN TO ABRAHAM. [Genesis, iii:23.]—"Therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the Garden of Eden to till the ground from whence he was taken." In the blooming season, the trees which stand in the Gardens of Damascus are very attractive, because of their great variety and the luxuriance of their foliage and flowers. The Damson or Damascene plum gets its name from growing in the Gardens of Damascus. Here we have the orange, the apricot, the white mulberry, and alternating with these fruit trees, rose bushes and other flowering shrubs stand thick upon the ground. Because of this it is not difficult to persuade one's self that Damascus represents more in a living way the paradise in which our first parents lived for a while, than any other city upon earth. The Garden of Eden was created and perpetuated by the rivers of Mesopotamia, and Damascus is created and kept green by the Abana river.

17 And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it; cursed<sup>1</sup> is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life:

18 Thorns also and thistles shall it bring<sup>2</sup> forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field.

The former attempt of man, ver. 5, was to become as God, and now, lest flaming sword terrors and folly, he again put forth his hand to the tree of life, in hope of living for ever, God drives him from the garden, and by cherubim and a flaming sword intercepts any attempt at return. The tree of life was an emblem of Christ, Ro. 2. 2; the cherubim, winged angelic intelligences and powers, size 10. 5, 7, &c.; and the flaming sword, either an emblem of death in the hand of an angel, Nu. 22. 23, or an angel, so called, according to the words of Paul, He. 1. 7.—C. Nu. 22. 23. Jos. 5. 13. 1 Ch. 21. 16, 17.

His power is restricted to earthly men, or to killing of the bodies of believers—for their souls he cannot kill; nay, their temporal death promotes the destruction of sin in them. He takes such pleasure as he is capable of in seducing reprobates to the basest wickedness, and in vexing the godly with his abominable temptations. God further threatens that the very woman whom he had seduced, and many of her posterity, should, by their free justification and their reconciliation and conversion to God, be made stated enemies to him and his friends, and enabled, through Jesus Christ, to tread on his policy, power, and his life of permitted authority on earth, to his great grief and agony of mind, notwithstanding all he should be able to do to oppose them by temptation or persecution. But the principal part of Satan's curse lay in the ruin brought on him by Jesus Christ, the eminent seed of the woman, in his redemption of mankind. Jesus Christ is called the seed of the woman, not only to import the reality of his manhood, and his close connection with believers—who are also called her seed, as followers of her in faith and holiness—but chiefly to signify that he was none of Adam's natural posterity represented in the covenant of works, and that he would be born of a virgin. He, by fulfilling the broken law—which is the strength of sin—in our stead, by making atonement for sin, and by removing the curse, has undermined the whole power and authority which Satan had over the world as the executioner of God's justice. And as by the word of his power he dislodged him from the bodies of multitudes—and by the word of his grace in the ministration of the gospel did and will expel the worship of him from multitudes of nations; so by the powerful application of his word, Spirit, and blood, to men's consciences and hearts, he casts him and his works down from their throne in them, and by the influences of his grace enables his people to resist the devil, and make him flee from them; and to mortify the deeds of the body that they may live. Thus, 1 Pe. 5. 8, 'Our adversary the devil goeth about seeking whom he may devour;' Job 1. 7, 'Going to and fro in the earth, and walking up and down in it;' Jn. 8. 41, 44, 'Wicked men are of their father the devil, and the lusts of their father they will do;' Ac. 13. 10; 1 Jn. 3. 8, 10; Mat. 13. 38; Ro. 9. 8, 'Only the children of the promise are counted for Eve's seed;' Ga. 4. 29; Pr. 29. 27, 'An unjust man is an abomination to the just; and he that is upright in the way is an abomination to the wicked;' Jn. 15. 18; Mar. 13. 13; but, 1 Jn. 3. 5, 8, 'The Son of God was manifested to take away sin—to destroy the works of the devil;' Is. 7. 14, 'A virgin did conceive, and bring forth a Son—Immanuel;' Da. 9. 24, 26, 'The Messiah shall be cut off, not for himself, but to finish transgression, and make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in an everlasting righteousness;' Ps. 91. 13, 'The lion, adder, and dragon shall be trampled under feet;' Col. 2. 15, 'Having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in his cross;' He. 2. 14, 'That through death he might destroy him that hath the power of death, that is, the devil;' Jn. 12. 31, 'Now shall the devil, the prince of this world, be cast out, of his kingdom and authority in and over men;' Jn. 16. 11; Is. 49. 24-26; Lu. 10. 18, 19; Ro. 16. 20, 'God shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly;' 1 Jn. 2. 13, 'Ye have overcome the wicked one;' 1 Pe. 5. 9; Ja. 4. 7; Ps. 91. 13. While Satan receiveth the ruinous bruise in his head, he bruises the heel of the seed of the woman; that is, he assaults by temptations, stirs up persecution and trouble against the human nature of Christ, and against his people, while they continue on the earth: or their bodies, crushed to the dust of death by his influence, lie in the grave. But at the last day he and his agent death shall be quite overthrown and swallowed up in eternal victory. He. 4. 15; 2 Co. 13. 4; Is. 53. 4, 5; Jn. 16. 33; Ac. 14. 22; Is. 25. 8; 1 Co. 15. 25-57. The woman was condemned to a multitude of sorrows and pains, particularly in the conception, bearing, and bringing up of her children; and to a further degree of subjection to her husband, whom she had overlooked in parleying with the serpent as her instructor. 1 Ti. 2. 12, 15; 1 Co. 7. 28; 14. 34; Tit. 2. 5; 1 Pe. 3. 6; Ep. ii. iv.; Mat. 19. 8, &c. To punish Adam, the proprietor, the whole ground was cursed with respect to its soil and product. The whole lower world, being defiled under its inhabitants, was devoured by the curse, and subjected to the bondage of corruption. Is. 24. 5, 6; Ro. 8. 20-22; Ge. 5. 29; Job 31. 40; He. 6. 8; Je. 12. 13. Himself was condemned to much grief and sorrow. Ps. 127. 2. To eat the herbs of the field, instead of the delicious fruits of paradise; and to be occupied in hard labour in the cultivation of them till he died. 2 Th. 3. 10; Ep. 4. 28; Ec. 1. 1, 2, 13, 14; 2. 11, 17, 21, 26. Thus in these few verses we have a predictory description of the agency and success of Satan the destroyer, and of the incarnation, office, state, and work of Jesus our Redeemer; and in fine, of the whole fate of this lower world, particularly of mankind, from the fall of Adam till the end of time. Nor can any one seriously review the state of the world—of fields, of persons, of families, of churches, or nations, for almost six thousand years past, but he must perceive a constant and exact accomplishment thereof. Nor are the subsequent predictions, whether of mercies or judgments, anything else but a gradual opening and explication of this; the latter always pointing out more clearly and circumstantially what had been contained in the former; nor are the histories aught else but an account of the fulfilment. But one thing is remarkable, that in this declaration of Jehovah now before us the first intimation of a Saviour, and salvation through him for mankind, is not directed to Adam or Eve, but is included in a threatening directed to Satan, plainly intimating that the work of our redemption remarkably aggravates the misery of our original destroyer, and that we are not immediate parties in the covenant of our recovery, nor doth it, either in point of reality or application, depend on our work, but on the blood of Jesus Christ, and the faith we exercise in it. Ro. 5. 20, 21; Ep. 2. 1-8. [Ver. 14. It is worthy of observation here, as elsewhere in Scripture, that the curses consequent upon sin are not pronounced or executed solely upon rational beings; irrational creatures, and even the fruits of the field, and the very earth itself, are visited by divine judgments. The serpent is cursed because Satan had assumed its form when tempting Eve. The earth is cursed because it is the habitation of sinful man—'Cursed is the ground for thy sake.' P.—Ver. 15. Bruise his heel. By coming behind him stealthily, and bruising him through his false followers, Ps. 49. 5; Jn. 13. 18. C.—It is a remarkable proof at once of the wisdom and of the love of God, that the first curse pronounced on account of sin embodied in it the first promised deliverance from sin. The words are prophetic, indicating first, a long and hard struggle between the children of the devil—'thy seed,' and the children of God—'her seed;' and second, a complete victory gained by the GREAT SEED of the woman over Satan—'I shall bruise thy head,' after a conflict. P.]

Ver. 20. Having heard, and perhaps believed, the promise relative to the seed of the woman, Adam gives his wife a new name, importing her being the mother of Jesus, the quickening spirit, and author of eternal life, and of his living members. Jn. 10. 10; 11. 25.

Ver. 21. The Lord, who had taught them to offer animals in sacrifice, as a figure of Jesus' oblation of himself for the salvation of men, taught them to make coats of the skins, as a memorial that by sinfully hearkening to the serpent they had made themselves as the beasts which perish, and that there could be no salvation from shame and danger but by the garment of Jesus' blessed atonement. Is. 61. 10; Ro. 13. 14.

Ver. 22. Perhaps we have here no ironical derision of man's folly in attempting to become wise as God: but God's affectionate lamentation over his ruined condition, and gracious resolution to turn him out of paradise, lest his vain hopes to fortify himself against death, by eating of the tree of life, should tempt him to neglect the great salvation which was offered to him in the covenant of grace. Ro. 9. 30-32; 10. 2, 3.—[One of us. When in ch. 1. 26 God said, 'Let us make man in our image,' the counsel of the DIVINE ELOHIM, or Holy Trinity, in the formation of man is revealed. When in ch. 3. 22 God says, 'The man is become as one of us, to know good and evil,' the word 'us' must refer as in the former case to the Godhead, but who in the Godhead had knowledge of good and evil? even the Son, whose eternal delights were with the children of men (Pr. 8. 31), who loved his people 'before the foundation of the world,' and who in the fulness of time was 'made a curse for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.' The word evil here does not signify moral evil, but that sorrow, toil, and death, inflicted as natural evils, with which alone he that 'knew no sin,' yet who 'bore our griefs, and carried our sorrows,' was acquainted. C.—The plural form of the name of God, Elohim; the expression, 'Let us make man;' and here again the statement, 'The man is become as one of us,' all appear to shadow forth the wondrous doctrine of plurality in unity—three persons, and yet one God.—It would undoubtedly appear from this statement that there was some inherent virtue in the fruit of the tree of life calculated to preserve life indefinitely. It would seem too as if man before the fall was rendered immortal by eating of the tree of life; for if he was created immortal, the tree of life was unnecessary. P.]

Ver. 23, 24. The words used for the turning of man out of paradise import that he was turned out as a divorced woman from the house of her husband, never to be admitted back to a state of happiness under the broken covenant of works. Perhaps while the flaming sword turned every way to keep men from the tree of life, the divine Majesty, as reconciled in Christ, manifested himself between the cherubims, as on his throne of grace, to encourage them to humble and familiar fellowship with himself. He. 4. 16.—[Ver. 24. Heb. The cherubim and the flaming sword which revolved. Cherubim is a plural form, and denotes an order of celestial beings distinct from angels, and apparently higher in dignity. They are represented as closely attached to God, standing beside his throne, and bearing him. Carved figures of cherubim with outspread wings covered the mercy-seat; hence God was said to dwell 'between the cherubim.' The exact form of these figures is unknown; but it has been conjectured

AND Adam knew Eve his wife: and she conceived, and bare<sup>1</sup> Cain, and said, I have gotten a man from the LORD.

2 And she again bare his brother Abel.<sup>2</sup> And Abel was a keeper<sup>3</sup> of sheep, but Cain was a tiller of the ground.

3 And in process of time<sup>4</sup> it came to pass, that Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the LORD.

4 And Abel, he also brought of 'the firstlings of his flock,<sup>5</sup> and of the fat thereof. And the LORD had respect unto Abel and to his offering:

5 But unto Cain and to his offering he had not respect. And Cain was very wroth, and his countenance fell.

6 And the LORD said unto Cain, 'Why art thou wroth? and why is thy countenance fallen?

7 If thou doest well,<sup>6</sup> shalt thou not be accepted?<sup>7</sup> and if thou doest not well, sin<sup>8</sup> lieth at the door.<sup>9</sup> And unto thee<sup>1</sup> shall be his desire, and thou shalt rule over him.

8 ¶ And Cain talked with Abel his brother: and it came to pass, when they were in the field, that Cain rose up against Abel his brother, and 'slew him.

9 And the LORD said unto Cain, 'Where is Abel thy brother? And he said, I 'know not.<sup>2</sup> Am I my brother's keeper?

The comparison of the text with Mat. 24:33 and Ja. 5:9 seems rather to indicate the nearness and unavoidable position of unrepented sin, which, as it were, meets the sinner at the door, whether he goes out or come in, and lies there unmoving, unless he cease to do evil, and learn to do well.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—Be sober, be vigilant, my soul, lest thine adversary the devil get an advantage of thee, and beguile thee through his subtlety. Never encounter him, separated from Jesus, or in thy own strength. Never dally with, but boldly and immediately resist him, and he will flee from thee. Never indulge the smallest doubt of the veracity or importance of what the Lord hath spoken. Let me always be content with such things as I have. It is not in becoming a god, but in enjoying God, as my ALL AND IN ALL, that my happiness consists. In what shame, what misery, sin always issueth!—Behold how the offended majesty of heaven flies on the wings of infinite love and mercy for the immediate relief of self-ruined men, and to proclaim, offer, and bestow upon them redemption through the blood of his Son! But alas! how they flee from him, and by covering their transgression, endeavour even to evade his favours! Blessed Jesus, if thou arraignest me, let me always fly into thy bosom of mercy and kindness; let me gladly entertain thy convictions, and acknowledge my offence, that I may not fall into the condemnation of the devil! Let all the troubles which affect this world call my sin to my remembrance, and deeply affect me with it! Blessed be Jehovah that his only-begotten Son became the seed of the woman, Immanuel, God with us—that he had his heel bruised, travailed in pangs of woe at Love's delivery of a lost world, was made to endure suffering, a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief—was crowned with thorns, and being in an agony did sweat great drops of blood—that dust he was, and to dust he returned—and all for men—all for ME! Let my naked soul put on, not the fig-leaves of my self-righteousness, but his law-magnifying atonement. Bewailing the tremendous fall of my race, and turning my back on the law as the ministration of death, and on this blasted world as emptied of all enjoyments, let me embrace the better covenant, founded on better promises, and seek a better paradise, where not merely angelical cherubims, but divine arms of infinite and everlasting love, shall forever shut me up to the most immediate fellowship of Jesus the Tree of Life, which beareth twelve manner of fruits every month, and whose leaves are for the healing of the nations.

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 1. If Eve thought that in Cain she had gotten THE MAN—JEHOVAH, THE MESSIAH, as the words in the Hebrew may bear, she found herself sadly mistaken.—[Some translate 'I have gotten a man—Jehovah,' and believe that Eve supposed him to be the promised seed, who was to bruise the serpent's head. But the passage will not bear such a rendering. The emphatic word is kanilhi, 'I have gotten'; hence the son was called Cain, which comes from the same root; and the sense of the whole is, 'I have gotten a man from (or with the assistance of) Jehovah.' P.]

Ver. 3. By instruction from God, more or less express, several of the Mosaic rites were practised long before the giving of the law at Sinai; as the distinction between clean and unclean beasts, Ge. 7: 2; priests, altars, burnt-offerings, and drink-offerings, 8: 20; 14: 18; 22: 13; 35: 14; abstinence from blood, 9: 4; oil for consecration, 28: 18; 35: 14; marriage of brothers' widows, 38: 8, 9, 20.

Ver. 4. He. 11:4. 'By faith—as to the divine appointment, of which their father had informed them, and by faith in the promised Messiah, signified thereby—Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain; (perhaps more proper in its matter, and certainly so in its manner), by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts.' Perhaps the Lord testified his respect by consuming his sacrifice with fire from heaven, as in the case of Aaron, Le. 9: 24; Gideon, Ju. 6: 21; David, 1 Ch. 21: 26; Solomon, 2 Ch. 7: 1; and Elijah, 1 Ki. 18: 38.

Ver. 5-15. Full of rage against God and his brother, Cain's looks became sour, dejected, envious, and angry. To convince him of his fault, God showed him that it was his own want of faith and sincerity which hindered his acceptance; and that, if he did not repent, his sin would quickly subject him to punishment; and that in temporals Abel continued as subject to him and was as affectionate as ever. While they talked in the field, Cain, still enraged in his heart, murdered his righteous brother on account of his piety, Ps. 55: 21; 1 Jn. 3: 12. Abel's blood cried to God for just vengeance upon Cain, He. 12: 24. God, notwithstanding Cain's denial and insulting pretence that he had given him no charge of his brother, condemned him to punishment, and cursed the fields which he should cultivate into a further degree of barrenness, Ps. 9: 12. Cain never lamented the heinousness of his sin, but complained that it could not be pardoned, and that his punishment was too great; and that now everybody would be ready to kill him, as the public enemy of mankind, and devoted of God to destruction. But God marked him with some visible token, and denounced a still heavier vengeance against the person who should kill him. Thus, Job 18: 11; 15: 20-24. Terrors made him afraid on every side, and drove him to his feet. He travelled in pain all his days, &c.—Le. 26: 17, 36. 'But God slew him not, lest his people should forget,' Ps. 59: 11.—[Ver. 5. Why was this? The apostle Paul replies, 'By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent (literally, a fuller) sacrifice than Cain.' The faith was shown in the nature of the offering. Cain's was an acknowledgment of God's sovereignty—it was the offering of a Deist. Abel's, in addition, was an acknowledgment of guilt, of the necessity for an atonement—it was the offering of a humble, conscience-stricken sinner. P.—

Ver. 7. Rule over him. There is no cause for jealousy, for Abel, though specially honoured of God, is still ready to obey Cain, as his elder brother. C.—

This very obscure sentence appears to be connected with what immediately precedes—'Sin lieth at the door.' Sin is personified. Cain is represented as making it his slave, and employing it to execute his own wicked purposes; and the result is the murder of Abel. P.—Ver. 8. Field. The field, and not the altar of worship, as painters frequently represent, is mentioned as the scene of this melancholy transaction. Does not this suggest the probability that the immediate occasion of quarrel was some division of the land, becoming necessary in consequence of the different occupations of the brothers—pasturage and tillage?—

begat Mehujael: and Mehujael begat Methusael: and Methusael begat Lamech.<sup>2</sup>

19 ¶ And Lamech took unto him two wives:<sup>3</sup> the name of the one was Adah, and the name of the other Zillah.

20 And Adah bare Jabal: he was the father<sup>4</sup> of such as dwell in tents, and of such as have cattle.

21 And his brother's name was Jubal: he was the father<sup>5</sup> of all such as handle the harp and organ.

22 And Zillah, she also bare Tubal-cain, an instructor<sup>6</sup> of every artificer in brass and iron: and the sister of Tubal-cain was Naamah.<sup>7</sup>

23 And Lamech said unto his wives, Adah and Zillah, hear my voice; ye wives of Lamech, hearken unto my speech: for I have slain a man to my wounding, and a young man to my hurt.<sup>8</sup>

24 If Cain shall be avenged seven-fold, truly Lamech seventy and seven-fold.<sup>9</sup>

25 ¶ And Adam knew his wife again; and she bare a son, and called his name Seth:<sup>1</sup> For God, said she, hath appointed me another seed<sup>2</sup> instead of Abel, whom Cain slew.

26 And to Seth, to him also there was born a son; and he called his name Enos:<sup>3</sup> then began men to call upon the name of the LORD.<sup>4</sup>

Ver. 15. Sevenfold. Why was not Cain sentenced to death, according to Ge. 9. 6? Simply because his crime, however aggravated, was not murder, but manslaughter. C.]

Ver. 19. Contrary to God's original institution of marriage, and the stated equality preserved by his providence among the males and females of mankind, Lamech, the descendant of Cain, to gratify his intemperate lust, first took a plurality of wives, and introduced a custom which still remains in many places of the world; and with which not a few of the pious Hebrews, inadvertent to the sinfulness thereof, complied; Ge. xvi. xxix.; 2 Sa. iii. v. 1 Ki. xi., &c. But Christ fully laid open the iniquity of this practice, and restored marriage to its original form: Ge. 2. 18-24; Mal. 2. 14, 15; Mat. 19. 8.

Ver. 20. [Houses were of earlier origin than tents. The tent is here connected with the keeping or rearing of cattle as a trade. The reason of this will be apparent to those acquainted with the East. Large flocks require a constant supply of grass throughout the year. This cannot be had in one locality. Shepherds therefore must move from place to place—southward in winter, northward in summer. A wandering life requires a movable habitation; hence the necessity for, and the invention of, the tent. P.]

Ver. 23, 24. To deter his wives from hurting him, or to render them fearless of his being hurt by others, he boasts that he was well able to take care of himself; and that God, who took so much care of Cain, would certainly take much more care of his life, who had never been a murderer. Perhaps for this purpose he puts it to them as a question, 'Have I slain a man to my wounding, or a young man to my hurt?' &c.

Ver. 26. The professors of the true religion, descended from Seth or others, called themselves the children of God, as a mark of distinction from the profane descendants of Cain; and they set up or re-established the more public and solemn worship of God on the Sabbath, or on other occasions.—[It is evident from this passage that at the birth of Enos some remarkable change took place in the manner in which the people of God paid their homage to the divine Being. It would seem that hitherto the worship had been chiefly ritualistic—by sacrifices and oblations; and that this had largely degenerated into a cold and heartless formalism. Now, however, the true nature of God, as expressed by the name JEHOVAH, began to be fully apprehended; and the consequence was that spiritual worship was given to him—'Then it was begun to invoke the name of Jehovah.' The phrase is impersonal. In the Hebrew there is no equivalent to 'men.' The mode of invocation was doubtless by prayer, both private and social; and God was invoked as JEHOVAH—the immutable, promising, and faithful God. The descendants of Cain devoted themselves to the pursuit of the arts and sciences, but the children of Seth rose to a true sense of man's dignity as an accountable and immortal being. They saw that God was a Spirit; and they worshipped him in spirit and in truth. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Let me believe the promise of God; but never sinfully hasten to obtain the promised blessing, lest I grasp a devil, a murderer, instead of the great God my Saviour! Never let me partially esteem children, or anything else, lest what I regard become the plague of my soul, or my house; while what I condemn as vanity be highly favoured of the Lord! Let me train up my children betimes in proper callings, and especially in the fear and service of God! Let me always honour the Lord with the best I possess, ever remembering that 'without faith it is impossible to please him!' If he show a superior regard to others, never let my eye be evil because he is good, but let me ascribe righteousness to him, and take to myself shame and confusion of face! But how great is the strength of enraged natural corruption! Nothing is so base, so impious, so unnatural, but it will attempt it. How fearful for guilty transgressors to fall into the hands of a just God! No falsehood can deceive him, nor force withstand him. Nor can all the carnal expedients on earth relieve a conscience divinely charged and burdened with guilt. Never let me envy the prosperity of the wicked, their cities erected, their numerous and thriving families, their artful inventions, or pleasures of sense! But when Jesus adds to his church, or reforms the worship of it, let me rejoice thereat. Meanwhile, in the name, the employ, the sacrifice, and death of Abel, let me behold Jesus appearing in the likeness of sinful flesh, and sullied with the vilest reproach!—Jesus, as the great Shepherd of his Father's church:—Jesus, as the faithful offerer of himself unto God for a sacrifice of a sweet-smelling savour:—Jesus, the hatred and murder of whom, by his brethren the Jews, issued in the curse of their country, the rejection of their church, and the scattering and misery of their nation, as a lasting monument of the justice of heaven!

CHAPTER V. Ver. 3. Seth was begotten, not in the image of God, in which Adam had been created, but in the image of fallen Adam, that is, with tendencies to evil in him. 'He was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did his mother conceive him,' Ps. 51. 5. 'A child of disobedience—by nature a child of wrath, even as others,' the profane descendants of Cain not excepted, Ep. 2. 2, 3.—What was born of flesh, corrupted parents, was flesh infected with sinful corruption, Jn. 3. 6; Job 14. 4. Observe: believing parents produce children according to their nature, not according to their grace.

Ver. 22-24. The pure use of conjugal life does not hinder the strictest practice of holiness. Amidst all the cares and pleasures of a family, Enoch walked with God as his intimate and glorious Friend and Companion, who manifested to him his amiable perfections in their new-covenant form, and bestowed his gracious blessings and influences upon him, Mi. 6. 8; Ge. 6. 9. He walked after God, imitating him as his perfect and engaging pattern, and always dependent on his drawing and

THE PILGRIMS—TENTING IN THE CITY WHERE CHRIST WAS BROUGHT UP. [Genesis, iv:20.]—"He was the father of such as dwell in tents." In the twentieth verse of the fourth chapter of Genesis, tents are mentioned for the first time in the Bible. Many people continue to live in tents in Palestine, and the tents used by the natives to-day do not vary much from such as were used in the early history of the country. They are woven of goat's hair and last a long time. The picture given above is of the traveling tent used by the parties who were sent to Bible lands to get the pictures of Bible places which illustrate this work. This modern tent, with apartments, carpets, iron bedsteads, and every convenience necessary to comfort, is as far from the tents of the Bedouins in Palestine, as Western civilization is from the primitive civilization of the sons of the desert. The modern tent we here see stands in Nazareth, near the Greek Church, and just above the Fountain of the Virgin.

1 The wickedness of the world, which provoked God's wrath, and caused the flood. 8 Noah findeth grace. 14 The order, form, and end of the ark.

AND it came to pass, when men<sup>3</sup> began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them,

2 That the sons of God<sup>4</sup> saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose.

3 And the LORD said, My Spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh: yet his days<sup>5</sup> shall be an hundred and twenty years.

4 There were giants<sup>6</sup> in the earth in those days; and also after that,<sup>7</sup> when the sons of supporting grace, De. 13: 4; Ca. 1: 4; 8: 5. He walked before God, as his Master, Witness, and future Judge, always deeply impressed with a lively sense of his authority, presence, and purity, ch. 17: 1; 24: 40; Ps. 16: 8; 116: 9. He walked worthy of the Lord, fruitful in every good word and work, answerable to what God was to him, and had done or had promised to do for him, Col. 1: 10,—answerable to his clear foresight of the future judgment, Jude 14, 15; 2 Pe. 3: 11, 14. He walked in Christ, living by faith on him, and through the grace of God 'denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, and living soberly, righteously, and godly,' Col. 2: 6; Ga. 2: 20; Tit. 2: 11, 12. Publicly to approve and reward his holiness, and to render him a type of Christ's ascension, and a pledge of the complete and eternal glorification of the saints, God took him out of this world to heaven, both soul and body: He. 11: 5, 'By faith Enoch was translated, that he should not see death, and was not found on earth, for God had translated him to heaven; for he had this testimony—that He pleased God.'—[Ver. 22. There is a peculiarity in the Hebrew word here. It has the article; 'Enoch walked with the Elohim.' Probably this may be intended to show that idolatry was already practised, and that false gods were worshipped by many. Enoch devoutly worshipped and faithfully followed the true God. P.]

Ver. 29. Noah brought rest and comfort by the building of his ark, in which the seminary of both the world and church did rest and was saved, Ge. vii. viii. ix. And by his inventions in husbandry he freed men from much of their toil occasioned by the curse on the ground. Ge. 9: 20 with 3: 17, 18. And, as a type and a preacher of righteousness, he was a mean of directing them to everlasting rest and consolation in Christ, 1 Pe. 3: 18-20.—[Moses does not mention that Enoch was a prophet, but this information was supplied by Jude 14. So Moses does not expressly say of Lamech (not the son of Cain of the same name, but of Methuselah) that he was a prophet. Yet the name Noah, which he gives to his son, signifying rest or comfort, intimates a prophetic foresight of the work he was destined to accomplish in the salvation of the church by water (He. 1: 7; 1 Pe. 3: 20, 21), at the very time when his faith condemned, and water destroyed an unbelieving and rebellious world. C.]

Ver. 32. Japheth was the eldest of Noah's sons, ch. 10: 21. and Ham the youngest, ch. 9: 24: but Shem is first mentioned, because of his piety, and his being one of the Messiah's progenitors, and because his posterity are the principal subject of Moses' writings; for the same reason Abram, though born sixty years later than Haran, is put first in the family of Terah, ch. 11: 26 with 12: 4. In the early ages of the world Providence wisely ordered it that people should live long, for the speedy replenishing of the world, and for the more effectual propagation of the true religion and other useful knowledge; and, no doubt, the superior wholesomeness of the air, and of their diet, and their temperance in the use of it, contributed to promote this longevity.

REFLECTIONS.—Whilst I read, let me with deep concern cry out, 'How is the gold become dim, and the most fine gold changed!' Behold how death reigns, through sin, from Adam to Noah; and how sure, though sometimes slowly, it strikes! Ah! what a nothing must I, my age, and all my labours be in his sight, before whom the long, long lives of ten patriarchs and replenished world make so insignificant a figure! To be born, to breathe, to rear up a family, and give up the ghost, how mean! Yet this is all of man! and how few, in a replenished world, are worthy of God's love! Let therefore Enoch, who walked with God,—or rather Jesus, the dedicated servant of God,—Jesus, who set the Lord always before him, and did always the things which pleased the Father—Jesus, who foretold the breaking forth of the floods of wrath upon Judah, and the world of the ungodly—Jesus, who clearly predicted the last judgment, and the procedure in it, and who, 'having by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high'—be my pattern in life, and my forerunner to glory! And let him be my rest and consolation to comfort me from all my enjoyments, to afford security and rest through all my trials, till he bring me to his new world of righteousness and glory!

CHAPTER VI. Ver. 1, 2. The descendants of Cain, or other profane persons who had joined them, are here called men, because they had quite cast off all regard to God and his ways; and the professors of the true religion are called the sons of God—they had a visible relation to him, lived in his church, and professed to be born from above, and to be ready to yield a cheerful and evangelical obedience to his commands, ch. 4: 26; De. 14: 1; 2 Co. 6: 18. These wantonly gazed on the daughters of Cain, who seem to have been extremely handsome and jovial, Ju. 14: 1; 2 Pe. 2: 14; Mat. 5: 28; and, regardless of God's direction or allowance, they followed their fancies, and married them. Such unequal marriages of professors with the carnal and profane are expressly prohibited by the law of God, and have been a common plague to families, nations, and churches, 1 Co. 7: 39; 2 Co. 6: 14, 15; Mal. 2: 11; De. 7: 3, 4; Ex. 34: 16; Jos. 23: 12; Ge. 24: 3; 26: 34, 35; 27: 46; 28: 1, 2; xxxviii.; 2 Sa. 3: 3; with 13: 28, 29; xv.; 1 Ki. xi.; Ezr. 9: 1-3, 12; Ne. 13: 24-27.

Ver. 3. God's Spirit strove with them by his inward good motions, by the checks which he caused their consciences to give them, and by the counsels and warnings given them by Noah, the preacher of righteousness, or others, 1 Pe. 3: 18, 19; 2 Pe. 2: 5; Ne. 9: 30. They were flesh, not only frail and weak in their nature, but exceedingly and obstinately corrupt, carnal, and sensual in their heart and life—under the reign of actual sin, which is called flesh, Ro. 8: 1, 4, 7, 8; Jude 19—and mad on practising the manifest works of the flesh: adultery, fornication, &c., Ga. 5: 19-21.—[The action of the divine Spirit upon inert matter is mentioned in ch. 1: 2—he originated motion. His action upon man is here indicated. He strives with his sinful nature by internal, moral suasion; or, as it is called, the voice of conscience. God left man to himself; he 'gave them over to a reprobate mind,' Ro. 1: 28. The doctrine of the Holy Spirit is thus developed in the opening chapters of the Bible. P.]

Ver. 4. These giants, or huge-bodied men, in the pride and confidence of their stature and strength, became despisers of God and goodness, and oppressors of mankind.—[The Hebrew word nephilim ('giants') occurs only in one other passage (Nu. 13: 33), and there it is unquestionably used to denote men of extraordinary stature:—'There we saw the nephilim, the sons of Anak, who came of the nephilim, and we were in our own sight as grasshoppers, and so we were in their sight.' The statement of the sacred writer is strikingly corroborated by eastern tradition. The nephilim existed previous to the mixed marriages; and were therefore a different race from the 'mighty men—men of renown.' P.]

Ver. 5. Je. 17: 9, 10, 'The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked. I, the Lord search the heart, and try the reins, to give to every man according to his works;' Ro. 8: 7, 'The carnal mind is

God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown.<sup>7</sup>

5 And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination<sup>8</sup> of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually.<sup>9</sup>

6 And it repented the LORD that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart.<sup>1</sup>

7 And the LORD said, I will destroy man, whom I have created, from the face of the earth, both man and beast,<sup>2</sup> and the creeping thing, and the fowls of the air: for it repenteth me that I have made them.

8 ¶ But Noah found grace in the eyes of the LORD.

11 The earth also was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence.

12 And God looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt: for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth.

8 Or, the whole imagination. The Hebrew word signifies not only for imagination, but also the purposes and desires.

9 Heb. every day.

1 We must remember in interpreting this passage that language is intended to express human ideas. When used to describe the attributes, nature, or acts of God, it must not be interpreted in its exact literality. The repentance of God is not the same as the repentance of man. It undoubtedly expresses some process of the Eternal Spirit—a process, too, in a measure analogous to what we call repentance, but which is, at the same time, in perfect harmony with the eternity of the divine purpose. We cannot understand it, for it is beyond the range of our intellect.—P.

The Septuagint translators have declined to fix its meaning in Greek, perhaps for want of a correspondent word. ## CHAPTER VII.

1 Noah, with his family, and the living creatures, enter into the ark. 17 The beginning, increase, and continuance of the flood.

AND the LORD said unto Noah, Come thou, and all thy house, into the ark: for thee have I seen righteous before me in this generation.

enmity against God, and is not subject to his law, neither indeed can be; Mat. 15. 19, 'Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies;' Ps. 58. 3, 'The wicked are estranged from the womb; they go astray as soon as they are born;' 53. 1-3, 'The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. Corrupt are they, they have done abominable iniquity. God looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, that did seek God. Every one of them is gone back, they are altogether become filthy; there is none that doeth good, no, not one;' Ps. 14. 1-4; Is. 1. 2-6; Ho. 4. 1, 2; Mar. 7. 21-23; Ro. 1. 28-31; 3. 10-19; 8. 8; Ga. 5. 19-21; Ep. 2. 1-3; Tit. 3. 3.

Ver. 6, 7. God's repentance denotes not any change of his purpose or will within himself. In this respect he is unchangeable, and cannot repent, Mal. 3. 6; Nu. 23. 19; 1 Sa. 15. 29; Ja. 1. 17. But it denotes the change of his providence correspondent with his fixed purpose, 1 Sa. 15. 11; Ps. 106. 45; Je. 18. 10; De. 32. 36; Ho. 11. 8. It is a word suited to our capacity; and here it denotes God's detestation of sin, and his fixed resolution to punish it, after man had made himself quite another thing than God had made him at first.

Ver. 8. To find grace in the eyes of the Lord, is to be freely loved and delighted in by him, in order to preservation from some remarkable destruction, or to the bestowal of some distinguished blessing, Ge. 19. 19; Ex. 33. 12, 13; 2 Sa. 15. 25; Lu. 1. 30; Ac. 7. 46; 2 Ti. 1. 18; He. 4. 16; thus Pr. 8. 35, 'Whoso findeth Christ findeth life, and shall obtain favour of the Lord;' 12. 2. 'A good man obtaineth favour of the Lord;' 3. 4; 18. 22.

Ver. 9. Noah was a just man, justified by faith in the blessed righteousness of Christ: Hab. 2. 4; He. 11. 7; Ro. 1. 17; 3. 22, 24; 5. 1; 8. 33; Ro. 5. 19, 'By the obedience of one (Christ) shall many be made righteous;' 2 Co. 5. 21, 'For God made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him;' Is. 14. 24, 25; Je. 23. 6; 33. 16; Phi. 3. 9. He was perfect, upright, and sincere, a man of great integrity and godly sincerity, having his heart wholly consecrated for God, entire in his obedience to all God's commandments, and watchfully keeping himself unspotted from the world, as ch. 17. 1; De. 18. 13; Job 1. 1, 8; Ps. 37. 37; 119. 1, 5, 6; Pr. 2. 21; Mat. 5. 48; Lu. 8. 15; 2 Co. 13. 11; 2. 9; Ep. 4. 11, 12; Phi. 3. 15; Col. 1. 28; 2 Ti. 3. 17; He. 13. 21; 1 Pe. 5. 10; Re. 3. 2; Lu. 1. 6, 'Righteous before God, and walking in all the commandments of the Lord blameless;' 2 Co. 1. 12, 'In simplicity and godly sincerity, not with fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of God, we have had our conversation in this world.' Noah was perfect in his generation, amidst men extremely wicked, and notwithstanding their evil counsels, examples, and persecutions. Phi. 2. 15, 'Be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world;' 1 Pe. 2. 15, 'That with well-doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men;' 3. 16.—[We have apparently another ancient document commencing here in the usual form, 'These are the generations,' &c.; see ch. 2. 4; 5. 1; 10. 1; 11. 10, &c. Let it be observed that two distinct Hebrew words are translated 'generations' in this verse. The first signifies 'families,' or 'race,' while the second signifies 'the period of a man's life.' Noah was a perfect man in his period or age. P.]

Ver. 11. Multitudes of the most enormous sins abounded among all ranks, and were committed before

God in an open and presumptuous manner; without any fear of him; nay, in defiance to his justice. So the wickedness of Nimrod and the Sodomites was committed, ch. 10. 9; 13. 13; 19. 13.

Ver. 13. The end of all flesh is come before me. The time for the destruction of mankind and animals, fixed in my purpose, is near at hand; as Je. 51. 13; Eze. 7. 2, 3, 6; Am. 8. 2.

Ver. 22. He. 11. 7, 'By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear of the approaching flood, and notwithstanding manifold scoffs from his neighbours, prepared an ark to the saving of his house.'

REFLECTIONS.—Behold the dreadful fruits of professors' intimacy and matrimonial connections with the carnal and profane! How sin transforms this world into a kind of hell, filled with corruption, wickedness, and disorder! Behold how quickly it ripens it for a destructive deluge of divine wrath! How long and how patiently God bears with the manners of these monsters of impiety, after they seem ripened for ruin! But how sad their case when his Spirit ceaseth to strive with their consciences for their conversion and reformation! What a blessing are upright saints in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation! How highly regarded and honoured of God! And what distinguished means of preserving families, nations, churches, or even the world, from utter ruin!

CHAPTER VII. REFLECTIONS.—Behold, my soul, the goodness and severity of God! His goodness—in saving the man whom his own grace had qualified for that mercy—in saving others, even the wicked part of his family, for his sake—in saving the brute animals in proportion to their serviceableness to man,

2 Of every clean beast thou shalt take to thee by sevens, the male and his female; and of beasts that are not clean by two, the male and his female.<sup>4</sup>

3 Of fowls<sup>5</sup> also of the air by sevens, the male and the female; to keep seed alive upon the face of all the earth.

4 For yet seven days, and <sup>4</sup>I will cause it to rain upon the earth forty days and forty nights; and every living substance that I have made will I destroy<sup>6</sup> from off the face of the earth.

5 And Noah did according unto all that the Lord commanded him.

6 And Noah was six hundred years old when the flood of waters was upon the earth.

7 ¶ And Noah went in, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons' wives with him, into the ark, because of the waters of the flood.

8 Of clean beasts, and of beasts that are not clean, and of fowls, and of every thing that creepeth upon the earth, 9 There went in two and two unto Noah into the ark, the male and the female, as God had commanded Noah.

10 ¶ And it came to pass after seven days,<sup>7</sup> that the waters of the flood were upon the earth.

11 In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, the seventeenth day of the month, the same day<sup>8</sup> were all the fountains of the great deep broken up, and the windows<sup>9</sup> of heaven were opened.<sup>1</sup>

12 And the rain was upon the earth forty days and forty nights.

13 In the self-same day entered Noah, and Shem, and Ham, and Japheth, the sons of Noah, and Noah's wife, and the three wives of his sons with them, into the ark:

14 They, and every beast after his kind, and all the cattle after their kind, and every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind, and every fowl after his kind, every bird of every sort.<sup>2</sup>

15 And they went in unto Noah into the ark, two and two of all flesh, wherein is the breath of life.

16 And they that went in, went in male and female of all flesh, as God had commanded him: and the Lord shut him in.

17 ¶ And the flood<sup>3</sup> was forty days upon the earth; and the waters increased, and bare up the ark, and it was lift up above the earth.

18 And the waters prevailed, and were in-

It is mentioned in 2 Ki. 19. 37; Is. 37. 38; but in both places the Authorized Version has 'Armenia.' It is a mountainous region, the highest peak in it being the traditional Ararat, which has an elevation of 17,122 ft. The great elevation of this region made it a natural resting-place for the ark; and its geographical position, affording easy outlets by fertile valleys to all quarters of the globe, fitted it in a remarkable manner for the impartial distribution of the primeval races.—P.

creased greatly upon the earth; and the ark went upon the face of the waters.

19 And the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth; and all the high hills that were under the whole heaven were covered.

20 Fifteen cubits<sup>4</sup> upward did the waters prevail; and the mountains were covered.

21 ¶ And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man:

22 All in whose nostrils was the breath of life,<sup>5</sup> of all that was in the dry land, died.

23 And every living substance was destroyed which was upon the face of the ground, both man, and cattle, and the creeping things, and the fowl of the heaven; and they were destroyed from the earth:<sup>6</sup> and Noah only remained alive, and they that were with him in the ark.

24 And the waters prevailed upon the earth an hundred and fifty days.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The waters assuage. 4 The ark resteth on Ararat. 7 The raven and the dove. 15 Noah, being commanded, 18 goeth forth of the ark. 20 He buildeth an altar, and offereth sacrifice, 21 which God accepteth, and promiseth to curse the earth no more.

AND God remembered Noah, and every living thing, and all the cattle that was with him in the ark: and God made a wind to pass over the earth, and the waters assuaged:

2 The fountains also of the deep, and the windows of heaven, were stopped, and the rain from heaven was restrained:

3 And the waters returned from off the earth continually;<sup>7</sup> and after the end of the hundred and fifty days the waters were abated.

4 ¶ And the ark rested in the seventh month, on the seventeenth day of the month, upon the mountains<sup>8</sup> of Ararat.<sup>9</sup>

5 And the waters decreased continually<sup>1</sup> until the tenth month: in the tenth month, on the first day of the month, were the tops of the mountains seen.

6 ¶ And it came to pass at the end of forty days, that Noah opened the window<sup>2</sup> of the ark which he had made:

7 And he sent forth a raven, which went forth to and fro,<sup>3</sup> until the waters were dried up from off the earth.

8 Also he sent forth a dove from him, to see if the waters were abated from off the face of the ground:

9 But the dove found no rest for the sole of in adding seven days' space of repentance to the wretched profligates who had abused the former reprieve of 120 years, and, after all, bringing the flood gradually on them, for their awakening, and to give them still further space to repent! But let me tremble at his righteous judgments! How the clouds from above, the wells from below, so long beneficial to mankind, now concur to destroy them! What multitudes who had despised his warnings now perish by his hand! And how ineffectual is every attempt to escape! While the ark of God's testament, his new covenant, is open, let me escape thither for my life, and bring with me, of my fellow-sinners, all whom I can. The day is at hand when the earth and the works thereof shall be burned up, and the door of mercy for ever shut. God forbid that I should be among those multitudes who shall then be shut out into outer darkness, where there is weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth!

CHAPTER VIII. Ver. 1. God's remembering persons or things denotes his manifesting his notice of them, either in a way of mercy for their deliverance or benefit, according to his promise, as here, and ch. 19. 29; 30. 22; Ex. 32. 13; Ne. 13. 14, 22; Job 14. 13; Ps. 132. 1; 106. 4; 136. 23; or in a way of wrath for their punishment, Ps. 137. 7; Am. 8. 7; Re. 16. 19; 18. 5.

Ver. 12. [It is important to note the periods of seven days which are repeatedly mentioned in this narrative. They indicate that the creation week still regulated the smaller divisions of time, and that the Sabbath was observed by the family of Noah. P.]

Ver. 14. [It thus appears that the rain continued forty days, the waters prevailed during one hundred and fifty her foot, and she returned unto him into the ark; for the waters were on the face of the whole earth.<sup>4</sup> Then he put forth his hand, and took her, and pulled her<sup>5</sup> in unto him into the ark.

10 And he <sup>6</sup>stayed yet other seven days, and again he sent forth the dove out of the ark:

11 And the dove came in to him in the evening; and, lo, in her mouth was 'an olive-leaf<sup>6</sup> plucked off. So Noah knew that the waters were abated from off the earth.

12 And he <sup>7</sup>stayed yet other seven days, and sent forth the dove, which returned not again unto him any more.

13 ¶ And it came to pass in the six hundredth and first year,<sup>7</sup> in the first month, the first day of the month, the waters were dried up from off the earth; and Noah removed the covering of the ark, and looked, and, behold, the face of the ground was dry.

14 And in the <sup>8</sup>second month, on the seven and twentieth day of the month, was the earth dried.

15 ¶ And God spake unto Noah, saying,

16 Go<sup>8</sup> forth of the ark, thou, and thy wife, and thy sons, and thy sons' wives with thee.

17 Bring forth with thee every living thing that is with thee, of all flesh, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth; that <sup>9</sup>they may breed abundantly in the earth, and be fruitful, and multiply upon the earth.

18 And Noah went forth, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons' wives with him:

19 Every beast, every creeping thing, and every fowl, and whatsoever creepeth upon the earth, after their kinds,<sup>8</sup> went forth out of the ark.<sup>9</sup>

the original is here

very expressive. The

to JEHOVAH, Noah's offering consisted of

species of clean animals which he had taken into the ark.

He, besides, as the Hebrew word signi-

victims being wholly consumed upon the altar. Noah thus, while expressing gratitude for his deliverance, devoted all

CHAPTER IX.

1 God blesseth Noah. 4 Blood and murder are forbidden. 8 God's covenant, 13 signified by the rainbow. 18 Noah replenisheth the world, 20 planteth a vineyard, 21 is drunken, and mocked of his son, 25 curseth Canaan, 26 blesseth Shem, 27 prayeth for Japheth, 29 and dieth.

AND God <sup>5</sup>blessed Noah and his sons, and said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth.

2 And <sup>6</sup>the fear of you, and the dread of you, shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon every fowl of the air, upon all that moveth upon the earth, and upon all the fishes of the sea: into your hand are they delivered.

3 Every moving thing that liveth shall be meat<sup>5</sup> for you; even as the 'green herb<sup>6</sup> have I given you all things:

4 But<sup>7</sup> flesh with the life thereof,<sup>7</sup> which is the blood thereof, shall ye not eat.

5 And <sup>8</sup>surely your blood of your lives will I require:<sup>8</sup> at the hand of every beast will I require it, and at the hand of man; at the hand of 'every man's brother will I require the life of man.

6 Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed: <sup>9</sup>for in the image of God made he man.

7 And you, <sup>10</sup>be ye fruitful, and multiply; bring forth abundantly in the earth, and multiply therein.

8 ¶ And God spake unto Noah, and to his sons with him, saying,

9 And I, behold, <sup>11</sup>I establish my covenant with you, and with your seed after you;

is the gate of access to him revealed in the gospel! and what abundant room is there in his saving power, his love, his blood, his intercession, his covenant, and promise, for endangered sinners of mankind! His stories are his ancient undertaking, his humiliation, and his endless glory. No light is in him but what is of a spiritual and heavenly nature. By exposing himself to the deluging rains, the fearful billows, of his Father's wrath; to depths wherein was no standing, till at last he rested in his grave, and at his Father's right hand he bears up and saves sinners. How many despise him and his atonement! But by the power of God all who believe, both of Jews and Gentiles, are saved by him, and made heirs of new promises, inhabitants of a new covenant state, and an eternal world of blessedness!—And is not the same a figure of the gospel-church, in which, reared by Jesus' labours of love, the nations of them that are saved do live in this world 'till the winter be past, and the floods be over and gone?' And, happy period, when, after tossings unnumbered, the Lord shall call us forth into our fields, 'our house eternal in the heavens,' where rains, where storms, where nights, where winters, where curses never enter!

CHAPTER IX. [Ver. 4. This restriction seems also to imply that the animals intended for food should be regularly killed by drawing off the blood; it thus days; and the whole period from the time Noah entered the ark till he left it was a lunar year and ten days, or just one solar year of 365 days. P.]

Ver. 20. It was common for the patriarchs to erect altars and offer sacrifices of thanksgiving for mercies received, and for the expiation of their own guilt, as in the case of Abraham, ch. 12. 7, 8; 13. 18; Isaac, 26. 25; Jacob, 35. 7; and Moses, Ex. 17. 15. These were typical of Christ our New Testament altar, as the sacrifices were of his oblation of himself, He. 10. 10-15.

Ver. 21. The Lord accepted it as a thing pleasant and delightful, proceeding from faith and gratitude, 1 Sa. 26. 19; Le. 26. 31; Am. 5. 21. God would hereafter improve the sinfulness of mankind as an occasion of manifesting his patience and mercy, Ps. 103. 11-14; 25. 21; Ex. 34. 9; Is. 43. 24, 25; 44. 22; 48. 8, 9; 7. 17, 18; 1. 18; Je. 3. 1, 4, 5, 14, 22. Thus, Ps. 106. 6-8, 'Though we have sinned with our fathers, have committed iniquity, have done wickedly, nevertheless he saved, for his name's sake, that he might make his mighty power to be known; Eze. 16. 60-63, 'Nevertheless, notwithstanding innumerable and grievous provocations, I will remember my covenant with thee; I am pacified towards thee for all that thou hast done,' 20. 4-44, 'I have wrought with you for my name's sake, not according to your wicked ways, nor according to your corrupt doings;' compare 36. 16-32; Ro. 5. 20. 21. 'Where sin abounded, grace did much more abound; that as sin had reigned unto death, grace might reign through righteousness unto eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord.'

Ver. 22. How remarkably exact over all the world hath been the fulfilment of this prediction for more than 4000 years past!

REFLECTIONS.—How graciously God remembers, and in mercy visits, his people in due time! Therefore, though the vision tarry, let me wait for it. How easily, and often gradually, the Lord accomplishes his merciful designs! As he never wants instruments of affliction and ruin, so neither of gracious deliverances. Whatever means I may use of information, or of affecting my conscience and heart, let me in all my ways acknowledge God, and wait for his direction out of straits as well as in them. If I receive deliverance, let my heart be lifted up in his way, and my thanksgivings wholly depend upon his tender mercy, not on my own or others' reformation: for, alas! blessed or chastised, we are flagrant rebels still! But in this patriarch's ark do I not discern Jesus Christ? He is the absolutely necessary mean of our escaping the justly deserved and destructive floods of God's everlasting wrath. Everything in his mediatorial person and office was devised and appointed of God. He was gradually reared up in promises before he was actually incarnate, and gradually he finished his all-covering atonement. How wide 11 And <sup>I</sup> will establish my covenant with you: neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood; neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth.

12 And God said, This is the token<sup>9</sup> of the covenant which I make between me and you, and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations:

13 I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>4</sup> We find in Jacob, chap. 37. 34. 38, if not a distinguishing partiality, at least a strong and special attachment, to Joseph, as the son of his old age. May not this furnish us with the reason why the prophetic denunciation of Noah is not against Ham, the immediate aggressor, but against Canaan, ch. 10. 6, as his youngest son? The wickedness of the father is punished by the bad education he gave to his son, and the consequences to which it conducted both him and his posterity. Note.—The good or evil in parents is not merely personal, but is propagated by education through remote generations.—C.

prohibits the cruel practice of mutilating animals by cutting away part of the flesh for food while they are yet alive. P.]

Ver. 9. [By covenant, we are not here to understand a mutual compact and agreement, but a simple and gracious promise, see Nu. 18. 19; 25. 12. C.]

Ver. 18. [The last clause of this verse is manifestly inserted as introductory to the painful incident which is narrated below. The mind of the writer being specially directed to that incident, he naturally connects Canaan with Ham. It would seem, too, from the tenor of the whole narrative, that Canaan must have been in some way implicated. Probably he was the first who discovered Noah, and then told his father. P.]

Ver. 24. [Some suppose that this expression, which may be translated 'his little son,' applies to Canaan, Noah's grandson. This, however, is contrary to the idiom of the Hebrew. There can be no doubt that the words apply to Ham, and ought to be rendered 'his youngest son,' thus indicating Ham's position in the family of Noah. P.]

Ver. 25-27. These predictions are greatly extensive: almost every prediction in Scripture relative to the Egyptians, Canaanites, Tyrians, and Sidonians, is comprehended in this repeated curse of Canaan. Almost every prediction relative to the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Persians, and Arabs, and especially what relates to the Jewish nation and Jesus Christ, is included in the blessing of Shem. Almost every prediction relative to the Greeks, Romans, Goths, Tartars, and Turks, and especially what relates to the gospel-church among the Gentiles, is contained in the blessing of Japheth. The fulfilment of these predictions is no less remarkable. Much of the scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, much of the history of nations, is no more than an account of it. The descendants of Ham, by his sons Cush, Mizraim, Phut, and Canaan, peopled Africa and part of Western Asia. For about four thousand years past the bulk of the Africans have been abandoned of Heaven to the most gross ignorance, rigid slavery, stupid idolatry, and savage barbarity. Scarcely ever hath a state formed of them made any respectable figure—the Egyptians and Carthaginians excepted; and even they had little dominion over any part of the descendants of Shem or Japheth. For many ages the northern parts of Africa were enslaved or harassed by the Assyrian, Chaldean, and Persian descendants of Shem; and next by the Greeks, but especially the Roman and

Vandal descendants of Japheth. For eleven hundred years past they have been enslaved by the Ishmaelite Saracens descended from Shem, or by the Seljukian and Ottoman Turks descended of Japheth. And what multitudes of the Western Africans were formerly bought for slaves by the English, and further by the Spaniards, the French, Portuguese, and Dutch, and condemned to the hardest drudgery in their American plantations! It was Canaan, I suppose, who first saw the nakedness of Noah, and told his father of it. His posterity first settled in the west of Asia, and the curse hath pursued them in a still more remarkable manner. About A.M. 2079 Chedorlaomer and his Elamite descendants of Shem rendered tributary the Canaanitish kingdoms of Sodom and Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboim, and Zoar. Upon their revolt he invaded and pillaged their country, Ge. xiv. Not long after they, Zoar excepted, were destroyed with fire and brimstone from heaven, for their unnatural lewdness and other abominations, Ge. xix. The Hebrews, chiefly under Moses, Joshua, and Barak, cut off most of the other Canaanites, and seized on their country, Nu. xxi. ; Jos. vi. -xix. ; Ju. iv. The Gibeonites and others, whose lives were spared, were subjected to slavery, Jos. ix. ; Ju. i. ; 2 Sa. v. Solomon had more than 150,000 of them employed as slaves in the building of the temple, 1 Ki. 9. 20, 22; 5. 15, 16. They who settled in the north-west of Canaan, and formed the once flourishing states of Tyre and Sidon, were by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, and Persians, but chiefly by the Greeks, Romans, Saracens, and Turks, reduced to great misery and bondage, till at last they were totally ruined, Is. xxiii. ; Eze. xxvi. xxviii. They who fled from Joshua, or afterwards to Northern Africa, and formed the Carthaginian and other states, were, after much contention and mutual enslavement, reduced by the Romans to the basest servitude and misery; and for about two thousand years that country hath been one continued scene of slavery to the Romans, Vandals, Saracens, or Turks. The Phœnician Canaanites, who, pushing their fortunes, settled in the Mediterranean islands, or in Greece, Italy, or on the border of the Euxine Sea, have shared a similar fate of thralldom and misery from the Persians, Greeks, Romans, Saracens, Normans, or Turks. But the countries of Persia, Assyria, Chaldea, Lydia, Syria, Arabia, India, and I suppose most of China, were peopled by the posterity of Elam, Asshur, Arphaxad, Lud, and Aram, sons of Shem. The blessings bestowed upon them by God have been remarkable. The most rich or fertile parts of the world fell to their share. They formed the Assyrian, Chaldean, Persian, and Saracen monarchies, which in their turns enslaved the offspring of Canaan. For two thousand years, from the death of Noah to that of Christ, the knowledge of the true religion and the new covenant relation to God, as his church and people, were almost wholly confined to them, particularly to the Jews; and from them the Messiah, the Lord from heaven, had his human descent; and from them the apostolic founders of the gospel church did spring. The sons of Japheth were Gomer, Magog, Madai, Javan, Tubal, Meshech, and Tiras. Their descendants, the Celts or Gauls, the Tartars, Medes, Greeks, Romans, Goths, Turks, &c., prodigiously multiplied, and peopled the whole of Europe, the northern half of Asia, and I suppose most of America. For many ages they have been settling themselves in the original habitations of the posterity of Shem. The Medes, assisted by the Chaldeans, overturned the Assyrian empire; and afterwards, assisted by the Persians, whom they had subdued, ruined the Chaldean. Perhaps it was their Scythian brethren who about two hundred years after founded the powerful monarchy of the Parthians in Persia and the places about; while multitudes of the overstocked Gauls from Europe invaded Asia, and partly took up their residence in Mesopotamia. About three hundred and thirty years before the birth of our Saviour, the Greeks, under Alexander, overran Asia to the river Indus, and for several ages held it in subjection. Next the Romans pushed their conquests into Syria, Assyria, and Canaan; and for more than seven hundred years retained what they could of it. For many ages the Tartarian Huns and Turks continued to pour themselves into Persia and the countries about. In the eleventh century of the Christian reckoning, the Seljukian Turks formed themselves into the four kingdoms of Bagdad, Damascus, Aleppo, and Iconium, and quickly extended their dominion as far as the Indus. Meanwhile Mahmud-Gazni, with an army of Tartars and others, invaded India, and founded there a mighty empire, which continued about two hundred years. In the 13th century Jenghis Khan and his sons, with their Tartar troops, conquered the greater part of Asia. The empires which they founded in China and in Persia continued about nine generations. In the beginning of the 15th century Tamerlane with his Tartars overran great part of Asia.

9 Nimrod is described as a hunter, an employment that in thinly peopled countries is as necessary for self-defence as for subsistence. There appears from the statement of Moses no good reason for understanding the phrase in a bad sense. Our Lord tells the disciples they should be fishers of men, a phrase as indicative of aggression as hunter. The word before the Lord express God's visible or acknowledged presence in a place or ordinance, chap. 18. 22. Ex. 23. 17, and seem intended to ascribe to Nimrod a religious regard to God in his rural employment as a hunter, as laying the foundation of that energy of character which progressively raised him to the throne of the first empire.—C.

and founded an empire in Persia, and another in Western India, which still subsists under the Great Mogul. For about three hundred years the Ottoman Turks have been masters of Assyria, Syria, Canaan, and the places about; while the Portuguese, the Spaniards, the English, the Dutch, the Danes, and French, have been rendering themselves masters of islands or settlements, almost innumerable, in the East Indies. Thus there is scarce one single country of note which originally pertained to the offspring of Shem but is now possessed or governed by the enlarged posterity of Japheth, Arabian Hejaz excepted. Multitudes too of the posterity of Japheth in Asia and America, but chiefly in Europe, have been persuaded of God to embrace the true religion, and become his church, ever since the Jews were rejected. The far greater part of that race known to us do, and for many ages have, at least in word, made profession of the Christian faith, while very few of the descendants of Shem or Ham have so much as pretended it. Nor do I remember that the Christian religion ever had a public establishment from one of them, the Abyssinians excepted. What an exact, an expiatory, and confirming counterpart is the whole providence of God to his word! What understanding of the divine authenticity of the scriptures, and of the love and faithfulness of God, may I attain by a wise and careful observation thereof!—[Ver. 27. This remarkable prophecy is given in the form of a short poem, and consists of three parts—a curse upon Canaan, and a blessing upon Shem and Japheth. But it will be observed that each blessing embodies, while it illustrates, the first curse. Canaan appears to be mentioned as the representative of the whole Hamites—the head of that section of the Hamitic race with which the Israelites came specially into contact. The whole prophecy has been remarkably fulfilled in the history of mankind since it was uttered. The Hamites as a race have been "servants of servants," i.e., as the Hebrew idiom implies, they have been in a state of perpetual servitude under the Semitic Israelites, and the Japhetic Greeks, Romans, and Saxons. Japheth has been enlarged. His descendants occupy at this day the territories of Shem, and constitute the leading nations of the civilized world. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Lord, what is man, that thou

Vol. 1—15

shouldst be so mindful of him and his concerns! that thou shouldst so care for his welfare and his life! that thou shouldst so familiarly covenant with him, and so often repeat thy declarations for the strengthening and confirmation of his faith! May I always accept thy favours with thankfulness, and obey thy commandments with cheerfulness! But ah, how quickly do we forget his mighty works! how fearfully do the best stumble and fall, if the Lord uphold them not mightily! How readily do fools trample on every tie of relation or duty, in order to make a mock of sin! But dreadful is the curse, lasting and extensive the disfavour, which awaits those who contemn and deride their aged parents! while blessings shall be on their head who regard them, and cover their infirmities. But let me not bid adieu to the dying patriarch, till in him I contemplate the great God my Saviour! His name is a bed of rest, and source of comfort. He is the distinguished favourite of Heaven. In the midst of a crooked and perverse generation he dared to be singularly good: at once he gave an unblemished pattern of uprightness, and boldly preached righteousness in the great congregation. To him mankind owe their recovery from ruin. By him the church is gradually built up as the mean of our salvation, and his believers are rendered true members thereof. Upon the savour of his sweet-smelling sacrifice God hath promised no more to curse the world. With him and believers is the new covenant for ever established; and to them are the inheritance and rules of the new covenant state conferred. By him is the church, the vineyard of the Lord of hosts, planted and cultivated; and in his word is irreversibly declared the everlasting fate of his faithful ones. Behold how those who love his person, and hide the infirmities of his saints, are blessed with all spiritual blessings! Behold how the curse of sin pursues both wicked Jews and carnal professors, who stumble at this corner-stone, who turn his grace into licentiousness, and the infirmity of his saints into ridicule! and what everlasting ruin it entails upon them.

REFLECTIONS.—How quickly God can repair the most remarkable breaches in external things, and make families increase and spread when he pleaseth! But alas! how soon human pride and lust of dominion revive, notwithstanding the most tremendous judgments of God upon them! Neither floods, nor flames, nor sword, nor famine, nor pestilence, but Jesus' blood and Spirit alone, can extirpate our sinful inclinations. How property! and the more they have, the more they hunt after! But let me remember, that all my hunting after these vanities is against, as well as before, the Lord. How often God prospers the wicked under their energy and industry, and also by the same means provides wealth for his people! But much happier is it to be with Eber, a father of saints, than to be with Ham, found their language, that they may not understand one another's speech.<sup>5</sup>

8 So the LORD scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth: and they left off to build the city.

9 Therefore is the name of it called Babel; because the LORD did there confound the language of all the earth: and from thence did the LORD scatter them abroad upon the face of all the earth.

10 ¶ These<sup>6</sup> are the generations of Shem; Shem was an hundred years old, and begat Arphaxad two years after the flood.

11 And Shem lived,<sup>7</sup> after he begat Arphaxad, five hundred years, and begat sons and daughters.

12 And Arphaxad lived five and thirty <sup>8</sup>years, and begat Salah.

13 And Arphaxad lived, after he begat Salah, four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.

14 And Salah lived thirty years,<sup>9</sup> and begat Eber.

15 And Salah lived, after he begat Eber, four hundred and three years, and begat sons and daughters.

16 And<sup>10</sup> Eber lived four and thirty <sup>11</sup>years, and begat Peleg.<sup>2</sup>

17 And Eber lived, after he begat Peleg, four hundred and thirty years, and begat sons and daughters.

19 And Peleg lived, after he begat Reu, two hundred and nine years, and begat sons and daughters.

20 And Reu lived two and thirty years,<sup>13</sup> and begat Serug.

21 And Reu lived, after he begat Serug, two hundred and seven years, and begat sons and daughters.

MOUNT GERIZIM—WHERE THE SAMARITANS WORSHIPED. [Genesis, xii:6.]—"And Abram passed through the land unto the place of Sichem, unto the plain of Moreh. And the Canaanite was then in the land." The "place of Sichem" referred to was afterward known as Shechem, and now is called Nablous. Shechem, or Nablous, is built between the mountains Ebal and Gerizim. It is more completely at the foot of Mount Gerizim. The mount really slopes down into the town. This is the first town mentioned in Palestine connecting it with the history of God's chosen people. Abraham erected an altar here and consecrated the place to the worship of Jehovah, and after the children of Israel took possession of the country, the bones of Joseph were deposited at Shechem, in the parcel of land which Jacob purchased of the children of Hamor, the father of Shechem, for a hundred pieces of silver. (Joshua, xxiv:32.) This mountain is notable because it is the one to which the woman of Samaria referred in her conversation with our Savior at Jacob's well.

27 ¶ Now these are the generations of Terah: Terah begat Abram, Nahor, and Haran; and Haran begat Lot.

28 And Haran died before his father Terah in the land of his nativity, in <sup>2</sup>Ur of the Chaldees.

29 And Abram and Nahor took them wives: <sup>9</sup> the name of Abram's wife was <sup>9</sup>Sarai; and the name of Nahor's wife <sup>10</sup>Milcah, the daughter of Haran, the father of Milcah, and the father of Iscah.*

30 But Sarai was <sup>11</sup>barren; she had no child.

31 ¶ And Terah<sup>1</sup> took Abram<sup>2</sup> his son, and Lot the son of Haran his son's son, and Sarai his daughter-in-law, his son Abram's wife; <sup>3</sup> and they went forth with them from Ur of the Chaldees, to go into the land of Canaan; and they came unto <sup>4</sup>Haran,<sup>3</sup> and dwelt there.

32 And the days of Terah were two hundred and five years: and Terah died in Haran.

CHAPTER XII.

1 God calleth Abram, and blesseth him with a promise of Christ. 4 He departeth with Lot from Haran. 6 He journeyeth through Canaan, 7 which is promised him in a vision. 10 He is driven by a famine into Egypt. 11 Fear maketh him feign his wife to be his sister. 14 Pharaoh, having taken her from him, by plagues is compelled to restore her.

NOW the <sup>1</sup>LORD had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will show thee.

Is. 10. 28.

2 And<sup>b</sup> I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing:

3 And<sup>c</sup> I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee; and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.

4 ¶ So Abram departed, as the LORD had spoken unto him; and Lot went with him: and Abram was seventy and five years old when he departed out of Haran.<sup>4</sup>

5 And Abram took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and the souls that they had gotten in Haran; and they went forth to go into the land of Canaan;<sup>5</sup> and<sup>a</sup> into the land of Canaan they came.

6 ¶ And Abram passed through the land unto the place of <sup>6</sup>Sichem, unto the plain of Moreh. And the <sup>7</sup>Canaanite was then in the land.

7 And the LORD appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land: and there builded he an <sup>8</sup>altar unto the LORD, who appeared unto him.<sup>6</sup>

8 And he removed from thence unto a mountain on the east of <sup>9</sup>Beth-el, and pitched his tent, having Beth-el on the west, and Hai on the east; and there he builded an altar unto the LORD, and called upon the name of the LORD.

his manifesting his notice of it in his deliberate and just judgments upon them for it, ch. 18. 20, 21.

Ver. 28. [The Hebrew word is Kasdim, but our translators have adopted the name Chaldea from the Greek. As a geographical term it has a wide signification, embracing the whole country of Mesopotamia, with the region extending southward to the Persian Gulf. Chaldea proper was confined to the plain on both banks of the Euphrates from Babylon southward to the Tigris. The city of Ur has been recently identified with the vast mounds of Mugheir or Mugayer, about 90 miles S.E. of Babylon, on the west bank of the Euphrates. On bricks dug up from the mounds of Mugheir the name Ur has been discovered by Loftus. It is worthy of note that Mugheir signifies 'Mother of Bitumen.' P.]

Ver. 31. [Terah, instead of striking right across the Arabian desert to Palestine, went north-west along the banks of the Euphrates. It is the route an Arab tribe would still follow; because in the desert there is little pasture for flocks, and no water. Haran still retains its ancient name, and some relics of former greatness. It is now a small and poor village standing on the bank of a small river called Belik, which flows into the Euphrates about 50 miles to the southward. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—How awful the presumption of sinners, who dare attempt to withstand the known command and purpose of the Almighty! Deeply should it affect us that we find the serpent's seed so harmonious and active in wickedness, while the children of promise are so divided and inactive in holiness. But with equity and ease the Lord frustrates the devices of the crafty, and turneth the counsel of the froward headlong, while he causes men's sinful attempts towards fame and power effectually to issue in their infamy and weakness. What a mercy that, as the confusion of tongues effected the dispersion of mankind, the miraculous gift of tongues contributed to spread the gospel, to gather sinners to Jesus, and to build up his church throughout the earth! Behold how the blessing of Noah begins to operate in the family of Shem, and will do till after the ascension of Christ! How proper to remark the providences of God in the names of our children, or otherwise! How precious are the saints, the church, in God's sight! They are allowed far more room in his inspired registers than all the world besides. If Terah, who set out for Canaan, died by the way, let me tremble, lest, a promise being left me of entering into God's rest, I should seem to come short of it!—tremble lest I should be almost, but never altogether, a Christian, not far from the kingdom of God, but never a true member thereof here, or partaker of it hereafter!

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 1. While Abram was in Ur of the Chaldees, God appeared to him, probably in human shape, Ac. 7. 2, as he did at least eight times afterwards, Ge. 12. 6, 7; 13. 3, 4; 15. 1; 17. 1; 18. 1; 21. 12; 22. 1, 15, and called him to leave his country and his father's house, which for some time past had been infected with idolatry, Jos. 24. 2; 2 Co. 6. 17; Re. 18. 4; Is. 41. 2; Ne. 9. 7. He readily surrendering all for the sake of Christ, Ps. 45. 11; Lu. 14. 26, in obedience to the divine command, and relying on his direction and protection, went forth, not knowing whither the Lord intended to lead him, He. 11. 8. But as they had stopped too long in Haran, I suppose the call here mentioned was one which he received anew after the death of his father.

Ver. 2. Abraham was made a great nation. His posterity by Ishmael, by the sons of Keturah, and by Esau, were exceedingly numerous, ch. 16. 10; 17. 20; 21. 13; 25. 1–18; xxxvi.; Nu. xxxi.; Ju. vi. vii. His seed of promise, by Jacob, were as the stars of heaven and the dust of the earth in multitude, ch. 13. 16; 15. 5; 22. 17; 28. 3, 14; 32. 12; Nu. i.; 23. 10; He. 11. 12; 1 Ch. xxi.; 1 Ki. 4. 20; 2 Ch. xvii.; Je. 33. 22. His spiritual seed, followers of his faith and obedience, are still more numerous, a multitude which no man can number, Ps. 2. 8, 9; 22. 27–30; lxii. xcviii.; Is. xlii. xlix. lx.; Re. 7. 4–9; 11. 15.—All the spiritual children of Jesus, his eminent seed, are included herein, Is. 53. 10–12. God blessed Abram, (1) with the numerous seed mentioned; (2) with Canaan, as the future property of part of them; (3) with Christ as his eminent seed, Ga. 3. 16; (4) with all spiritual blessings in Christ, Ga. 3. 14, with Ep. 1. 3. Abram was a blessing, (1) to his friends and servants, who were instructed by him, Ge. 14. 14; 18. 19; (2) to his posterity, who were blessed for his sake, Ex. 3. 6–8; Le. 26. 42; Ge. 17. 20; (3) to the world, as an eminent pattern of faith and holiness, Ro. iv., and as the progenitor of Christ the Saviour, Ga. 3. 13, 16.—God did and will remarkably befriend and prosper the friends of Abram and his natural seed, but especially of Jesus Christ and his spiritual seed; and did and will remarkably punish their enemies, Jos. 2. 9; Ge. 15. 13, 14; Ex. 17. 8–16; Mat. 10. 42; 25. 41–46. All the families of the earth are blessed in Abram. He was of great service to the Canaanites, in imparting revelation to some of them, or in setting before them all an engaging example of virtue. His seed of promise, and especially his spiritual seed, are useful on that account, and have been and are still the means of the prosperity or protection of nations, Is. 6. 13; 19. 24, 25; Mat. 24. 22. But it is properly in his seed (Christ) that men are blessed. Multitudes of nations receive much outward happiness, and the dispensation of gospel ordinances, in consequence of his undertaking for his people, Mat. 24. 24; Is. xxxv. xlix. lx.; 6. 13. And believers, gathered out of all nations, are blessed in him with temporal, spiritual, and eternal blessings, Ga. 3. 16; Ac. 3. 25, 26; Ep. 1. 3; Ps. 72. 17–19; Is. 45. 17–25. It is easy to see, that the subsequent promises and threatenings, nay, the doctrines and laws, mentioned in Scripture, are but an enlarged exposition of these two verses; and the whole fate of the Jewish and gospel church, nay, of the saints in heaven and lost in hell, are but one continued fulfilment thereof.

Ver. 3. [The command given to Abraham involved great personal sacrifices—country, kindred, and home; and also great faith—he knew not where he was going. But the blessing promised was most cheering and comprehensive. It embraced himself, all who favoured and honoured him, the whole nation that was to spring from him, and all the families of the earth. Abraham by faith saw in this last promise the most glorious and blessed of all truths—the atoning work of the Messiah, Ac. 3. 25; Ga. 3. 8. P.]

Ver. 6. [Sichem, or Shechem, or Sychar, was situated in a beautiful valley between the mountains Ebal and Gerizim. It was called by the Romans Neapolis, and its modern name is Nablus. A mile east of it, at the opening of the valley, is a broad and fertile plain—no doubt the place where Abraham, and afterwards Jacob, pitched their tents. P.]

Ver. 7. For about four hundred and seventy years after, the Canaanites remained fixed in the possession of Canaan; during which time God, for the confirmation of his people's faith, renewed this grant of their

THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT—A MONUMENT ABRAHAM SAW.

[Genesis, xii:11.]—When Abraham made his first visit to Egypt, 1921 B. C., the Great Pyramid, according to the estimate of Wallis Budge, Assistant Keeper of the Department of Egyptian and Assyrian Antiquities, British Museum, had been standing 1,812 years; so while we look at the Great Pyramid to-day, we may know at least that we are beholding one monument seen by Abraham. This pyramid was built by Cheops as his tomb. This is the largest of all the pyramids; covers about thirteen acres of land, and in the center of it is what is called the King's Chamber, where Cheops was buried. It is the first object that meets the eye when approaching Cairo, and is one of the monuments that the traveler never forgets. There is enough stone, it is said, in this great pyramid to build a wall all around the frontiers of France. Much of this material has been used in the building of modern Cairo.

CHAPTER XIII.

9 And Abram journeyed, going on<sup>7</sup> still toward the south.

10 ¶ And there was a <sup>8</sup>famine in the land: and Abram went down<sup>8</sup> into Egypt to sojourn there; for the <sup>9</sup>famine was grievous in the land.

11 And it came to pass, when he was come near to enter into Egypt, that he said unto Sarai his wife, Behold now, I know that thou art<sup>1</sup> a fair woman to look upon:

12 Therefore it shall come to pass, when the Egyptians shall see thee, that they shall say, This is his wife; and they <sup>2</sup>will kill me, but they will save thee alive.

13 Say, I pray thee, thou art my sister: that it may be well with me for thy sake; and my soul shall live because of thee.<sup>9</sup>

14 ¶ And<sup>1</sup> it came to pass, that, when Abram was come into Egypt, the Egyptians<sup>10</sup> beheld the woman that she was very fair.

15 The <sup>11</sup>princes also of Pharaoh saw her, and commended her before <sup>12</sup>Pharaoh: and the woman was taken into Pharaoh's house.

16 And he entreated Abram well for her sake:<sup>2</sup> and <sup>13</sup>he had sheep, and oxen, and he-asses, and men-servants, and maid-servants, and she-asses, and camels.

17 And the LORD <sup>14</sup>plagued Pharaoh and his house with great plagues because of Sarai, Abram's wife.

18 And Pharaoh called Abram, and said, What<sup>15</sup> is this that thou hast done unto me? why didst thou not tell me that she was thy wife?

19 Why saidst thou, She is my sister? so I might have taken her to me to wife: now therefore behold thy wife, take her, and go thy way.

20 And Pharaoh commanded his men concerning him: and they <sup>16</sup>sent him away, and his wife, and all that he had.

country, times almost innumerable, to Abram and his seed, Ge. 13. 15; 15. 7, 18; 17. 8; 22. 17; 26. 3; 28. 4, 13, 14; 35. 12; 46. 4; 48. 21; 50. 24; Ex. 3. 8, 17; 6. 8; 12. 25; 13. 5; 20. 12; Le. 25. 2; De. 2. 24; 4. 1, 21; 11. 10, 17-31; 15. 4, 7; 8. 7, 9; 9. 1, &c. Canaan was granted as a pledge of heaven to him and his spiritual seed, Ro. 9. 6-8; Ga. 4. 22, 31.—[The land of Canaan, so called from the son of Ham, had the Mediterranean to the west, Egypt to the south, Arabia to the east, and Phoenicia and Syria to the north. From Dan on the north, to Beersheba on the south, it is in length about 150, and its average breadth is about 90 miles. But this did not include the entire possession promised to Israel, as appears from Jos. 1. 4, which extension was realized in part to David, and completely to Solomon, 1 Ki. 4. 21.—Builded he an altar. That Abram, before this time, knew and worshipped God, there can be no doubt; but this is the first altar erected by him; that is, the first decided and public establishment of the worship of Jehovah in his family.—Note. It is well known, that young Christians, who worship God in private, often find considerable difficulty in commencing family worship. Let them remember Abram's faith, and Abram's altar, and Abram's blessing, and take courage. C.]

Ver. 8. Abram called on God, i.e. worshipped him by prayer, by preaching to his family, and by offering sacrifices for himself and them, ch. 18. 19; 21. 13.—[Abram, in his new habitation, erected a second altar to God.—Note. It is not uncommon for men to speak and act religiously in one company or place, where religion is prevalent, or if it may be so called, fashionable, who yet totally lay it aside in another place or company, where religion is less regarded, or perhaps altogether despised. Abram testifies for God wherever he goes. C.—Bethel is 20 miles south of Sichem, and 10 north of Jerusalem. The site of Abraham's camp was about a mile east of Bethel, on the broad summit of a rocky ridge. P.]

Ver. 13. Sarai was his sister in some sense, as Lot was his brother, ch. 13. 8; 14. 12, 14, being his father's grand-daughter, ch. 20. 12; 11. 29; but it was not in that sense, but in the common acceptance of the words sister and brother, they sinfully wished the Egyptians to understand them.

Ver. 17. Thus the Lord rebuked the king; ordered him not to touch his anointed, or to do his prophets any harm, Ps. 105. 14, 15; and punished his intended whoredom with such distempers as prevented the defilement of Sarai, perhaps with a kind of emerods, ch. 20. 18; 1 Sa. 5. 10.

REFLECTIONS.—How ready and cheerful ought our obedience to be, when God plainly calls and powerfully encourages to it! What secrets of his grace and providence does the Lord manifest to such as fear him! And with what earnestness ought they to do good to all around them! Surely no discouragement, or apparent enemy, should ever make us to distrust the promise or protection of such a God! How gracious, frequent, and familiar are the visits of God to such as remember him in all their ways! May his kindness attach my heart to his service, as the first, the principal 14 How shall we excuse this dissimulation in Abram? We may not excuse it at all. The Spirit of God records it without comment, not because it is to be commended, or in any form initiated, but as a mere fact, illustrative of the weakness of man, and his need of more faith, and of the power of grace. We may not bring good out of evil, and the mercy that can pardon iniquity, transgression, and sin.—C.

5 The valuable acquisitions made by Abram in Egypt were not a consideration paid by Pharaoh for permission to espouse one that was taken for Abram's sister; for a brother appears not to have had such a right; but they are to be understood as a gift of generosity, like that made to Laban, Ge. 22. 1.—Harmer.

13 The view from the crown of the ridge between Bethel and Ai is most commanding. It embraces a large section of Southern Palestine, and the whole valley of the Jordan and Jericho. The reference to Egypt is natural, whether we regard this passage as written by Moses, who was familiar with Egypt, or by Abraham himself, who had just returned from that country. The rich and well-watered valley of the Jordan bears in places a striking resemblance to the valley of the Nile; and it seems that resemblance was even greater before the destruction of Sodom and the enlargement of the Dead Sea. A difficulty is removed from this passage if we translate according to the grammatical construction of the Hebrew, thus: "Lot... beheld all the plain of Jordan towards Zoar, that it was well watered, &c. From the spot on which Lot stood, Zoar did not lie beyond the plain, or circuit of the Jordan, hence it is said, 'All the circuit of the Jordan towards Zoar.'—P.

1 Abram and Lot return out of Egypt. 7 By disagreement they part asunder. 10 Lot goeth to wicked Sodom. 14 God reneweth the promise to Abram. 18 He removeth to Hebron, and there buildeth an altar.

2 And Abram was <sup>4</sup>very rich in cattle, in silver, and in gold.

3 And he went on his journeys from the south<sup>4</sup> even to Beth-el, unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning, between Beth-el and Hai;

4 Unto the <sup>5</sup>place of the altar, which he had made there at the first: and <sup>6</sup>there Abram called on the name of the LORD.

5 And Lot also, which went<sup>5</sup> with Abram, had flocks, and herds, and <sup>6</sup>tents.

6 And the <sup>7</sup>land was not able to bear them, that they might dwell together: for their substance was great, so that they could not dwell together.

7 ¶ And there was a <sup>8</sup>strife between the herdmen of Abram's cattle and the herdmen of Lot's cattle. And the <sup>9</sup>Canaanite and the Perizite dwelt then in the land.

8 And Abram said unto Lot, <sup>10</sup>Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen; for we be brethren.<sup>6</sup>

9 Is not the whole land before thee? Separate thyself, I pray thee, from me: if <sup>11</sup>thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if <sup>12</sup>thou depart to the right hand, then I will go to the left.

10 ¶ And Lot lifted up his eyes, and beheld <sup>13</sup>all the plain of Jordan,<sup>7</sup> that it was well watered every where, before the LORD destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, even as the garden of the LORD, Never let me, for the sake of carnal relief or advantage, quit the place or the station in which God hath fixed me, without his plain warrant. If I presume to direct my own way, or choose out my own lot, let me dread snares to my conscience and plagues upon my concerns! If in such cases the Lord hath ever granted me deliverance, let me bewail my folly, and praise him for the sovereignty of his grace!

BETHEL—WHERE ABRAHAM WENT WITH LOT AND HIS WIFE.
[Genesis, xiii:3.]—When Abraham went up out of Egypt with Lot and his wife, his cattle, his silver, and his gold, he went on his journey from the South, even to Bethel, unto the place where his tent had been at the beginning, between Bethel and Ai. In the picture we have a view of Bethel as it is to-day. It is twelve miles from Jerusalem, and is a place where tourists take lunch the first day out from the Holy City. It is a desolate looking place, and the ruins of the ancient city are about three or four acres in extent. These consist of foundations, fragments of walls, and large heaps of stone. In the picture we are looking toward the northeast. South of the village there is a great reservoir. Every stone and ruin about this old place speaks of the past. Bethel means "The House of God." Hence so many churches all over the world have been called Bethel.

11 Then<sup>8</sup> Lot chose him all the plain of Jordan; and Lot journeyed east: and they separated themselves the one from the other.

12 Abram dwelt in the land of Canaan,<sup>9</sup> and Lot dwelt in the cities of the plain, and pitched his tent toward Sodom.

13 But the men of Sodom were wicked, and sinners before the LORD exceedingly.

14 ¶ And the LORD said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward:

15 For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever.<sup>1</sup>

16 And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered.

17 Arise, walk through the land, in the length of it, and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee.

18 ¶ Then Abram removed his tent, and came and dwelt in the plain<sup>2</sup> of Mamre, which is in Hebron, and built there an altar unto the LORD.<sup>3</sup>

1 The title of the Jews to the land of Canaan is as valid now as it was in the day it was granted by Jehovah to Abram, as no adverse possession of the Gentiles can invalidate the right of the Creator to give it to whom he pleases. The return of the Jews to Canaan is an event clearly predicted in the Scriptures (see especially Eze. 37. 21. 22); so that their title for ever, though for a time suspended, will, in God's good time, be finally resumed.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—Mark, my soul, what a load, what an occasion of strife, the riches of this world are! And how sinful and imprudent it is for the children of God to indulge contention before a carnal generation! Better to be losers in outward things than strikers about them! Never let me dare to mingle myself with monsters of wickedness for the sake of carnal advantage, lest, where I expect a paradise, I should find a hell! If, by yielding for the sake of peace, I submit myself to the worst, new visits from God, new promises, and new surveys of the Canaan above, will more than make up my loss. Meanwhile, wherever I go, let me set the Lord always before me, and attend to his worship and service, as my principal employ; then shall his blessing go with me, and render every change on earth a pleasing earnest of the promised inheritance.

CHAPTER XIV. [Ver. 1. These princes were all from Mesopotamia, and one of them was from Elam, or Chaldaea, Abraham's native country. It is a remarkable fact that within the last few years bricks have been found in the ruins of Mugheir (Ur), the capital of Elam, bearing the name of a king, apparently contemporary with Abraham, and closely resembling Chedorlaomer. It is written Kudur-Mabuk. The first part is evidently identical with the Hebrew Chedor. This prince also has a title which signifies 'ravager of the west.' The direct distance from Elam to the Dead Sea is about 800 miles. P.]

Ver. 14. [The well-known border city, anciently called Laish, did not get the name Dan till the time of the judges; but there was another ancient city in the same region called Dan-jaan, which may perhaps be that alluded to in this passage and in De. 34. 1. P.]

Ver. 18. Who this Melchizedek was, this priest of God among the Canaanites, greater than Abram, the friend of God, who were his parents or his successors, is on purpose concealed by the Holy Ghost. And hence he is without father or mother, predecessor or successor, in historical account, in order that he might typify the incomprehensible dignity, the amazing pedigree, and unchangeable duration of Jesus Christ, our great High-priest. He. 6. 20, 'Jesus was made an high-priest after the order of Melchizedek;' 5. 6, 10; Ps. 110. 4; He. 7. 1-24, 'For this Melchizedek, king of Salem and priest of the most high God, met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him; to whom also Abraham gave a tenth part of all the spoil: first being Melchizedek, which is, by interpretation, king of righteousness; and after that

BEDOUIN VILLAGE NEAR JERICHO—THE PLAIN LOT SELECTED.
[Genesis, xiii:10.]—"And Lot lifted up his eyes and beheld all the plain of Jordan, that it was well watered everywhere, before the Lord destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah." In the above picture we have a view of a Bedouin village as it appears to-day, that stands in the very plain of Jordan that Lot saw well watered everywhere. The waters from Elisha's Fountain, that have always been used to irrigate this plain, pass through this village. It would be hard to conceive of a village with a more tumbled-down, wretched appearance than this, and the people who live in the village are as degenerate looking and degraded as one would judge them to be from their place of abode. These houses are seven or eight feet high, and are built of stone, and are then covered with thorny acacia trees. This is about eight miles from the ancient site of Sodom and Gomorrah.

CHAPTER XV.

also, king of Salem, which is king of peace; without father, without mother, mentioned in history, without genealogy, having neither beginning of days nor end of life, recorded in scripture, but made like unto the Son of God, who abideth a priest continually. Consider how great this man was, unto whom even Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils, and who blessed him that had the promises. And, without all contradiction, the less is blessed of the greater. Levi, who receiveth tithes, paid tithes in Abraham. After the similitude of Melchizedek there ariseth another priest, even Jesus, who is made, not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life; and, because he continueth ever, hath an unchangeable priesthood.<sup>1</sup>

Ver. 22. In matters of importance, it is sometimes necessary to interpose an oath for the confirmation of our assertions or engagements, He. 6. 13-17; ch. 21. 31; 26. 31; 31. 53; 1 Sa. 20. 17; Nu. 5. 21; Ex. 22. 11; 1 Ki. 8. 31; 2 Ch. 6. 22, &c. All oaths are to be sworn by God alone, and import a taking of him to witness the truth of what we declare or engage, and calling him to avenge himself upon us if we utter falsehood, or neglect to perform our engagement, ch. 31. 53; De. 6. 13; 10. 20; Is. 45. 23; 65. 16; Je. 12. 16; Ps. 63. 11; He. 6. 13-17. In some cases, the putting of the hand of the inferior under the thigh of his superior was the declaratory sign used in swearing, ch. 24. 9; 47. 29; but lifting up of the hand was the common sign, Ex. 17. 16; De. 32. 40; Da. 12. 7; Re. 10. 5, 6.

REFLECTIONS.—How dreadful is the curse of God! After four hundred years' respite, it breaks forth upon the sinners of Sodom and the places about. From what distant quarters does God bring the executioners of it! How short-lived is that pleasure or quiet which saints attempt to procure by unnecessary connections with wicked men! How becoming and godlike to forget the injuries which we have received; and to risk, or even to lay down, our lives for the brethren! What honour—what comfort—what blessings—attend such a conduct!—But in this Melchizedek, king of Salem and priest of the most high God, let me behold Him who is a priest for ever—Jesus, without father as man, without mother as God—the Lord from heaven! He is King of Righteousness. In his obedience and suffering he made reconciliation for iniquity, and brought in an everlasting righteousness; in righteousness he rules his subjects, and causeth them to work righteousness. He is King of Peace. By his blood he secured our peace with God, with our conscience, and with one another; in his intercession he pleads for it; and by his word and Spirit he effects it. He is our incomparable High-priest, who received not his office from any creature, nor leaves it to another. In and by him we are blessed of God with all spiritual and everlasting blessings; and with his bread and wine, presented in the gospel—his flesh, which is meat indeed, and his blood, which is drink indeed—he refresheth our souls while we are engaged in and after our warfare with sin, Satan, the world, and death. And to him is due, from every minister and saint, the voluntary tithes of everlasting praise.

<sup>5</sup> Righteousness, according to the composition of the word, signifies a full performance of what is ordered—a fulfilling of the whole will of God. Abram believed in the Lord, and it was counted to him, not as standing in, but as becoming righteousness, but as conducting unto righteousness, that is, to Christ, the promised Seed, whose day Abram saw afar off and was glad, Jn. 8. 56, and who alone is 'the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth,' Ro. 10. 4.—C.

<sup>8</sup> The effect of these miraculous interpositions was to isolate Abram's mind entirely from the earthly scenes and thoughts, and to bring him into immediate communion with God. God called a reality, and his voice alone was heard; the mind was filled with the one subject to the exclusion of all else. Thus the divine promise had a reality, and a vividness which impressed it indelibly on the mind of the patriarch.—F.

2 And Abram said, Lord God, 'what wilt thou give me, seeing I go childless, and the steward of my house is this Eliezer of Damascus?

3 And Abram said, 'Behold, to me thou hast given no seed: and, lo, 'one born in my house is mine heir.

4 ¶ And, behold, the word of the LORD came unto him, saying, This shall not be thine heir; but <sup>h</sup>he that shall come forth out of thine own bowels shall be thine heir.

5 And he brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them. And he said unto him, 'So shall thy seed be.

6 ¶ And he <sup>i</sup>believed in the LORD; and he counted it to him for righteousness.<sup>5</sup>

7 ¶ And he said unto him, I am the LORD 'that brought thee out of Ur of the 'Chaldees, to give thee this land to inherit it.

8 And he said, Lord God, 'whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?

9 And he said unto him, Take me an heifer of three years old, and a she-goat of three years old, and a ram of three years old, and a turtle-dove, and a young pigeon.<sup>7</sup>

10 And he took unto him all these, and divided them in the midst, and laid each piece one against another: but the birds divided he not.

11 And when the fowls came down upon the carcases, Abram drove them away.

12 ¶ And when the sun was going down, a deep sleep fell upon Abram; and, lo, an horror of great darkness fell upon him.<sup>8</sup>

promised me, so long as I have no child of my own, but only this Syrian servant, to be my heir. —[Ver. 3. The full force and meaning of Abram's words can only be seen by considering his position in connection with the promise originally given to him. He was not only childless, but to all human appearance hopelessly so. God had promised him that his seed should be as the stars of heaven for multitude. As yet there was no sign, and as he thought, no hope of its fulfilment. Consequently when the Lord now says, 'I am thy shield, &c., Abraham replies in the bitterness of hopelessness, 'What wilt thou give me?' What can make up for the want of a child? 'The heir of my house is this Damascus-Eliezer'—my slave must be my heir. Abram's complaint just amounts to this: All gifts and promises are nothing to me since a child is withheld. P.]

Ver. 8-15. Moved by the Spirit of God, he asked this sign. The beasts he presented to God were emblems of his seed: the heifer prefigured them in their patience, labour, and proneness to backsliding, Ho. 4. 16; the goat in their mischievousness and lust, Je. 5. 7, 8; the ram in their strength and fortitude, Nu. 24. 8, 9; the doves in their simplicity and harmlessness in their purest state, Ps. 74. 19. The division of the four-footed animals (1) represented the torn condition of his seed, by the division of their kingdom, &c., 1 Ki. 11. 12, 13; (2) ratified the covenant made with him and his seed, in God's passing between the pieces, in the symbol of the burning lamp. The pieces being laid over against one another, imported that God would in due time join the separated and scattered Hebrews into one body, Eze. 37. 15-22. The fowls which attempted to light on the pieces, denoted the Egyptians, and other enemies of Israel, which should in vain attempt to devour them, Eze. 17. 3, 7, 12. The horror of great darkness which fell upon Abram, signified their great distress and vexation in Egypt, and under their subse-

BRIDGE AT DAMASCUS—"IN THE OLDEST CITY OF THE WORLD." [GENESIS, xv: 2.]—"And Abram said, Lord God, what wilt thou give me, seeing I go childless, and the steward of my house is this Eliezer of Damascus?" In this second verse of the 15th chapter of Genesis, Damascus is mentioned for the first time in the Bible. Thus we see that two thousand years before Christ, this city was known to Abraham, Father of the Faithful. Because of this Damascus has enjoyed the honor throughout the ages of being regarded as the oldest city in the world. In Damascus the peculiar manners and character of the orientals are seen to perfection. Here we have the houses built around an open court, which is planted with trees, with a trickling fountain in the center. Here are bazaars, coffee houses, goldsmiths and silversmiths and manufacturers of sword blades. About a quarter of a mile from the eastern gate of the city a spot is pointed out as the scene of the conversion of Saint Paul.

16 But in the fourth<sup>8</sup> generation they shall come hither again: for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full.

17 And it came to pass, that, when the sun went down, and it was dark, behold a smoking furnace, and a burning<sup>9</sup> lamp that passed between those pieces.

the LORD hath <sup>b</sup>restrained me from bearing: I pray thee, go in unto my maid; it may be that I may obtain children by her.<sup>1</sup> And Abram <sup>c</sup>hearkened to the voice of Sarai.

3 And Sarai, Abram's wife, took Hagar her maid, the Egyptian, after Abram had dwelt ten years in the land of Canaan, and gave her to her husband Abram, to be his <sup>d</sup>wife.<sup>2</sup> quent oppressors, Ps. 55. 3-5; Da. 10. 8, 9; and hence they are like to a bush burning and not consumed, Ex. 3. 2, 3. The burning lamp denoted their manifest and joyful deliverance, Ju. 6. 21; Is. 62. 1; the smoking furnace, their affliction in Egypt, De. 4. 20; Je. 11. 4. Abram went to his fathers in death, his soul to the world of spirits, and his body to the grave, where they were gone before him, He. 12. 23; Ec. 12. 7; ch. 25. 8, 17; 49. 29; Nu. 20. 21; 27. 13; Ju. 2. 10; 1 Ch. 23. 1; 29. 28; Job. 42. 17; Je. 8. 2. And it was in peace, without remarkable trouble; and in peace with God and his own conscience, and with his neighbours, Ps. 37. 37; Is. 57. 2; 2 Ki. 22. 20. It was also in a good old age: when he was full of years, weary of this world, and ready and longing for heaven, yet free from any of the infirmities of old age, and falling like ripe fruit in the time of gathering, ch. 25. 8; 1 Ch. 29. 28; Job 5. 26.

4 ¶ And he went in unto Hagar, and she conceived: and when she saw that she had conceived, her mistress was <sup>e</sup>despised in her eyes.

Ver. 16. Iniquity is full, when it is arrived at such a number of acts, such a degree of aggravation, and time of continuance, that God, in consistency with his purpose or honour, can no longer forbear to punish it, Je. 51. 13; Da. 8. 23; Joel 3. 12; Mat. 12. 32; 1 Th. 2. 16.

Ver. 17. [Those pieces. The first emblem, a smoking furnace, was an apt representation of the state of Abram's seed under the Egyptians and the Gentiles, see Je. 11. 4; Zec. 13. 9. The second, a burning lamp, was a no less expressive emblem of that world of which they were made the preservers (see Ps. 119. 105; Ro. 3. 7; 9. 4), of that Light of the world (Jn. 1. 9) that was to arise amongst them, and of that finally glorious state of light, that, in the promise of truth and mercy, still awaits them, Is. 60. 1-3; 62. 1. C.]

Ver. 18. Through their sloth and wickedness they never, but in the reign of David and Solomon, possessed the whole territory here assigned them, Ju. i. ii. iii. iv., with 2 Sa. viii. x.; 1 Ki. 4. 21, 24; 2 Ch. 9. 26.—[The river of Egypt is the Nile. The Hebrew word is different from that employed in Nu. 34. 5; Jos. 35. 4; 1 Ki. 8. 65, though in the English version the same phrase is used. In the latter passages the Hebrew word signifies 'torrent-bed,' and not river; and Wady el-Arish is meant. National sin prevented the Israelites from possessing the whole country originally promised to Abraham, Ex. 23. 20-33, with Jos. 23. 13-16; Ju. 2. 20-23. The country as promised here to Abraham was much more extensive than that described by Moses in Nu. xxxiv. P.]

Ver. 19, 20. It seems the Kenites, Kenizzites, Kadmonites, and Rephaims had either been mostly extirpated before the time of Moses, or were blended with the seven nations which he mentions, De. 7. 1, 17-24; Ex. 23. 23; 33. 2; 34. 11.

REFLECTIONS.—Blessed indeed are they whose God is the Lord! There is no woe, no want, to them that fear him! How happy the issue of familiar intimacy with God! Before they call, he answers; and whilst they are yet speaking, he saith, Here I am. Scarcely will he do anything important without revealing his secrets to them. How he condescends to our weakness, in giving us signs in ordinances, signs in providence, for the confirmation of our faith in his promises! But even his faithful ones must often wait long for the beginning or the full accomplishment of these promises; and through manifold trials it must be obtained. Meanwhile, then, let me wait with patient expectation; and with the patriarch, look beyond a numerous seed, and an earthly Canaan, to Jesus, and the travail of his soul, and to the better country above, the everlasting pleasures of which shall more than balance all the discouragements I can meet with by the way.

CHAPTER XVI. Ver. 5. Since you indulge your concubine in her contempt of me, may God plead my cause, and avenge the injury done to me on both you and her, 1 Sa. 24. 12, 15; Ge. 31. 53; Ex. 5. 21; De. 32. 36; 2 Ch. 20. 12; Re. 6. 10.

Ver. 7. Here, and in many other places, the Angel of the Lord, or Angel Jehovah, denotes Jesus Christ, who is the messenger of the new covenant, ch. 22. 11; 48. 16; Ju. 2. 1; 6. 11; 13. 3; Is. 63. 9; Zec. 1. 12; 3. 5; Mal. 3. 1.

Ver. 8, 9. He puts her in mind of her relation to Sarai, to render her sensible of her fault, and dispose her to a dutiful return and subjection to her, Tit. 2. 9; 1 Pe. 2. 18; Ep. 6. 5.

Ver. 10-12. Here it is foretold that Ishmael and his seed should be wild free men, like wild asses; mischievous to all around them, and extremely numerous. For almost four thousand years the fulfilment hath been amazingly remarkable. Ishmael had twelve sons, who gave rise to as many tribes or nations, called by their names, and who dwelt southward in Arabia, before the face or in the presence of their near relations, the Ammonites, Moabites, descendants of Keturah, Edomites, and Jews, ch. 17. 20; 21. 13, 18; 25. 11-18. All along they have been a nuisance and plague to the nations around them; infamous for theft, robbery, revenge, pillage, and murder. It hath therefore been the continued and common interest of mankind to extirpate them from the earth. But though almost every noted conqueror who hath appeared in the world, whether Hebrew, Egyptian, Assyrian, Chaldean, Persian, Grecian, Roman, Tartar, or Turkish, hath pushed his conquests to their borders, or even beyond them into Egypt or Arabia Felix, not one hath ever been able to subdue these Ishmaelites, or deprive them of their freedom. The mighty Shishak, King of Egypt, was obliged to draw a line along their frontiers for the protection of his kingdom from their ravaging inroads. The Assyrians under Salmanneser and Sennacherib, and the Chaldeans under Nebuchadnezzar, greatly harassed them, and almost extirpated some of their tribes, Is. 21. 11-17; Nu. 24. 22; Je. 25. 23, 24; 49. 28-33. Provoked with their contempt, Alexander the Great made vast preparations for their utter destruction; but death cut short his purpose. Antigonos, one of his valiant captains and successors, provoked with their depredations, more than once, but to his repeated

CHAPTER XVII.

1 God reneweth the covenant. 5 Abram's name is changed, in token of greater blessings. 9 Circumcision is instituted. 15 Sarai's name is changed, and she blessed. 17 Isaac is promised. 23 Abraham and Ishmael are circumcised.

AND when Abram was ninety years old and nine the LORD appeared to Abram, and said unto him, I am the Almighty God, walk before me, and be thou perfect.<sup>2</sup>

2 And I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly.

3 And Abram fell on his face: and God talked with him, saying,

4 As for me, behold, my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations.<sup>3</sup>

5 Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram;<sup>4</sup> but thy name shall be Abraham:<sup>5</sup> for a father of many nations have I made thee.

6 And I will make thee exceeding fruitful, dishonour, attempted to subdue them. Flushed with his eastern victories, Pompey, the famed Roman general, attempted to reduce them; but his army being recalled when they had hopes of gaining their purpose, these wild Arabs pursued them, almost at their heels, and dreadfully harassed the Roman subjects in Syria. Augustus, the renowned emperor, made one or more fruitless attempts to subdue them. About A.D. 110, Trajan, one of the most powerful emperors and valiant generals that ever filled the Roman throne, with a mighty army, determined if possible to subdue them, and laid siege to their capital. But storms of hail, which are scarcely ever seen in that country, thunder, lightning, whirlwind, swarms of flies, and dreadful apparitions in the air, terrified or repulsed his troops as often as they repeated their attacks. About eighty years after, Severus, another warlike emperor, determined to punish their siding with Niger, his rival, by an utter reduction of them. But, after he had made a breach on the wall of their principal city, an unaccountable difference between him and his beloved and faithful European troops obliged him to raise the siege, and leave the country. In the seventh century of the Christian era, these Ishmaelites, under Mahomet, their famed impostor, and his successors, furiously extended their empire, and their new and false religion, through a great part of Asia and Africa, and even some countries of Europe, Re. 9. 1-11. Since the fall of their empire, the Turks have made repeated attempts to subdue them; but instead of succeeding, they have been obliged, for near three hundred years past, to pay them a yearly tribute of forty thousand crowns, for procuring a safe passage for their pilgrims to Mecca, the holy city, where Mahomet was born. If, to fulfil his promise, God hath done so much for protecting the temporal liberty of miscreants, what will he not do for the salvation of his people!—[Ver. 12. The 'wild ass' (pere, the Hebrew word here translated 'wild') was the emblem of wild, rude, uncontrollable freedom—total disregard of law and social restraint, Job 24. 5; 11. 12. Such has ever been, and is still, the character of the Arab. He roams free through his native desert. No power has been able to control his movements, or to induce or compel him to adopt the settled habits of civilized life. His hand has been, and is, against every man who, without his protection, enters his country; and the hand of every surrounding ruler has been and is against him. Yet he dwells to this day, as he has done for nearly forty centuries, in the presence of all his brethren. He meets them on the east, west, north, and south; and none can extirpate or subdue him. P.—Against every man, and every man's hand against him. The descendants of Ishmael were divided into tribes, after the manner of the Jews, differing to a certain extent in dispositions, habits, character, and government. Many of them made great advances in civilization and learning; and exhibited the ordinary aspect of powerful, settled, and regular communities. Still there has been a vast number, of whom the Bedouins are most generally known, who have, in all ages, practically and literally realized this prediction, and lived, as they still do, in a state of uninterrupted hostility with all men; seeking no home but the desert, submitting to no law but their will, and acknowledging no right but their sword; 'their hand against every man, and every man's hand against them.'—And he shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren. To ascertain the meaning of this phrase, we must recollect that one peculiarity in the prophecies concerning the Jews—another branch of the Abrahamic tree—was, De. 28. 64, 'And the Lord shall scatter thee among all people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other.' Now this was foretold of the child of the promise, the descendants of Isaac; but of Ishmael, the son of the bond-woman, it is said, He shall dwell in the presence of all his brethren; that is, while Israel shall be scattered, dispersed, and outcast, Is. 11. 12, from the land promised to Abram, Ishmael shall abide in the land promised to Hagar. The event has verified the prediction, and proved that it proceeded from him who 'determined the bounds of their habitation.' Israel is scattered in judgment as chaff of the thrashing-floor; Ishmael abides immovable as Sinai. C.]

Ver. 13. Have I, in this desert as well as in my master's family, and notwithstanding my misbehaviour, received a gracious visit from God, as my powerful guardian and kind benefactor? and have I duly considered, and thanked him for, and improved the same? Ps. 9. 13; Lu. 1. 48, 49.

REFLECTIONS.—The best of saints too often degrade themselves to obtain what they desire before God's time, and with some plausible pretences endeavour to conceal their guilt. An uneasiness of temper, and too much affection to creatures, often induce us to comply with their sinful proposals. But the best intended transgressions will quickly issue in shame and trouble to the guilty, especially if saints; while our tempters prove our first and principal accusers. How transcendent the mercy of God, in visiting transgressors in the very troubles which they had drawn upon their own heads! Yet remember no happy deliverance is to be expected but in the way of returning to our duty. Let me never therefore hope for comfort in children, or in anything besides, but in the Lord's way. Let me always leave it to him to give his promise a proper and honourable accomplishment in the season which he thinks fit. And if he grant me undesired visits, while the yoke of my transgressions is wreathed about my neck, let me with wonder remark his kindness, and take to myself shame and confusion of face.

CHAPTER XVII. Ver. 1. The name Shaddai, rendered Almighty, denotes all-sufficiency, as well as infinite power. And what strong encouragement to the study of perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord is it, that God is all-sufficient and almighty to prepare us for, assist us in, and reward us for it; 2 Co. 12. 8. 'My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness'; Phi. 2. 12, 13, 'Work out your salvation with fear and trembling, for it is God which worketh in you, both to will and to do, of his good pleasure'; 1 Co. 15. 58, 'Be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord; knowing that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.'—[Almighty

God. This is the first time Jehovah calls himself Almighty; or, as some render it, and the word will bear, All-sufficient. It is important to remark, that God, whose perfections are infinite, can never, in the language of a finite being, fully bring out the catalogue of his attributes. But, on all occasions, he puts forth that special view of his perfections which is best calculated, in his special circumstances, to be the pillar of the believer's faith. Abram was a stranger, and surrounded by enemies, God therefore declares himself the Almighty, able to protect him in all dangers, as well as to fulfil all his promises. C.—El-Shaddai, 'God-Almighty,' was the name by which the Lord announced himself or made himself formally known to Abram and to the early patriarchs. It indicated the special relationship in which he stood to them:—he was their omnipotent Protector and Provider in a strange land. P.]

Ver. 2. God's making a covenant here, and in many other places, denotes the enlargement, renewal, establishment, or confirmation of it. It cannot be imagined that, in the various instances in which this phrase is used, he had not respect to his former declarations of the same kind as still in force, Ps. 105. 8-10; Ge. 15. 18; Ex. 34. 10-27; 1 Ki. 8. 9; Je. 31. 33; Ho. 2. 18; Ge. 6. 18; ver. 7, 19, 21; Ex. 6. 4; Le. 27. 9; De. 8. 18; Eze. 16. 60, 62.

Ver. 3. He fell on his face, in token of his fear and reverence, as being afraid and ashamed to look upon God; ver. 17; Ex. 3. 6; Le. 9. 24; Nu. 22. 31; Jos. 5. 14; Ju. 13. 20; Eze. 1. 28; 3. 23; 9. 8; 42. 3; Da. 8. 17; Mat. 17. 6; Re. 1. 17; Ps. 89. 7, 'God is greatly to be feared—to be had in reverence of all that are round about him'; 95. 6, 'Let us worship and bow down before the Lord'; Ps. 96. 4, 9; 91. 9; Re. 15. 4.

Ver. 4. Abram was not only the natural parent of multitudes, and the example and teacher of faith to all believers, but was the covenant-head with respect to the Israelitish nation, and was typical of Jesus Christ as the covenant-head and father of all who believe, ch. 12. 2; Ro. 4. 16, 17; Ga. 3. 28, 29.—[This was fulfilled to the letter. Abram was the progenitor of the Ishmaelites, the Jews, the several nations of the Keturites, the Edomites, &c. P.]

Ver. 5. God's giving names to persons, imports his making them to correspond with them in their condition or usefulness, ch. 32. 28; 2 Sa. 12. 25; Is. 62. 2, 4, 5; Re. 2. 17; Je. 20. 3; 23. 6; 33. 16; Mat. 1. 21. Abram signifies high father; Abraham, the high father of a multitude; Sarai, my princess; Sarah, princess of a multitude.

Ver. 6. The Ishmaelites, Midianites, Edomites, Hebrews, and their kings, ver. 20; Nu. xxxi.; Ge. xxxvi., Mat. i., but chiefly Jesus and his spiritual subjects, Re. 17. 14; 15. 3; 11. 15; 1. 6; 1 Pe. 2. 9; Ps. 45. 16.

Ver. 7. Isaac and his Hebrew descendants were properly the natural seed with whom this covenant was established, ver. 21. By it God in Christ became, to the Hebrews in general, the head of their nation and church, and assumed them for his peculiar people: he bestowed upon them the land of Canaan as his land, in the enjoyment of which they tasted his goodness,

be of her.

17 Then Abraham <sup>o</sup>fell upon his face, and laughed, and said in his heart, Shall a child be born unto him that is an hundred years old? and shall Sarah, that is ninety years old, bear?

18 And Abraham said unto God, Oh that Ishmael might live before thee!

19 And God said, "Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed; and thou shalt call his name Isaac: and I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him.

20 And as for Ishmael, I have heard thee: Behold, I have blessed him, <sup>a</sup>and will make him fruitful, and will multiply him exceedingly: twelve princes shall he beget; and I will make him a great nation.<sup>2</sup>

21 But my covenant will I establish with Isaac, which Sarah shall bear unto thee at this set time in the next year.

22 And he <sup>1</sup>left off talking with him, and God went up from Abraham.<sup>3</sup>

23 ¶ And Abraham took Ishmael his son, and all that were born in his house, and all that were bought with his money, every male among the men of Abraham's house, and <sup>t</sup>circumcised the flesh of their foreskin in the self-same day, as God had said unto him.<sup>4</sup>

24 And<sup>u</sup> Abraham was ninety years old and nine when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin.

25 And Ishmael his son was thirteen years old when he was circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin.

26 In the self-same day was Abraham circumcised and Ishmael his son;
27 And all the men of his house, born in the

Ex. 31. 14; Le. 18. 29; 19. 8; 20. 3, 5, 6, 17; Nu. 15. 30, 31. And surely there is no injustice that a presumptuous and obstinate rebel against a fundamental law of the church and nation of God should be punished with death.

Ver. 14. Not infants, who could not circumcise themselves, but such as wilfully neglected this ordinance when they were grown up, would nationally be cut off from their people. Such as renounced the distinguishing badge of Abraham's seed, renounced their covenant-alliance with God, and fellowship with his people. Nothing could therefore be more reasonable than that they should be excluded from the privileges of the Hebrew church and nation, and accounted as heathens. And this is perhaps the whole import of cutting off from his people, in most of the passages where we find it, Ex. 12. 15, 19; 30. 33, 38; Le. 7. 20, 21, 25, 27; 17. 4, 9, 10, 14; 22. 3; Nu. 9. 3; 19. 13, 20. But, in some cases, death, by the immediate hand of God, or of the magistrate, is certainly included, or therewith connected.

Ver. 17. Abraham laughed, in virtue of his firm belief of the promise, and his satisfaction therein, Ro. 4. 19, 20; Jn. 8. 56; but Sarah laughed in unbelieving derision, ch. 18. 12.

Ver. 18. Let Ishmael live, and prosper in thy favour, and under thy special care, ch. 48. 15; Ps. 31. 22.

REFLECTIONS.—How infinite the extent, how rich the mercy, of God's granting himself, as God Almighty, God All-sufficient, to be my God, and the God of my seed! Let me by faith heartily and loudly catch the word at his mouth, and cry—'My Lord and my God, and the God of my seed! Thrice blessed heritage of the hosts of nations, secured to us as our portion for ever!' Though neither my house nor my heart be so with God as they ought, yet he hath made with me the everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure; and this is all my salvation and all my desire. Upon this foundation let me and mine be sealed to the day of redemption, by receiving the circumcision which is of Christ. Through his blood shed for us, and his Spirit applied to us, must our natural corruptions be mortified, our hearts purified, and our souls saved. Without this we can in no wise enter the kingdom of God. Nor let me ever forget to entreat that the Ishmaels of my carnal relations may be made alive to God through Jesus Christ our Lord; be partakers of his covenant-blessings now, and live before him for ever hereafter.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 Abraham entertaineth three angels. 9 Sarah is reproved for laughing at the strange promise. 17 The destruction of Sodom is revealed to Abraham. 23 Abraham maketh intercession for the men thereof.

AND the LORD appeared unto him in the plains of Mamre: and he sat in the tent-door in the heat of the day;

2 And* he lift up his eyes and looked, and, lo, three men stood by him: and, when he saw them, he <sup>b</sup>ran to meet them from the tent-door, and bowed himself toward the ground,

3 And said, My Lord,<sup>5</sup> if now I have found favour in thy sight, pass not away, I pray thee, from thy servant.

4 Let a little water, I pray you, be fetched, and wash your feet,<sup>6</sup> and rest yourselves under the tree;

5 And I will fetch a morsel of bread, and comfort<sup>7</sup> ye your hearts; after that ye shall pass on: <sup>c</sup>for therefore are ye come<sup>8</sup> to your servant. And they said, So do as thou hast said.<sup>9</sup>

6 And Abraham hastened into the tent unto Sarah, and said, Make ready<sup>1</sup> quickly <sup>a</sup>three measures of fine meal, knead it, and make cakes upon the hearth.

7 And Abraham ran unto the herd, and fetched a calf <sup>a</sup>tender and good, and gave it unto a young man; and he hasted to dress it.

8 And he took butter and milk, and the calf which he had dressed, and set it before them; and he stood by them under the tree, and <sup>d</sup>they did eat.<sup>2</sup>

9 ¶ And they said unto him, Where is Sarah thy wife? And he said, Behold, in the tent.

10 And he <sup>e</sup>said, I will certainly return unto thee according to the time of life;<sup>3</sup> and, lo, Sarah thy wife shall have a son. And Sarah heard it in the tent-door, which was behind him.

11 Now <sup>b</sup>Abraham and Sarah were old and well stricken in age; and it ceased to be with Sarah after the manner of women.

12 Therefore Sarah laughed within herself, saying, <sup>a</sup>After I am waxed old shall I have pleasure, my lord being old also?

13 And the LORD said unto Abraham, Wherefore did Sarah laugh, saying, Shall I of a surety bear a child, which am old?

14 Is<sup>a</sup> any thing too hard for the LORD? At the time appointed I will return unto thee, ac-

9 The hospitality of the Arabs, especially those who dwell in tents, is proverbial. No stranger could pass a tent door without receiving a pressing invitation to enter. I have many times been addressed by Arab chiefs in words almost identical with those in the text. The Bedawin are polite as they are hospitable. Their manners are polished and dignified, and their language chaste. They are profuse in the use of titles of honour, saluting every stranger as 'my lord.' In their cookery, too, I have found them as expeditious as is here represented.—P.

15 Then Sarah <sup>b</sup>denied, saying, I laughed not: for she was afraid. And he said, Nay; but thou didst laugh.

16 And the men rose up from thence, and looked toward Sodom: and Abraham went with them to bring them on the way.

17 ¶ And the LORD said, <sup>m</sup>Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do;

18 Seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and <sup>n</sup>all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in him?

19 For <sup>o</sup>I know him, that he <sup>p</sup>will <sup>q</sup>command his children, and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the LORD, to do justice and judgment; that the LORD may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him.

23 ¶ And Abraham drew near, and said, <sup>u</sup>Wilt thou also destroy the righteous with the wicked?

24 Peradventure there be fifty righteous within the city: wilt thou also destroy and not spare the place for the fifty righteous that are therein?

25 That<sup>7</sup> be far from thee to do after this manner, to slay the righteous with the wicked; and that the righteous should be as the wicked, that be far from thee: Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?

26 And the LORD said, <sup>v</sup>If I find in Sodom fifty righteous within the city, then I will spare all the place for their sakes.

27 And Abraham answered and said, <sup>w</sup>Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the LORD, which am but dust and ashes:

<sup>4</sup> The sacred historian, tracing the history of Abraham, has for some time been silent as to Lot. Though he had ungenerously taken the preference over Abraham, and fully chosen the rich plain of Sodom, yet he is called in Scripture a "righteous man vexed with his wickedness," and as such he must be delivered.—J.

<sup>6</sup> Lot had been trained to tent life. He had the feelings of a genuine Bedawey in regard to the claims of hospitality. He acted in the city as he would have acted in the desert—he not only invited, but he pressed, the strangers to enter his house. No invitation was given by any of the people of Sodom. It is the same to this day in Syria, a stranger would be left to lie in the street of a large city, while if passing through an Arab encampment he would get a pressing invitation to every tent.—F.

<sup>7</sup> That temptation may lead a wise man to say a foolish thing, and a good man to purpose or do an evil thing, is often exhibited in the history of frail humanity. There can be no excuse, nor should any one be attempted, for Lot in this offer. To violate hospitality would, no doubt, have been wrong; but one sin cannot be remedied by another. He is brought forcibly out, and warned to escape to the mountains; yet he entreats a refuge in a city of the plains. But the weakness of man is overruled to magnify the mercy of the LORD, who hearkens to his humble intercession, and spares the city for his sake. The name of this city, formerly Bela, Ge. 14. 2, was changed to Zoar, which signifies little, in commemoration of the plea for mercy which Lot presented.—Note. 9 And they said, <sup>10</sup>Stand back. And they said again, This <sup>11</sup>one fellow came in to sojourn, and he will needs be a judge: now will we deal worse with thee than with them. And they pressed sore upon the man, even Lot, and came near to break the door.<sup>8</sup>

10 But the men put forth their hand, and pulled Lot into the house to them, and shut to the door.

11 And they smote the men that were at the door of the house with blindness,<sup>9</sup> both small and great: so that they <sup>12</sup>wearied themselves to find the door.

12 ¶ And the men said unto Lot, <sup>13</sup>Hast thou here any besides? son-in-law, and thy sons, and thy daughters, and whatsoever thou hast in the city, bring them out of this place:

13 For <sup>14</sup>we will destroy this place, because the cry of them is waxen great before the face of the LORD; and the LORD hath sent us to destroy it.

14 And Lot went out, and spake unto his sons-in-law, which married his daughters, and said, <sup>15</sup>Up, get you out of this place; for the LORD will destroy this city. But he <sup>16</sup>seemed as one that mocked unto his sons-in-law.

REFLECTIONS.—Whilst I highly esteem the kind simplicity and humble modesty of these ancient times, let me chiefly admire the kindness of my Redeemer, in so frequently visiting our world in human shape, before the fulness of time for his being made of a woman! But alas, that ever his messages of peace should be laughed to scorn!—laughed to scorn by a saint! O what infinite mercy and patience, that he did not strike her—that he doth not strike us—dead in the very act of unbelief! How great is the honour and kindness which God hath prepared for such as are careful to win souls! While his procedure to punish the most abandoned transgressors is gradual and slow, readily he grants whatever forbearance his favourites can ask on their behalf—but much more what is asked on behalf of his children. What a deep sense of their own meanness and pollution familiar intercourse with God produceth in the choicest saints! His presence must always fill them with a holy fear, while, as their covenant God, they dare to plead before him, assured of a ready audience and a gracious answer.

THE DEAD SEA—WHERE SODOM AND GOMORRAH ARE SUPPOSED TO HAVE BEEN SITUATED. [GENESIS, xix: 29.]—"And it came to pass, when God destroyed the cities of the plain, that God remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the midst of the overthrow, when he overthrew the cities in which Lot dwelt." The cities of the plain are supposed to have been Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim, and they were situated in the midst of the garden-like plain that lies between the Moab mountains and the Judean Mountains, just to the north of the Dead Sea. A shower of brimstone and fire fell upon these cities, we are told in the nineteenth chapter of Genesis, and destroyed them. The sites, especially of Sodom and Gomorrah, are now supposed to be under the waters of the Dead Sea at the upper and northern end of it. This part of the sea is represented in the view given above. The awful doom of Sodom and Gomorrah is held up in numerous passages in the Old and New Testament as warnings, as Mark, vi: 11; II. Peter, ii: 6; Jude i: 7.

in thy sight, and thou hast magnified thy mercy, which thou hast showed unto me in saving my life; and I cannot escape to the mountain, lest some evil take me, and I die.

20 Behold now, this city is near to flee unto, and it is a little one: Oh! let me escape thither, (is it not a little one?) and my soul shall live.

21 And he said unto him, See, I have accepted thee<sup>3</sup> concerning this thing also, that I will not overthrow this city, for the which thou hast spoken.

22 Haste thee, escape thither; for I cannot do any thing<sup>4</sup> till thou be come thither: therefore the name of the city was called Zoar.

23 The sun was risen upon the earth when Lot entered into Zoar.

24 ¶ Then the LORD rained<sup>5</sup> upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the LORD out of heaven:

25 And he overthrew those cities, and all the plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and that which grew upon the ground.

26 ¶ But his wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt.<sup>6</sup>

27 ¶ And Abraham gat up early in the morning to the place where he stood before the LORD:

28 And he looked toward Sodom and Gomorrah, and toward all the land of the plain, and beheld, and, lo, the smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace.

29 And it came to pass, when God destroyed the cities of the plain, that God remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the midst of the overthrow, when he overthrew the cities in the which Lot dwelt.

30 ¶ And Lot went up out of Zoar, and dwelt in the mountain, and his two daughters with him; for he feared to dwell in Zoar: and he dwelt in a cave, he and his two daughters.

h The raining of brimstone and fire from heaven, has been made the subject of ridicule by thoughtless infidels. Yet would they reflect for a moment, they would remember how it is said, The rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, Is. 55. 10. Yet that rain and that snow were previously exhaled from the waters. In like manner, may not the brimstone have first been ejected from the bowels of the earth, where its terrible stores abound, and then again be literally rained from heaven!—C.

k Burning sulphur produces a vapour which, if it once fill the lungs, is instantly destructive to life. Lot's wife, looking back, while the vapour followed, was accordingly suffocated. This vapour, and the bituminous fire (see De. 29. 23), would literally convert the body into a salt. And the body being deprived of motion, and becoming rigid in a standing posture, and it may be surrounded and sustained by various volcanic products, would literally become a pillar, or statue, of salt.—C.

7 We have said, on the evidence of Peter, that Lot was a righteous man; but how is the character consistent with this horrible narrative? Simply on the same ground that Peter's blasphemous denials of our Lord, Mat. 26. 70, 74, is consistent with his afterwards weeping bitterly, when Jesus turned and looked on him. The Scriptures record the sins of men, because they must tell truth; and they denounce their punishment or display their evil consequences, or record the repentance of the sinner, to teach us to flee from the wrath to come.—C.

3 But God came to Abimelech in a dream by night,<sup>3</sup> and said to him, Behold, thou art but a dead man, for the woman which thou hast taken; for she is a man's wife.

4 But Abimelech had not come near her: and he said, LORD, wilt thou slay also a righteous nation?

5 Said he not unto me, She is my sister? and she, even she herself said, He is my brother: in the integrity<sup>4</sup> of my heart, and innocency of my hands, have I done this.

6 And God said unto him in a dream, Yea, I know that thou didst this in the integrity of thy heart; for I also withheld thee from sinning against me: therefore suffered I thee not to touch her.

7 Now therefore restore the man his wife; for he is a prophet, and he shall pray for thee, and thou shalt live: and if thou restore her not, know<sup>5</sup> thou that thou shalt surely die, thou, and all that are thine.

8 Therefore Abimelech rose early in the morning, and called all his servants, and told all these things in their ears:<sup>5</sup> and the men were sore afraid.

9 ¶ Then Abimelech called Abraham, and said unto him, What hast thou done unto us? And what have I offended thee, that thou hast brought on me, and on my kingdom, a great sin? thou hast done deeds unto me that ought not to be done.

10 And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What sawest thou, that thou hast done this thing?<sup>6</sup>

11 And Abraham said, Because I thought, Surely<sup>7</sup> the fear of God is not in this place; and they will slay me for my wife's sake.

12 And yet indeed she is my sister; she is the daughter of my father, but not the daughter of my mother; and she became my wife.

13 And it came to pass, when God caused me to wander from my father's house, that I said unto her, This is thy kindness which thou shalt show unto me; at every place whither we shall come, say of me, He is my brother.

He translates it thus:—'And to Sarah he said, Behold, I have given to thy brother a thousand shekels of silver: behold, he is to thee a protection, and to all who are with thee, and with all: and thou wilt be recognized.' His exposition is as follows:—'Since Sarah deserved likewise a compensation for the anxiety suffered by her in the house of the stranger, he gave to Abraham for her a thousand shekels of silver, and addressed to her a remark embodying the experience which he had just made, and the respect with which it inspired him; he said, though she might profess that Abraham was her brother, he was her protector against every man; she might be taken by others as his sister, but she would soon be known and convicted of being his wife by the supernatural interference of God, who, both in his case and that of the Egyptian king, had watched over her purity.' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—In my wanderings through this world let me commit myself and all my concerns to God, as my God! If Jehovah be my God, my shield, and my exceeding great reward, I have no need of assistance or protection from Satan, nor of any evasive arts to shelter me from danger. Never therefore let remarkable favours from God be immediately followed with sinful unwatchfulness and fear of man, which causeth a snare! And if I have been once overcome by them, let me take heed to my steps, lest my last error be worse than my first; but especially if I have real grace, let me beware of becoming a tempter to the profane or graceless! How much God detests uncleanness! To prevent it he inflicts judgments upon and gives extraordinary warnings even to heathens. How pitiful are the best excuses which men, particularly saints, can make for their sinning! And it must be considered as an infinite mercy that God, though he sometimes puts his people to shame for their folly, takes more care of their honour, and especially of the honour of his promises, than they do. And the prayers of penitent saints are profitable to the greatest men upon earth.

<sup>8</sup> 'God,' says James, 1.13, 'is not tempted of evil, neither tempteth he any man.' How then does this consort with the statement that God tempted Abraham? God tempted no man to evil; but God tried the faith of his children by labours, difficulty, affliction, self-denial, and sacrifice.—C.—'Try' would be a more appropriate word here than 'tempt.' Temptation, as we understand it, implies 'inducement to sin.' Nothing of the kind is, or can be, implied here. Trial is often man's best teacher. He knows not his own weakness and want on the one hand, nor his own courage and faith on the other, until he has been tried. Trial therefore is a wholesome discipline to the person tried. Besides, God is pleased to instruct the world by examples as well as by direct precept. The example of Abraham's faith and devotion to God has cheered and instructed the universal church.—P.

God, that thou wilt not deal falsely with me, nor with my son, nor with my son's son: but according to the kindness that I have done unto thee, thou shalt do unto me, and to the land wherein thou hast sojourned.

24 And Abraham said, <sup>1</sup>I will swear.

25 And Abraham reproved Abimelech <sup>1</sup>because of a well of water, which Abimelech's servants had violently taken away.<sup>8</sup>

26 And Abimelech said, <sup>1</sup>I wot not who hath done this thing; neither didst thou tell me, neither yet heard I of it, but to-day.

27 And Abraham <sup>1</sup>took sheep and oxen, and gave them unto Abimelech; and both of them made a covenant.

28 And Abraham set seven ewe-lambs of the flock by themselves.

29 And Abimelech said unto Abraham, What mean these seven ewe-lambs which thou hast set by themselves?

30 And he said, For these seven ewe-lambs shalt thou take of my hand, that they <sup>1</sup>may be a witness unto me that I have digged this well.

31 Wherefore he called that place <sup>1</sup>Beer-sheba, because there they sware both of them.

32 Thus they made <sup>1</sup>a covenant at Beer-sheba: then Abimelech rose up, and Phichol the chief captain of his host, and they returned into the land of the Philistines.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 Abraham is tempted to offer Isaac. 3 He giveth proof of his faith and obedience. 11 The angel stayeth him. 13 Isaac is changed with a ram. 14 The place is called Jehovah-jireh. 15 Abraham is blessed again. 20 The generations of Nahor, from whom came Rebekah.

AND it came to pass after these things, that <sup>1</sup>God did tempt<sup>3</sup> Abraham, and said unto him, Abraham. And he said, Behold, here I am.<sup>4</sup>

2 And he said, Take now <sup>1</sup>thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of <sup>1</sup>Moriah, and offer him there for a burnt-offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of.

Ver. 12. <sup>1</sup>Isaac, as thine heir, shall bear and propagate thy name; and the promised seed and land, and the spiritual prerogatives, shall be entailed upon him, Ro. 9. 7, 8; He. 11. 8.

Ver. 14. Bread and water include all necessary provision; of which it is probable they had sufficient to have served them till they had gotten to Hagar's friends in Egypt, had they not lost their way.

Ver. 25-30. In these hot countries a well was of great value, ch. 26. 18, 20, 21. Abimelech's acceptance of the seven ewe-lambs imported his renunciation of all claim to this well.

Ver. 33. The planting of groves for the opportunity of greater retirement when worshipping God, being afterwards abused to promote idolatry and superstition, was forbidden, Ex. 34. 13; De. 16. 21.

REFLECTIONS.—What a pleasure God sometimes takes to delay the fulfilment of promises, till it becomes, humanly speaking, improbable, if not impossible, for the trial of our faith and patience; but he never defers it a moment beyond the due time; and the joys which attend the seasonable fulfilment thereof are great and certain: and yet even then our attempts to anticipate it often mingle our joys with wormwood and gall! How proper in all our straits to consult the Lord, and to request and hope for his watchful care over our relations, particularly such as are exposed to dangers! Let my care be to honour God in all my conduct, and he will take care to honour me before the world, as is good in his sight! And while Sarah and her family rejoice over her son, let me, let all the redeemed, rejoice that 'to us a Child is born, to us a Son is given, whose name is Wonderful,' and that God in him hath made us, like Isaac, children of the promise! Let us Gentiles rejoice that while the Hebrews are, like Ishmael, cast out, to be wandering, wild, and hated, we are called to the fellowship of the sons of God! Here likewise let us observe how sharply God corrects those who have been insolent despisers of others, and how near the most seasonable mercies may be, whilst we perceive them not!

CHAPTER XXII. Ver. 1. God tempts no man by enticing him to sin, Ja. 1. 13; nor doth the word nissah here used ever signify any such thing, but to try exquisitely; nor doth God try men in order to promote or confirm his own knowledge of them, but to manifest what they are to themselves and to the world, that his rewarding or punishing them may appear the more wise and equal, or his blessing them the more gracious, De. 3. 2; 13. 3; Ju. 2. 22; 2 Ch. 32. 31; Ps. 139-

THE ROCK IN THE TEMPLE—WHERE ABRAHAM IS SAID TO HAVE STARTED TO SACRIFICE ISAAC. [GENESIS, xxii: 3.]—"And Abraham rose up early in the morning, and saddled his ass, and took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son, and clave the wood for the burnt offering, and rose up, and went unto the place of which God had told him." This Rock in the Temple is now inclosed by the Mosque of Omar. It is claimed that upon this rock Abraham prepared to slay his son at God's command, and here in later days David built his altar upon the threshing floor of Araunah the Jebusite, where the angel of the pestilence stayed his hand. Here stood the first temple in which Jehovah dwelt. It was at this place that God said, "Here will I dwell, for I have desired it." And in the sacrificial victims which for hundreds of years were offered on this spot, there was remembrance made of the promise of a nobler sacrifice which could alone procure the remission of sins.

3 ¶ And Abraham <sup>4</sup>rose up early<sup>4</sup> in the morning, and saddled his ass, and took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son, and clave the wood for the burnt-offering, and rose up, and <sup>5</sup>went unto the place of which God had told him.

4 Then on the <sup>6</sup>third day Abraham lifted up his eyes, and saw the place afar off.

5 And Abraham said unto his young men, Abide<sup>7</sup> ye here with the ass; and I and the lad will go yonder and worship, and come again to you.<sup>5</sup>

6 And Abraham took the wood of the burnt-offering, and <sup>8</sup>laid it upon Isaac his son; and he took the fire in his hand, and a knife: and they went both of them together.

7 And Isaac spake unto Abraham his father, and said, My father. And he said, Here am I, my son. And he said, Behold the fire and the wood; but where is the lamb<sup>6</sup> for a burnt-offering?

8 And Abraham said, My son, <sup>9</sup>'God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt-offering: so they went both of them together.

9 And they came to the <sup>10</sup>'place which God had told him of; and Abraham built an altar there, and laid the wood in order, and bound Isaac his son, and <sup>11</sup>'laid him on the altar upon the wood.

10 And Abraham stretched forth his hand, and took the knife to slay his son.

11 ¶ And the <sup>12</sup>'angel of the LORD called unto him out of heaven, and said, Abraham, Abraham! And he said, Here am I.

12 And he said, <sup>13</sup>'Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou any thing unto him; for now <sup>14</sup>'I know that thou fearest God, seeing 14 And Abraham <sup>15</sup>'called the name of that place Jehovah-jireh:<sup>7</sup> as it is said to this day, <sup>16</sup>'In the mount of the LORD it shall be seen.

By this command God tried the faith of Abraham with respect to his believing that in Isaac his seed should be called; and that through the death of the Messiah he and other believers should obtain everlasting salvation; and tried his obedience in the most tender point that could be conceived—his deliberate slaying of his darling, his only son by his wife, his only son now left in his own house, ch. 21. 1, 12, 14.

Ver. 2. [Moriah signifies 'the vision' or 'manifestation of Jehovah.' The name is here given to 'the land' on one of whose mountains the sacrifice was to be offered up; it is also given to the mountain on which the temple was built. The common belief is that these two places were identical, and we see no reason to doubt or question it. Mount Moriah is an oblong-shaped hill, or rather point of a ridge, having the deep glen of the Tyropeon on the west, and the Kidron on the east. The glens unite at the foot of the hill on the south. The elevation of the summit above the bottom of the glens is about 350 feet. Moriah is now crowned by the Great Mosque, and is one of the most venerated sanctuaries of the Mohammedans. P.]

Ver. 6. As Isaac bore the wood, so Christ bore our sins and his cross, the cause and means of his suffering, Is. 53. 6; 1 Pe. 2. 24; Jn. 19. 17; and so we ought to bear our cross, Lu. 14. 27.

Ver. 9. Isaac, though able to resist, yielded up himself, as typical of Christ's voluntary oblation of himself for us, Phil. 2. 8; Ep. 5. 2; Ac. 8. 32.

Ver. 13. This ram was directed hither by divine providence, as a figure of Christ appointed of God, and engaged to make atonement for our sins, 1 Pe. 1. 19; Job 33. 24.

Ver. 14. In the extremities of distress God interposed as an helper and deliverer, De. 32. 36; Mi. 4. 10; Mat. 15. 32. And on Mount Moriah in the temple God was long manifested in the symbols of his presence, 2 Ch. 3. 1; Ps. 76. 2; and there Jesus often appeared while in the flesh, Hag. 2. 7; Jn. ii. v. vii.—x.

Ver. 16-18. He. 6. 13-18. 'When God made promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, he swore by himself, saying, Surely blessing I will bless thee, &c.—an oath for confirmation is an end of all strife; wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath, that by two immutable things, his word and oath, in which it is impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation.' The promises here solemnly confirmed by oath almost wholly related to his Hebrew and his spiritual seed, ch. 21. 12. To possess the gates of their enemies, is to obtain their country, or have dominion over them, and rule among them, ch. 24. 60; De. 21. 19; 22. 24; 25. 7. The Jews had temporal dominion over their enemies in the time of Joshua, David, &c., Jos. vi.—xix.; 2 Sa. viii. x. And Christ and his people have a spiritual dominion over theirs, Ps. 2. 8, 9; 22. 27-30; Da. 4. 34, 35; Col. 2. 15; 1 Co. 15. 25, 57; Ro. 8. 37.

Ver. 24. Concubines were women of a middle condition, between wives and harlots; a kind of half-wives, sharing in bed and board, but not in the government of the family, ch. 25. 1, 6; 30. 4; 35. 22; Ju. 19. 1; 1 Ki. 11. 3; 1 Ch. 1. 32. They served under the lawful wives, if alive, ch. 16. 6, 7; 32. 22; and their children had no title to the inheritance, ch. 25. 5, 6.

REFLECTIONS.—How necessary to count the cost when we enter upon a religious life! for who knows how many and how great our trials in it may be, since trials are increased in proportion to men's faith and spiritual comfort. Those trials are most afflicting to the believer which not only fly in the face of natural affection, or of outward honour and pleasure, but even threaten to frustrate the promises of God; yet thrice happy are they who, under the sorest trials, heartily acquiesce in the will of God, and firmly cleave to his promise, who, though he slay them, yet will still trust in him! For often when the nights of trial are at the very darkest, the Lord steps in, compasseth them about with songs of deliverance, and blesseth with all spiritual blessings in Christ Jesus. But while I admire the faith and obedience of Abraham, and the cheerful submission of Isaac—while I place these bright examples before me—my faith directs me to more glorious objects: let me with astonishment think of JEHOVAH bringing his only begotten Son into this world, permitting him to be laid on the altar, and through his sacrifice forgiving our sins! Let me behold Jesus caught, seasonably caught, in the thickets of men's wilful transgressions of his own compassion, and of our transgressions resting on him, and borne in our stead! Let me listen to the new testament in his blood, in which JEHOVAH swears that men shall be blessed in him, and all nations shall call him blessed.

CHAPTER XXIII.

AND Sarah was <sup>a</sup>an hundred and seven and twenty years old: these were the years of the life of Sarah.

2 And Sarah died in <sup>b</sup>Kirjath-arba; the same is Hebron in the land of Canaan: and Abraham came to <sup>c</sup>mourn for Sarah, and to weep for her.

3 ¶ And Abraham stood up from before his dead, and spake unto the sons of Heth, saying,

4 I am a <sup>d</sup>stranger and a sojourner with you: give me a possession of a burying-place with you, that I may <sup>e</sup>bury my dead out of my sight.

5 And the children of Heth answered Abraham, saying unto him,

6 Hear us, my lord: Thou art a mighty prince<sup>f</sup> among us; in the choice of our sepulchres bury thy dead: none of us shall withhold from thee his sepulchre, but that thou mayest bury thy dead.

7 And Abraham stood up, and <sup>g</sup>bowed himself to the people of the land, even to the children of Heth.

8 And he communed with them, saying, If it be your mind that I should bury my dead out of my sight, hear me, and entreat for me to Ephron the son of Zohar, 9 That he may give me the cave of Machpelah,<sup>h</sup> which he hath, which is in the end of his field; for as much money<sup>i</sup> as it is worth he shall give it me, for a possession of a burying-place among you.

10 And Ephron dwelt<sup>j</sup> among the children of Heth. And Ephron the Hittite answered Abraham in the audience of the children of Heth, even of all that went in at the gate<sup>k</sup> of his<sup>l</sup> city, saying, 11 Nay, my lord, hear me: The field <sup>m</sup>give<sup>n</sup> I thee, and the cave that is therein, I give it thee; <sup>o</sup>in the presence of the sons of my people give I it thee: bury thy dead.

<sup>g</sup> Abraham's care about the marriage of Isaac, suggests an important parental duty. The rich Canaanites that dwelt around him, and who might have strengthened his son by their connection and influence, he utterly rejects; and directs his attention to a distant land, and a family comparatively poor. Education and principle, not riches and power, were the grounds upon which he sought to secure his son's domestic happiness and prosperity. The language of Canaan, ver. 31, and of both Laban and Bethuel, ver. 50, 51, in which they ascribe the ruling of all events to the LORD; but above all their parting blessing in the name of the LORD, ver. 60, exhibit the quality of that religious system under which Rebekah was nurtured, and the grounds of the choice that Abraham made.—C.

ence of the people of the land, saying, But if thou wilt give it, I pray thee, hear me: I will give thee money for the field; take it of me, and I will bury my dead there.

AND Abraham was <sup>o</sup>old, and well <sup>p</sup>stricken in age: and the LORD had <sup>q</sup>blessed Abraham in all things.

2 And Abraham said unto his <sup>r</sup>eldest servant of his house, that ruled over all that he had, Put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh;

3 And I will make thee <sup>s</sup>swear by the LORD, the God of heaven, and the God of the earth, <sup>t</sup>that thou shalt not take a wife unto my son of the daughters of the Canaanites,<sup>u</sup> among whom I dwell:

CHAPTER XXIII. Ver. 3-20. Abraham wanted to purchase a burying-place in Canaan, and to have the claims thereto ascertained, that he and his nearest relations might have their dust laid there apart from the heathen natives; and might have it as a pledge and earnest to confirm their faith in God's promise of their possession of the whole country in his due time, ch. 25:9; 47:29, 30; 49:31; 50:13, 24, 25.—[Ver. 10. In ancient times the gate of a town or village was the place where the elders or judges sat, where cases were heard and adjudicated, and where all matters affecting the public welfare were discussed, Ge. 34:20; De. 16:18; Ru. 4:1. At the present day in many of the outlying villages of Palestine, where primitive customs are still kept up, I have seen the elders sitting in the gates conducting public business.—Ver. 19. Machpelah still exists, encompassed by a high and massive wall, which must have been built before the Christian era. It is one of the holiest shrines of Mohammedanism, and consequently neither Jew nor Christian is permitted to enter it. The Prince of Wales was admitted within the walls, but was informed that the entrance to the cave had long been walled up, and that no person can now gain admission. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Ponder, my soul, how the clouds of trouble return after the rain; how death parts the nearest and most affectionate relatives! The marriage state is but the forerunner of death and sorrow; it is but a porch of entrance into eternity! Tears and grief are the tribute which we owe to our departed friends. But if they and we be Christ's, let us not 'mourn as those that have no hope.' 'Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord'—they are not lost, but gone before us. How death changes the comely countenance, and makes the dearest body loathsome! Let the death of others always remind me of my own; and let me live as a stranger and sojourner in this world. Let me so behave as to make my friendship valued and sought for by all around me. Never let Hittites or other heathens outstrip me in humanity or kindness, but let good manners, civility, modesty, and the strictest regard to equity, adorn my profession, and mingle themselves with all my behaviour. Let me carefully avoid being a burden to my neighbours, or being too much indebted for favours to carnal men; and though I be heir of the world through the righteousness of faith, let me be content with little of it now, and rejoice that the Canaan above, where neither death, nor famine, nor war ever enter, is my inheritance! If my flesh rest in hope, it is enough if I am allowed a grave on earth.

CHAPTER XXIV. Ver. 2. This form of swearing might import the subjection of Eliezer the servant, and that the Messiah should proceed from his master's

THE OAK OF MAMRE; ABRAHAM'S OAK—WHERE ABRAHAM PITCHED HIS TENT AND BUILT AN ALTAR. [GENESIS, xxiii : 20.]—Abraham lived in Hebron, and buried there Sarah, his wife, in the cave of the field of Machpelah, before Mamre. The garden in which this oak stands belongs to the missions, who have here built a hospital for pilgrims. The drive to the famous oak, through the beautiful and extensive vineyards lying north and west of Hebron, is very charming. This oak of Abraham was revered as far back as the 16th century and is undoubtedly of great age. It is a fine old evergreen tree measuring 26 feet in girth, while its thick branches extend over an area 96 feet in diameter. The location is near the head of Wady Sebta, and there is a fine old well of sweet water just behind it. The Jews of Hebron hold picnics here, upon the soft grass that is allowed to grow beneath this old oak of Father Abraham.

4 But thou shalt go unto my country, and to my kindred, and take a wife unto my son Isaac.

5 And the servant said unto him, †Peradventure the woman will not be willing to follow me unto this land: must I needs bring thy son again unto the land from whence thou camest?

6 And Abraham said unto him, Beware thou that thou bring not my son thither again.

7 The LORD God of heaven, which †took me from my father's house, and from the land of my kindred, and which spake unto me, and that sware unto me, saying, Unto thy seed will I give this land; he †shall send his angel before thee, and thou shalt take a wife unto my son from thence.

8 And if the woman will not be willing to follow thee, then thou shalt be †clear from this my oath: only bring not my son thither again.

9 And the servant put his hand under the thigh of Abraham his master, and sware to him concerning that matter.

10 †And the servant took ten camels, †of the camels of his master, and departed; (for all the goods of his master were in his hand;) and he arose, and went to Mesopotamia, †unto the city of Nahor.

11 And he made his camels to †kneel down without the city by a well of water, at the time of the evening, even the time that women go out to draw water.

13 Behold, †I stand here by the well of water; and the daughters of the men of the city †come out to draw water:

15 †And it came to pass, †before he had done speaking, that, behold, Rebekah came out, who was born to Bethuel, son of Milcah, the wife of Nahor, Abraham's brother, with her pitcher upon her shoulder.

16 And the damsel was very fair †to look upon, a virgin, neither had any man †known her: and she went down to the well, and filled her pitcher, and came up.

21 And the man, †wondering at her, held his peace, to wit whether the LORD had made his journey prosperous or not.

REFLECTIONS.—What a mercy it is to have at once a good servant, a good son, and a gracious God! A noble foundation these for truly happy success in our designs! In weighty cases it may be proper to interpose an oath, but that carefully explained, solemnly administered, and judiciously taken. The marriages of true believers, on which the temporal and eternal happiness of multitudes may depend, should be formed with remarkable and religious attention; for an unconverted partner in life often proves a dreadful and a dangerous snare. Happy the families which have praying and pious members! In difficult cases it is best to begin with prayer if we wish to succeed. And it manifests no small prudence to look for and follow the direction of God's providence; for the Lord kindly answers the prayers of faith when put up in behalf of his dear favourites. In order to obtain a truly happy marriage, how much more efficacious are a single regard to the glory of God, and a dependence on his direction, than all the wanton dalliances or false and fulsome flattery in the world! In religious courtship plain-dealing is the best wooing; and they who are most humble, kind, and industrious in the house of their father, are likely to prove most amiable and useful in the house of their husband. In children's marriages parents ought to advise, but not to constrain. It is useful to commemorate past mercies to encourage us in a present dependence on God's care and kindness for future ones: and the more mercies we receive, the more we field at the eventide; and he lifted up his eyes, and saw, and, behold, the camels were coming.

64 And Rebekah lifted up her eyes; and when she saw Isaac, she lighted off the camel.

65 For she had said unto the servant, What man is this that walketh in the field to meet us? And the servant had said, It is my master: therefore she took a veil, and covered herself.

66 And the servant told Isaac all things that he had done.

67 And Isaac brought her into his mother Sarah's tent, and took Rebekah, and she became his wife; and he loved her: and Isaac was comforted after his mother's death.

5 ¶ And Abraham gave all that he had unto Isaac.

6 But unto the sons of the concubines, which Abraham had, Abraham gave gifts, and sent them away from Isaac his son (while he yet lived) eastward unto the east country.

7 ¶ And these are the days of the years of Abraham's life which he lived, an hundred threescore and fifteen years.

8 Then Abraham gave up the ghost, and died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years; and was gathered to his people.

9 And his sons Isaac and Ishmael buried him in the cave of Machpelah, in the field of Ephron the son of Zohar the Hittite, which is before Mamre;

Of them all the Midianites alone attained to historic importance. They settled on the eastern borders of Moab and Edom, and pastured their flocks as far south as the peninsula of Sinai. Among them Moses took refuge when he fled from Egypt. And Jethro, his father-in-law, was priest of Midian. 8 The junction of Ishmael with Isaac in the burial of Abraham, shows that they must have lived not very far from each other, and in a considerable degree of intimacy. Hence we conclude, with every reasonable probability, that Abraham and Isaac must have exercised considerable influence over the religious opinions and character of Ishmael. This idea is further strengthened by the fact that when Esau perceived that Isaac was displeased with his Hittite wives, ch. 28.8, he went to Ishmael and married one of his daughters, with the expectation of her being more acceptable; what, from his knowledge of her father, he could not reasonably have expected upon any ground. ought to praise and worship God. New relations need new prayers; for new joys on earth are connected with new griefs. But doubly sweet are the blessings of Providence when we receive them with a devout temper of spirit. How useful for the soul is devout retirement! None will ever feel the want of company who have learned, through the medium of sensible objects, to converse with God himself. Alas, that so few deep-sworn servants of JEHOVAH should so little resemble Abraham's, in their endeavours to woo a bride for his dear Son! How little fervent prayer and accurate observation of his word and providence they mingle with their work! How often their own temporal provisions lie nearer their heart than that sinners should be made willing in the day of his power! May God make them equally faithful and equally successful!

Nay, Jacob's obtaining the birthright and blessing, ver. 29-34; 27. 29, 37, 40, rendered him and his posterity superior to Esau and his Edomite seed.

Ver. 25. That redness and hair marked the present strength of Esau's body, and the savage and cruel disposition of him and his posterity, ch. 27. 11, 40, 41; Ob. 10; Eze. 25. 12; 35. 3-5.

Ver. 26. Jacob took hold of his heel, as if he would have drawn him back, so that himself might be born first, or as if he would overthrow and suppress him, as he afterwards did, ver. 33; ch. xxvii. And rightly was he named Jacob, a heel-holder, or supplanter, on that account, ch. 27. 36.

Ver. 27. Esau was a wild, savage kind of man, spending most of his time in hunting, learning the art of war, and the like, ch. 10. 9; 16. 12. Jacob was a sincere, mild, plain-dealing man, keeping much at home, attending to his household affairs, and to his father's flocks and herds, ch. 6. 9; 46. 34.—[And the boys grew. The early development of different propensities in Esau and Jacob is very remarkable, and the visible causes of their respective characters may be traced to the dispositions and partialities of the parents. Isaac loves venison, and first to please his father, and then to gratify his own acquired habits, Esau becomes a cunning hunter. Rebekah loves domestic retirement, finds her comfort in the society of her infant Jacob, and forms his future character on the model of her own.—Note. These things are to be carefully observed: (1) How early, and insensibly, some part of the character of a father or mother may be propagated in their children. (2) The consequent importance of well considering all the habits in which a child is indulged or encouraged, as part, and often the most influential part, of its education. (3) The danger of parental partialities, from which, in this remarkable instance, many of the future troubles of Isaac and Rebekah, and Esau and Jacob, arose. C.]

Ver. 30. The name Edom, signifying red, at once marked his origin and colour, and his excessive lust after the red pottage, and his selling his birthright to obtain them.

Ver. 31-34. This birthright entailed upon the possessor a double portion of the paternal inheritance, De. 21. 16, 17; a claim to his father's principal blessing, and to the promise of Canaan, and a peculiar relation to God therein.—[Ver. 34. Altogether this is a most painful narrative. One does not know whether most to condemn the folly and recklessness of Esau, bartering his birthright for a mess of pottage; or the unbrotherly spirit and grasping selfishness of Jacob, refusing to a fainting brother a mouthful of food until he had given him all he possessed. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Before I part with Abraham, this celebrated patriarch, let me, in him, contemplate Jesus the everlasting Father. How astonishing his meekness—his kindness to men—his intimacy with, fear of, obedience to, and trust in his God! He is the chosen favourite of JEHOVAH—the father and covenant-head of innumerable millions of saved men. To him all the promises relative to the evangelical and eternal state of his church were originally made. All obedient at his Father's call, he left his native abodes of bliss, and became a stranger and sojourner on earth, not having where to lay his head. At his Father's call, he offered himself an acceptable sacrifice to God; by his all-prevalent intercession, and supernatural influence, he offers men salvation from sin and from the hand of their enemies; and, after long patience, he wins untold disciples in the Jewish and gospel church. In his visible family are many professors, children of the bond-woman, the covenant of works; who, in the issue, are like Ishmael, or the modern Jews, whose unbelief brings them to misery and woe; others are children of the free-woman, the covenant of grace, and are, like Isaac, begotten to God because of their faith in Christ. Now let me observe, how invigorating is a strong faith in God's promise; for God delights to add abundant blessings to such as, by courageous believing, give him the glory of his power and faithfulness. Often the best of men have little remarkable fellowship with God in old age, but must live even to the end by faith, and not by sight; while wicked families are loaded with temporal mercies for the sake of their pious progenitors. Promised events are often ushered in by the most discouraging appearances; and mercies must be long prayed and waited for ere they be granted. It is good when husbands and wives unite their supplications; for to spread our griefs before a throne of grace is the greatest and surest relief. How often much trouble and vexation attend what is too eagerly desired! But how tender is God, in fixing the temporal, and even eternal, states of persons according to their faith! And how early are children known by their doings! yet in their education great care is to be taken in consulting their tempers and dispositions. Parents frequently expose themselves to future troubles by their partial regard to children. But why should we set our hearts on them, or any other worldly comfort, when we must so quickly leave them by death? At that time it should be the concern of parents so to dispose of their effects, that there may be no disputes after they are gone; and such deserve to have most assigned them as are likely to make the best use of it. How often the wisest worldlings act the most foolish part, while 'the Lord preserveth the simple!' How marvellously God overruleth even the sins of men, to the accomplishment of his purpose or promise, and the advancement of his glory! How dreadful, when men, even those who have had a religious education, gratify their sensual appetites at the expense of the temporal and eternal ruin of themselves and their seed; and when God permits them to be afterwards hardened in their sin, and standing monuments of that affecting truth, that numbers of the descendants of God's children are sometimes left out of his church, and unacquainted with their parents' blessings!

CHAPTER XXVI. [Ver. 4. The same promise, in all its details, which was originally given to Abraham, is here renewed to Isaac, see ch. 12. 3; 22. 17, 18. P.]

Ver. 12. This fertility was emblematical of fruitfulness in grace, Ps. 67. 6; Mat. 13. 23; and of the bountiful but gracious rewards which we shall enjoy in heaven, Ga. 6. 7, 8; Ps. 31. 19; 19. 11.

Ver. 18. This was typical of Christ's reforming his

ENTRANCE TO THE GARDEN OF THE VIRGIN—WHERE JOSEPH LIVED. [GEN. xxvi: 2.]—When Herod issued his cruel decree that all the children in Bethlehem under two years of age should be put to death, the Lord appeared unto Joseph in a dream and said, Arise, take the young child and his mother and flee into Egypt. There is a tradition of long standing that the place of the sojourn in Egypt was at Matariyeh. It was near this place that Joseph lived, because it is only a short distance from Heliopolis where Potipherah resided, whose daughter Joseph married. This is a few miles east of Cairo, and the village is connected with it by telegraph and telephone. The region about Matariyeh is very fertile. Cotton grows here; orange groves are near by, and only a short distance is an ostrich farm kept by a Frenchman. It is a beautiful road from Cairo out to this place.

ROSHPIA—NEAR WHERE JOSHUA CONQUERED JABIN KING OF HAZOR. [GENESIS, xxvi:3,4.]—'Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I swore unto Abraham thy father.' Nearly four thousand years from the time these words were spoken to Abraham, we find a village as shown above, built by the Rothschilds, descendants of Abraham, in Palestine, the country that was promised to Abraham, and built as a place of residence for the Jews. It is a striking and interesting commentary upon the covenant between Heaven and these ancient people, that we find in these the last days of the nineteenth century, a disposition on the part of the Jews, which liberal and fortunate men of their race are helping them to carry out, to go back and possess the land of their fathers. Roshpina stands near the waters of Merom.

there a long time, that Abimelech, king of the Philistines, looked out at a window, and saw, and, behold, Isaac was sporting with Rebekah his wife.<sup>1</sup>

9 And Abimelech called Isaac, and said, Behold, of a surety she is thy wife: and how saidst thou, She is my sister? And Isaac said unto him, Because I said, Lest I die for her.

10 And Abimelech said, What is this thou hast done unto us? one of the people might lightly have lien with thy wife, and thou shouldst have brought guiltiness upon us.

11 And Abimelech charged all his people, saying, He that toucheth this man or his wife shall surely be put to death.<sup>2</sup>

12 ¶ Then Isaac sowed in that land, and received<sup>3</sup> in the same year an hundred fold; and the LORD blessed him.

13 And the man waxed great, and went forward,<sup>4</sup> and grew, until he became very great:

14 For he had possession of flocks, and possession of herds, and great store of servants,<sup>5</sup> and the Philistines envied him.

15 For all the wells which his father's servants had digged in the days of Abraham his father, the Philistines had stopped them, and filled them with earth.

16 And Abimelech said unto Isaac, Go from us; for thou art much mightier than we.

17 And Isaac departed thence, and pitched his tent in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there.

18 And Isaac digged again the wells of water which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father; for the Philistines had stopped them after the death of Abraham: and he called their names after the names by which his father had called them.

19 And Isaac's servants digged in the valley, and found there a well of springing water.

20 And the herdmen of Gerar did strive with Isaac's herdmen, saying, The water is ours: and he called the name of the well Esek,<sup>6</sup> because they strove with him.

21 And they digged another well, and strove for that also:<sup>7</sup> and he called the name of it Sitnah.<sup>8</sup>

22 And he removed from thence, and digged another well; and for that they strove not: and he called the name of it Rehoboth;<sup>9</sup> and he said, For now the LORD hath made room for us, and we shall be fruitful in the land.

23 ¶ And he went up from thence to Beer-sheba.

24 And the LORD appeared unto him the same night, and said, I am the God of Abraham thy father: fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed, for my servant Abraham's sake.

25 And he builded an altar there, and called upon the name of the LORD,<sup>1</sup> and pitched his tent there: and there Isaac's servants digged a well.

26 ¶ Then Abimelech went to him from Gerar, and Ahuzzath<sup>2</sup> one of his friends, and Phichol the chief captain of his army.

27 And Isaac said unto them, Wherefore come ye to me, seeing ye hate me, and have sent me away from you?

28 And they said, We saw<sup>3</sup> certainly that the LORD was with thee: and we said, Let there be now an oath betwixt us, even betwixt us and thee, and let us make a covenant with thee;

29 That thou wilt<sup>4</sup> do us no hurt, as we have not touched thee, and as we have done unto thee nothing but good, and have sent thee away in peace: thou art now the blessed of the LORD.

30 And he made them a feast, and they did eat and drink.

31 And they rose up betimes in the morning, and sware one to another: and Isaac sent them away, and they departed from him in peace.

32 And it came to pass the same day, that Isaac's servants came and told him concerning the well which they had digged, and said unto him, We have found water.

33 And he called it Shebah:<sup>5</sup> therefore the name of the city is Beer-sheba unto this day.

REFLECTIONS. — A mixture of providential smiles and frowns is ordinarily in the lot of God's loved children. But what a mercy is it to have the promise of grace established between God and our progenitors, that it may be renewed with us! The fear of men, the fear of temporal death, often causeth a snare: and we readily rush into the same snares in which others before had almost ruined themselves. Yet the kindness of God is infinitely great in rescuing his people, when they are thus busied in entangling themselves. But what a scandal to a saint to be discovered a dissembler! and how painful to have the snares which we laid for the innocent entangling ourselves, or their sins charged to our account before God! To what trouble and expense will envious men put themselves in order to gratify their lust. And how often are the most flourishing outward enjoyments embittered by the envy which attends them! What a mercy to have God smiling on us when the world frowns! For, when our ways please the Lord, he maketh even our enemies to be at peace with us, and to pursue the friendship which they once refused. The wickedness of children, who break their parents' hearts when they ought to be their comfort, is great, and observed by God; and his curse frequently attends

35 Which were <sup>a</sup>a grief of mind unto Isaac and to Rebekah.<sup>5</sup>

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 Isaac sendeth Esau for venison. 6 Rebekah instructeth Jacob to obtain the blessing. 18 Jacob under the person of Esau obtaineth it. 30 Esau bringeth venison. 33 Isaac trembleth. 34 Esau complaineth, and by importunity obtaineth a blessing. 41 He threatneth Jacob's life. 42 Rebekah disappointeth it.

AND it came to pass, that when Isaac was old,<sup>6</sup> and his eyes <sup>a</sup>were dim, so that he could not see, he called Esau his eldest son, and said unto him, My son. And he said unto him, Behold, here am I.

2 And he said, Behold now, I am old, I know not the day of my <sup>b</sup>death.

3 Now therefore take, I pray thee, thy weapons, thy quiver and thy bow, and go out to the field, and <sup>c</sup>take me some venison;

4 And make me <sup>d</sup>savoury meat, such as I love, and bring it to me, that I may eat; that my soul may bless thee before I die.<sup>7</sup>

5 And Rebekah heard when Isaac spake to Esau his son. And Esau went to the field to hunt for venison, and to bring it.

6 ¶ And Rebekah spake unto Jacob her son, saying, Behold, I heard thy father speak unto Esau thy brother, saying,

7 Bring me venison, and make me savoury meat, that I may eat, and bless thee <sup>e</sup>before the LORD<sup>8</sup> before my death.

8 Now therefore, my son, <sup>f</sup>obey my voice, according to that which I command thee.

9 Go now to the flock, and fetch me from thence two good kids of the goats; and I will make them savoury meat for thy father, such as he loveth:

10 And thou shalt bring it to thy father, that he may eat, and that he may bless thee before his death.

11 And Jacob said to Rebekah his mother, Behold, Esau my brother is <sup>a</sup>a hairy man, and I am a smooth man:

12 My father peradventure will feel me, and I shall seem to him as a <sup>b</sup>deceiver; and I shall bring a <sup>c</sup>curse upon me, and not a blessing.

13 And his mother said unto him, <sup>d</sup>Upon me be thy curse, my son: only obey my voice, and go fetch me them.

14 And he went, and fetched, and brought them to his mother: and his mother made savoury meat, such as his father loved.

15 And Rebekah took goodly<sup>9</sup> raiment of her eldest son Esau, which were with her in the house, and put them upon Jacob her younger son.

<sup>5</sup> Nothing else could have happened. The Septuagint has it, "They were quarrelling with Isaac and Rebekah." Polygamy has always produced discord and mischief. But Esau still further violated the command of God in this respect, by joining himself in marriage with the heathen, who were under the curse of God; thus, in a double sense, meriting the epithet profane, as he neither regarded the blessing, nor the curse of God. — L.

<sup>4</sup> The nature and extent of the patriarchal birthright, which Esau despised, ch. 25. 34, is here fully exhibited. It consists, 1. In a propitious climate, a fertile soil, with that abundant return that implies an industrious, peaceable, and prosperous people. 2. The service and submission of foreign nations by conquest. 3. The service and submission of his own relatives by voluntary choice. 4. A curse upon all his enemies, and a blessing upon all his friends. — What a glorious emblem of the birthright of Jesus! Hasten the time, O Lord! when the heathen shall be his inheritance, and the utmost ends of the earth his possession! But while Rebekah, or Jacob must be praised for valuing this patriarchal birthright so highly, is either to be imitated in seeking it so subtly? No. Like Paul with Peter, Ga. 2. 11, we must, as it were, withstand them to the face, because they are to be blamed. The goodness of the end sought can never justify the wrong means employed. God, who cannot lie, had already told Rebekah, ch. 25. 23, that the elder (Esau) should serve the younger (Jacob), and relying upon his truth and power, as well as valuing his promised gift, Rebekah should have waited on God's means for accomplishing his own purposes. Her wisdom, however, brought its own punishment. It made Esau an intending murderer, verse 41, and Jacob a banished exile. — C.

16 And she put the skins of the kids of the goats upon his hands, and upon the smooth of his neck.

17 And she gave the savoury<sup>1</sup> meat and the bread, which she had prepared, into the hand of her son Jacob.

18 ¶ And he came unto his father, and said, My father. And he said, Here am I; who art thou, my son?

19 And Jacob said unto his father, I am Esau thy <sup>m</sup>first-born; I have done according as thou badest me: arise, I pray thee, sit and eat of my venison, that thy soul may bless me.

20 And Isaac said unto his son, How is it that thou hast found it so quickly, my son? And he said, Because the LORD thy God brought it to me.<sup>2</sup>

21 And Isaac said unto Jacob, Come near, I pray thee, that I may feel thee, my son, whether thou be my very son Esau or not.

22 And Jacob went near unto Isaac his father; and he felt him, and said, The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau.

23 And he discerned him not, because his hands were hairy, as his brother Esau's hands; so he <sup>n</sup>blessed him.

24 And he said, Art thou my very son Esau? And he said, <sup>o</sup>I am.<sup>3</sup>

25 And he said, Bring it near to me, and I will eat of my son's venison, that my soul may bless thee. And he brought it near to him, and he did eat; and he brought him wine, and he drank.

26 And his father Isaac said unto him, Come near now, and kiss me, my son.

27 And he came near, and kissed him: and he smelled the smell of his raiment, and blessed him, and said, See, the smell of my son is as the <sup>p</sup>smell of a field which the LORD hath blessed:

28 Therefore <sup>q</sup>God give thee of the dew of heaven, and the fatness of the earth, and plenty of corn and wine:<sup>4</sup>

29 Let <sup>r</sup>people serve thee, and nations bow down to thee: be lord over thy brethren, and let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: <sup>c</sup>cursed be every one that curseth thee, and blessed be he that blesseth thee.

30 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as Isaac had made an end of blessing Jacob, and Jacob was yet scarce gone out from the presence of Isaac his father, that Esau his brother came in from his hunting.

31 And he also had made savoury meat, and those marriages which are made without the consent of parents.

CHAPTER XXVII. Ver. 4. That, invigorated with the savoury meat, I may bestow upon thee my blessing, constituting thee heir of all the benefits promised to me and my father Abraham: ver. 27-29; ch. 28. 3, 4; 48. 15; xlix. De. xxxi. xxxiii.; He. 11. 20.

Ver. 13. The manner in which she imprecates the curse cannot be justified; but, from the promise of God, and from Jacob's having obtained the birthright, ch. 25. 23, 33, she was confident of a happy issue.

Ver. 27. He regarded the smell of Jacob's garments as a token that God had intended to bless him abundantly, and to render him a particular blessing to others.

Ver. 28, 29. In this blessing Isaac at once requested and predicted the benefits mentioned. These temporal favours were more remarkable under the Old Testament than under the New; and represented the spiritual and temporal influences and fulness of the new covenant and of the church of God: He. 14. 6, 7; De. 32. 2; Is. 45. 8; 1 Co. 1. 30; 3. 22; Re. 1. 6; 5. 10; Ep. 1. 3. Ver. 39, 40. This blessing imported that Esau and brought it unto his father, and said unto his father, Let my father arise, and eat of his son's venison, that thy soul may bless me.

32 And Isaac his father said unto him, Who art thou? And he said, I am thy son, thy first-born, Esau.

33 And Isaac trembled very exceedingly, and said, Who? where is he that hath taken venison, and brought it me; and I have eaten of all before thou camest, and have blessed him? yea, and he shall be blessed.

34 ¶ And when Esau heard the words of his father, he cried with a great and exceeding bitter cry, and said unto his father, Bless me, even me also, O my father!

35 And he said, Thy brother came with subtilty, and hath taken away thy blessing.

36 And he said, Is not he rightly named Jacob? for he hath supplanted me these two times: he took away my birthright, and, behold, now he hath taken away my blessing. And he said, Hast thou not reserved a blessing for me?

37 And Isaac answered and said unto Esau, Behold, I have made him thy lord, and all his brethren have I given to him for servants; and with corn and wine have I sustained him: and what shall I do now unto thee, my son?

38 And Esau said unto his father, Hast thou but one blessing, my father? bless me, even me also, O my father! And Esau lifted up his voice and wept.

39 And Isaac his father answered and said unto him, Behold, thy dwelling shall be the fatness of the earth, and of the dew of heaven from above;

40 And by thy sword shalt thou live, and shalt serve thy brother: and it shall come to pass, when thou shalt have the dominion, that thou shalt break his yoke from off thy neck.

41 ¶ And Esau hated Jacob, because of the blessing wherewith his father blessed him: and Esau said in his heart, The days of mourning for my father are at hand, then will I slay my brother Jacob.

42 ¶ And these words of Esau her elder son were told to Rebekah: and she sent and called Jacob her younger son, and said unto him, Behold, thy brother Esau, as touching thee, doth comfort himself, purposing to kill thee.

43 Now therefore, my son, obey my voice; and arise, flee thou to Laban my brother, to Haran;

44 And tarry with him a few days, until thy brother's fury turn away;

45 Until thy brother's anger turn away from thee, and he forget that which thou hast done to him: then I will send and fetch thee from thence. Why should I be deprived also of you both in one day?

46 And Rebekah said to Isaac, I am weary of my life because of the daughters of Heth; if Jacob take a wife of the daughters of Heth, such as these which are of the daughters of the land, what good shall my life do me?

CHAPTER XXVIII.

1 Isaac blesseth Jacob, and sendeth him to Padan-aram. 6 Esau marrieth Mahalath, the daughter of Ishmael. 10 The vision of Jacob's ladder. 18 The stone of Beth-el. 20 Jacob's vow.

AND Isaac called Jacob, and blessed him, and charged him, and said unto him, Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan.

2 Arise, go to Padan-aram, to the house of Bethuel thy mother's father, and take thee a wife from thence of the daughters of Laban thy mother's brother.

3 And God Almighty bless thee, and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that thou mayest be a multitude of people;

4 And give thee the blessing of Abraham, to thee, and to thy seed with thee; that thou mayest inherit the land wherein thou art a stranger, which God gave unto Abraham.

5 And Isaac sent away Jacob: and he went to Padan-aram unto Laban, son of Bethuel the Syrian, the brother of Rebekah, Jacob's and Esau's mother.

6 ¶ When Esau saw that Isaac had blessed Jacob, and sent him away to Padan-aram, to take him a wife from thence; and that, as he blessed him, he gave him a charge, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan;

his seed should inhabit Mount Seir, a soil then moderately fertile, He. 11. 20; ch. 36. 6-8; that they should live much by war, violence, and rapine, Mat. 10. 34; should, by David, Amaliah, Hyrcanus, &c., be subjected to the Hebrew yoke, De. 33. 29; Ps. 60. 8; 2 Sa. 8. 14; 2 Ch. 25. 11, 12; Ob. 18, 19; but should under Jehoram cast it off, 2 Ki. 8. 16, 20.

Ver. 41. In this manner Esau hoped to recover both birthright and blessing; but Isaac nevertheless lived about forty-three years after.—[Esau was afraid to attempt any open violence during his father's life. The disease under which Isaac was labouring had brought on premature debility, and it appears to have greatly affected his sight. He must have in a great measure recovered from it, however, for he lived for forty years after Jacob's departure. P.]

REFLECTIONS. When dimness of sight, or other harbingers of death, fasten upon us, it is high time for spiritual diligence, particularly in committing ourselves and our families to God. But even then it is hard to rectify the partial affection which we have conceived for our children. How unseemly in parents, especially if godly, to become tempters of their children to offend God, and to despise the awful curse which he hath annexed to sin! Their evil counsels are a most entangling snare; and it is unnatural for the dearest relations to become deceivers of one another; especially as one sin so naturally leads to another still worse; and nothing but disorder, grief, or other murderous consequences, can justly be expected. The wisdom of God is often remarkably evident in accomplishing his great designs through means of the wicked practices of men; but the heirs of promise, notwithstanding, entail upon themselves the most fearful perplexity and trouble, in taking sinful methods to obtain their promised benefits. With what earnestness will the most carnal men pursue after spiritual things, for the sake of the carnal advantages which they hope will attend them! But, if disappointed, readily they pervert their way, and their heart fretteth against the Lord, while with malice and murder they think to defeat the purposes of God. How readily this malice reduces to great perplexity and fear such as have been the sinful instruments of their disappointment! Stand in awe, my soul; seek the Lord's blessing only in his own time and method! Let lying lips be an abomination to me! Never let me despise the heavenly birthright, lest I be denied the blessing when afterward I seek it carefully with tears. Is any provoked by or even unjustly enraged at me, let me, by yielding, pacify great offences; or, by flight, escape for my safety. Perhaps what now seems base or bitter to my corrupt heart, may yield me consolation in the latter end. Let intimacy, therefore, and especially marriage-connection, with the wicked, be always the detestation of my soul.

CHAPTER XXVIII. Ver. 12, 13. This vision represented the peculiar care of God concerning Jacob and other saints, and the ministration of angels to them, 2 Ch. 16. 9; Ec. 5. 8; Ps. 135. 6; Is. 41. 10; Ac. 18. 10; 2 Th. 4.

7 And that Jacob obeyed his father and his mother, and was gone to Padan-aram;

8 And Esau seeing that the daughters of Canaan pleased not Isaac his father, 9 Then went Esau unto Ishmael, and took unto the wives which he had, Mahalath<sup>8</sup> the daughter of Ishmael, Abraham's son, the sister of Nebajoth, to be his wife.

10 ¶ And Jacob went out from Beer-sheba, and went toward Haran.<sup>9</sup>

11 And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set: and he took of the stones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to sleep.<sup>1</sup>

12 And he dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it.

13 And, behold, the LORD stood above it, and said, I am the LORD God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed;

14 And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth; and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: and in thee, and in thy seed, shall all the families of the earth be blessed.<sup>3</sup>

15 And, behold, "I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land: for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of.

16 ¶ And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the LORD is in this place, and I knew it not.

17 And he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

18 And Jacob rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had put for his pillows, and set it up for a pillar, and poured oil upon the top of it.

19 And he called the name of that place

20 ¶ And Jacob vowed a vow, saying, If God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on,

21 So that I come again to my father's house in peace; then shall the LORD be my God:

22 And this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house: and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the eighth unto thee.

CHAPTER XXIX.

1 Jacob cometh to the well of Haran. 9 He taketh acquaintance of Rachel. 13 Laban entertaineth him. 18 Jacob covenanteth for Rachel. 23 He is deceived with Leah. 28 He marryeth also Rachel, and serveth for her seven years more. 31 Leah is fruitful, and beareth Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah.

THEN Jacob went on his journey,<sup>9</sup> and came into the land of the people<sup>4</sup> of the east.<sup>2</sup>

2 And he looked, and behold a well in the field, and, lo, there were three flocks of sheep lying by it; for out of that well they watered the flocks: and a great stone was upon the well's mouth.<sup>3</sup>

3 And thither were all the flocks gathered: and they rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the sheep, and put the stone again upon the well's mouth in his place.

4 And Jacob said unto them, My brethren, whence be ye? And they said, Of Haran are we.

5 And he said unto them, Know ye Laban the son of Nahor? And they said, We know him.

6 And he said unto them, Is he well?<sup>4</sup> And they said, He is well: and, behold, Rachel his daughter cometh with the sheep.

7 And he said, Lo, it is yet high day,<sup>5</sup> neither is it time that the cattle should be gathered together: water ye the sheep, and go and feed them.

8 And they said, We cannot, until all the flocks be gathered together, and till they roll the stone from the well's mouth; then we water the sheep.

He, in his manhood, is of the earth, a descendant of Jacob; and in his divine person is the Lord from heaven, Is. 7. 14; 9. 6; Jn. 1. 14; Ro. 1. 3, 4; 9. 5; 1 Ti. 3. 16; he is the only means of fellowship between God and men, Jn. 14. 6; Ep. 2. 18; 3. 12; 1 Ti. 2. 5, 6; and he directs and enjoys the ministrations of angels, Jn. 1. 51; 1 Pe. 1. 12; 1 Ti. 3. 16,—in his conception, Lu. 1. 31; Mat. 1. 20,—his birth, Lu. 2. 14; He. 1. 6,—his temptation, Mat. 4. 11,—his agony, Lu. 22. 43,—his resurrection, Mat. 28. 2, 5,—his ascension, Ac. 1. 10, 11; Ps. 47. 5; 68. 17, 18; Da. 7. 10, 13,—and second coming, 1 Th. 4. 16; 2 Th. 1. 7; Mat. 25. 31.

Ver. 20. A vow is a solemn promise made to God, by which we bind ourselves more strictly to necessary duty, or what indifferent things are calculated to promote it, Ps. 76. 11; 119. 106; Is. 19. 21; Jas. 4. 5; 45. 23; 2 Co. 8. 5; De. 5. 2, 3; 29. 1, 12, 13; Jos. 24. 25; 2 Ki. 11. 17; 2 Ch. 29. 10, 34; Ezr. 10. 3; Ne. 9. 10; Ac. 18. 18; 21. 23, 24; and that either in thankfulness for some mercy received, Jonah 1. 16; or for obtaining some special benefit, Nu. 21. 1, 2; Ju. 11. 30; 1 Sa. 1. 11; Pr. 31. 2.

Ver. 21. Owned and worshipped by me and my family, as the author of our whole happiness, and as our valuable and everlasting portion, Ex. 15. 2; Ps. 118. 27.

REFLECTIONS. How crosses and crowns are mingled together in the lot of the saints! But it is comfortable when the blessing of parents and of God prepares men for their trials; and to have a godly friend's house to lodge in, amidst our distress, alleviates the grief. What care both parents and children ought to take to prevent unequal marriages with the ungodly! How shrewd the contrivances of carnal men to promote their temporal advantage! But they who aim only at pleasing men often meet with the most bitter disappointments. They who rest on partial reformations lie down but the more securely under the wrath of God. It is too late to be wise when the opportunity is lost. How amazing the mercy of God, in graciously visiting such as, by their sin, have made their own homes dangerous for them to tarry at! Easily he renders even trouble sweet with his kindness; and happy they who have him and his angels to be their protectors! No danger can come near them. And, if he love, he will never leave us. He is often nearer us than we are aware; and his comfortable presence in ordinances is the very gate to celestial joys. How effectually nearness to God humbles us under a sense of our own vileness and corruption! And happy is it when our fellowship with God leaves a lasting impression on our spirits—powerfully constrains us, by solemn engagement, to surrender ourselves, and all that we have, to his service—and renders us content with a moderate share of the good things of this life! But while I thus regard the kindness of his providence, let me here contemplate the person and the work of my glorious Redeemer, that Mediator between God and man. On earth, in the condescension of his humanity; in heaven, in the glory of his divinity; through him I come near to God, and enjoy his presence and his favour; through him I behold the promises of guidance and protection; and after all my wanderings in this world, defended by his care, shall return to my Father's house in peace, laden with the blessings of eternal glory.

OUR TENT NEAR BETHEL—WHERE JACOB SAW THE LADDER AND THE ANGELS. [Genesis, xxviii:12.]—This is supposed to be the place where Jacob tarried all the night and where he dreamed and “behold a ladder set up upon the earth with its top reaching to heaven, and where the angels of God ascended and descended upon it.”

The bed was earth, the raised pillow stones,
Whereon poor Jacob rests his head, his bones,
Heaven was his canopy, the shades of night
Were his drawn curtains to exclude the light.

Who would not sleep on such a bed,
With stony pillow for his head,
If they might dream with thee,
Whose glad dreaming is no seeming,
Nor whose sleeping ends in weeping,
And whose waking is no breaking
Of the bright reality.

Bethel is on the road from Jerusalem, and along this way our Savior often walked.

9 ¶ And while he yet spake with them, Rachel came with her father's sheep; for she kept them.

10 And it came to pass, when Jacob saw Rachel the daughter of Laban his mother's brother, and the sheep of Laban his mother's brother, that Jacob went near, and rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the flock of Laban his mother's brother.

11 And Jacob <sup>2</sup>kissed Rachel, and lifted up his voice, and wept.

12 And Jacob told Rachel that he was her father's <sup>m</sup>brother, and that he was Rebekah's son: and she ran and told her father.

13 And it came to pass, when Laban heard the tidings<sup>2</sup> of Jacob his sister's son, that he ran to meet him, and embraced him, and <sup>2</sup>kissed him, and brought him to his house. And he told Laban all these things.<sup>3</sup>

14 And Laban said to him, Surely thou art my<sup>o</sup> bone and my flesh. And he abode with him the space of a month.<sup>4</sup>

15 ¶ And Laban said unto Jacob, Because thou art my brother, shouldest thou therefore serve me for nought? tell me, what shall thy wages be?

16 And Laban had two daughters: the name of the elder was Leah, and the name of the younger was Rachel.

17 Leah was tender-eyed, but Rachel was beautiful and well-favoured.

18 And Jacob loved Rachel; and said, ¶ I will serve thee seven years for Rachel thy younger daughter.<sup>5</sup>

19 And Laban said, ¶ It is better that I give her to thee, than that I should give her to another man: abide with me.

20 And Jacob served seven years for Rachel; and they seemed unto him but a few days, <sup>7</sup>for the love he had to her.

22 And Laban gathered together all the men of the place, and made <sup>a</sup>a feast.

23 And it came to pass in the evening, that he took <sup>2</sup>Leah his daughter, and brought her to him; and he went in unto her.

5 In modern times, and in European society, the father gives a dowry to his daughter; in the times and country of Laban, the father received it for his daughter; a custom still prevalent in Arabia and some other eastern countries. How shall we account for this difference of customs?

1. From the system of polygamy so prevalent in the East, which rendered the proportion of unmarried females inadequate to the number of males, and enabled covetous fathers, like Laban, to make a profitable traffic of their daughters. 2. From the nature of the servile employments to which even females of rank (such as Rachel, ver. 6) were appointed. It is evident that, in former times, the wife, in eastern countries, was but a superior servant, or real slave, as she still down to these days, continues to be, and therefore we can be little surprised that she was purchased as by a master, for whom she was to toil as an inferior, and not endowed as for a husband with whom she was to live as an equal.—Note, It was reserved for Christianity, in every country where it has prevailed, to raise the condition of woman to her proper rank in society.—C.

8 The duplicity of Laban in imposing upon Jacob, and now pleading a custom, hitherto unmentioned, or that perhaps never had a being, in justification of it, is utterly to be condemned. The world is full of duplicity, saying one thing and meaning another, promising an act of kindness while intending an act of injury. Like all other evils it leads to more. First, it divides the concentrated affection of Jacob to him; then it introduces him to polygamy, this leads to envy between the sisters, to a farther extension of the first evil; and terminates in the slavery of Joseph, and nearly brings the gray head of Jacob with sorrow to the grave.—C.

Ver. 25. [By bitter experience Jacob was now taught how painful, how harrowing to the feelings of others, was that cunning and duplicity which he himself had practised on his father and brother. From this moment till the day of his death he continued to be the victim of deception and falsehood. Retributive justice seems to have followed him until, in God's good providence, it completely purified him. P.]

Ver. 31. To punish Leah for consenting to her father's deceit, she was hated, that is, less loved than Rachel, ver. 30.

REFLECTIONS.—Behold how cheerful and prosperous the gracious visits of a reconciled God render men! Behold the plainness, humility, and kindness which once prevailed in the world! How kind is it to assist others unasked; and how unnatural to refuse our relations assistance in the time of their distress! The diligent labourer is worthy of his hire. Virtuous love brings its own reward along with it. Nothing is irksome when done in fervent affection. With what deliberation ought men to proceed in marriage, even when they are assured of God's blessing on it! How powerful is the abominable influence of a covetous heart! It will make parents to sell their children or prostitute them as harlots, and men to impose upon their nearest friends! How justly God marks the sins of his own people in their chastisements; and yet mercifully tries them with disappointments, that the love of creatures may not engross their whole heart!

How little comfort men have ever found in transgressing God's original institution by taking a plurality of wives! Real marriage love cannot be divided. Nothing can be heavier to an affectionate wife than to have her husband's love estranged from her. But readily the Lord takes part with them who have least help in man; and makes up in one thing what he denies to them in another. Let us therefore, like Leah, diligently observe the providence of God, not only in the birth of children, but in every other thing which may befall us; that we may acknowledge it with gratitude, trust him more cheerfully, and praise him to his glory.

CHAPTER XXX. REFLECTIONS.—Sinful marriages have sad consequences. Wives chosen for their beauty often bring a troublesome temper along with them. Envious discontentment and disappointed said unto Jacob, Give me children, <sup>b</sup>or else I die.

2 And Jacob's anger was kindled against Rachel; and he said, <sup>a</sup>Am I in God's stead, who hath withheld from thee the fruit of the womb?

3 And she said, Behold my maid Bilhah, go in unto her; and she shall bear upon my knees, that I may also have children by her.<sup>5</sup>

4 And she gave him Bilhah her handmaid to wife;<sup>9</sup> and Jacob went in unto her.

5 ¶ And Bilhah conceived, and bare Jacob a son.

6 And Rachel said, God hath judged me, and hath also heard my voice, and hath given me a son: therefore called she his name <sup>b</sup>Dan.<sup>6</sup>

7 And Bilhah, Rachel's maid, conceived again, and bare Jacob a second son.

8 And Rachel said, With great wrestlings<sup>7</sup> have I wrestled with my sister, and I have prevailed: and she called his name <sup>c</sup>Naphtali.

9 When Leah saw that she had <sup>d</sup>left bearing, she took Zilpah her maid, and gave her Jacob to wife.

10 And Zilpah, Leah's maid, bare Jacob a son.

11 And Leah said, A troop cometh: and she called his name <sup>e</sup>Gad.<sup>8</sup>

12 And Zilpah, Leah's maid, bare Jacob a second son.

13 And Leah said, Happy am I,<sup>9</sup> for the daughters will <sup>f</sup>call me blessed: and she called his name <sup>f</sup>Asher.<sup>1</sup>

14 ¶ And Reuben went in the days of wheat-harvest, and found <sup>g</sup>mandrakes in the field, and brought them unto his mother Leah. Then Rachel said to Leah, Give me, I pray thee, of thy son's mandrakes.<sup>2</sup>

15 And she said unto her,<sup>3</sup> Is it a small matter that thou hast taken my husband? and wouldest thou take away my son's mandrakes also? And Rachel said, Therefore he shall lie with thee to-night for thy son's mandrakes.

16 And Jacob came out of the field in the evening, and Leah went out to meet him, and said, Thou must come in unto me; for surely I have hired thee with my son's mandrakes. And he lay with her that night.

17 ¶ And God hearkened unto Leah, and she conceived, and bare Jacob the fifth son.<sup>4</sup>

18 And Leah said, God hath given me<sup>5</sup> my hire, because I have given my maiden to my husband: and she called his name <sup>h</sup>Issachar.

19 And Leah conceived again, and bare Jacob the sixth son.

t The mandrakes

(in Heb. duclim)

has been very variously described.

Some translate the Hebrew duclimviolet; others, lilies,jasmynes, mush-rooms; others, flowers in general. Abbe

Maritius describes the plant commonly called mandrakes.

It grows low, like a lettuce, to which its leaves have a great resemblance, except that they have a dark green colour. The flowers are purple.

The fruit, when ripe,

in the beginning of May (the wheat harvest in Palestine) is of the size and colour of a small apple, exceedingly ruddy, and of an agreeable odour. Pythagoras denominated it anthro-pomorphon. Theophrastus refers to it as productive of love.

There can be no doubt that in ancient times the plant, commonly called man-drakes, was in high repute as an ingredient in philters or lovepotions; and it is not unlikely that some such idea might have occupied the mind of Rachel; who, though a believer in the true

God and his promises, was not yet thoroughly clear of the superstition of her country, as especially appears with a good dowry; now will my husband dwell with me, because I have born him six sons: and she called his name <sup>a</sup>Zebulun.

21 And afterwards she bare a daughter, and called her name <sup>b</sup>Dinah.

22 ¶ And God <sup>c</sup>remembered Rachel, and God hearkened to her, and opened her womb.

23 And she conceived,<sup>6</sup> and bare a son; and said, God hath taken away my <sup>d</sup>reproach:

24 And she called his name <sup>e</sup>Joseph; and said, The LORD shall <sup>f</sup>add to me another son.

25 ¶ And it came to pass, when Rachel had born Joseph, that Jacob said unto Laban, Send me away, that I may go unto mine own place, and to <sup>g</sup>my country.

26 Give <sup>h</sup>me my wives and my children, for whom I have served thee, and let me go:<sup>7</sup> for thou knowest my service which I have done thee.

27 And Laban said unto him, I pray thee, if I have <sup>i</sup>found favour in thine eyes, tarry: for I have learned by experience that <sup>j</sup>the LORD hath blessed me for thy sake.

28 And he said, <sup>k</sup>Appoint me thy wages, and I will give <sup>l</sup>it.

29 And he said unto him, Thou knowest <sup>m</sup>how I have served<sup>8</sup> thee, and how thy cattle was with me.

30 For it was little which thou hadst before I came, and it is now <sup>n</sup>increased unto a multitude; and the LORD hath blessed thee <sup>o</sup>since my coming: and now, when shall I provide for mine own house also?

31 And he said, What shall I give thee? And Jacob said, Thou shalt not give me <sup>p</sup>any thing. If thou wilt do this thing for me, I will again feed <sup>q</sup>and keep thy flock.

32 I will pass through all thy flock to-day, removing from thence all the speckled and spotted cattle, and all the brown cattle among the sheep, and the spotted and speckled among the goats; and of <sup>r</sup>such shall be my hire.

33 So shall my <sup>s</sup>righteousness answer for me in time to come, when it shall come for my hire before thy face: every one that <sup>t</sup>is not speckled and spotted among the goats, and brown among the sheep, that shall be counted stolen with me.

34 And Laban said, Behold, I would it might be according to thy word.<sup>9</sup>

35 And he removed that day the he-goats that were ring-straked and spotted, and all the she-goats that were speckled and spotted, and every one that had <sup>u</sup>some white in it, and all the brown among the sheep, and gave <sup>v</sup>them into the hand of his sons.

pride make multitudes miserable! Immoderate desire of children, or other created enjoyments, hurry many into fearful disorders! But it is vain ever to expect that happiness from creatures which can be had only in and from God himself. No love to persons should hinder our detestation and reproof of their sins. Even the godly are apt to fall into snares laid for them by their near relations. And bad examples are more readily imitated than good ones. If we are once overcome by sin, we are apt to yield to it more easily afterwards. Many are more governed by the estimation of the world than by reason or religion. It is very wicked for parents to transmit their quarrels to their children. It is no lessening of our guilt that God brings good out of our evil. People often promise themselves happiness in that which will be their death or ruin. Saints have need to trust their God, as all others may deceive them; and reason to desire their heavenly home, as this world is not their rest. What an advantage to families are servants remarkably pious! How criminal for covetous masters to defraud them of their wages! What good words worldly men can give to serve their own ends, and how wise they are for their own carnal interests! But their caution is vain when God designs

38 And he set the rods which he had pilled before the flocks in the gutters in the watering-troughs when the flocks came to drink, that they should conceive<sup>3</sup> when they came to drink.

39 And the flocks <sup>1</sup>conceived before the rods, and brought forth cattle ring-straked, speckled, and spotted.

40 And Jacob did separate the lambs, and set the faces of the flocks toward the ring-straked and all the brown in the flock of Laban; and he put his own flocks by themselves, and put them not unto Laban's cattle.<sup>4</sup>

41 And it came to pass, whensoever the stronger cattle did conceive, that Jacob laid the rods before the eyes of the cattle in the gutters, that they might conceive among the rods.

42 But when the cattle were feeble, he put them not in: so the feeble were Laban's, and the stronger Jacob's.

43 And the man <sup>1</sup>increased exceedingly, and had much cattle, and maid-servants, and men-servants, and camels, and asses.

<sup>8</sup> The conduct of Jacob in this case forms an admirable example of domestic management. As a husband and father he had power to decide upon the movements of his family; but he does not act upon that power; but wisely calls his wives into consultation, explains to them his motives, and obtains their full concurrence in his plans.

<sup>9</sup> Note. Piety, reason, and affection should ever be the associates, guides, and balances of conjugal and parental authority—whilst free and unreserved consultation between husbands and wives, on all their domestic plans, interests, and cares, removes distrust, promotes confidence, fixes affection, and, under the providence of God, lays the only sure foundation for family comfort and success.

Jos. 24:2.—It would appear that in the early ages of Jewish history the teraphim were not considered improper, and were used with the worship of the true God. They were regarded as his representatives, and his household, especially when a priest or Levite could be induced to take charge of them, Ju. xvii; Ho. 3:4. The people of those ages were superstitious; there was a natural propensity to idolatry; and this seems to have been the least offensive form which it assumed. But nevertheless, as the teraphim were repeatedly and severely condemned by the prophets.

<sup>11</sup> The mention of the sheep-shearing and the stealing of the images in the same chapter, renders it extremely probable that these images were superstitiously connected with the safety and prosperity of the flock.

<sup>12</sup> And whilst we condemn all superstition as ever the handmaiden or fore-runner of infidelity, let us recollect (to humble us) that it has not been confined to ancient times of darkness, but may still be found existing under the full light of Christianity. Even in our own days, a horse-shoe may still be seen nailed upon the threshold as a protection against disease in cattle-sheds, and even human dwellings; and not unfrequently on the mast of a ship as a preservative from storm and shipwreck.

18 And he carried away all his cattle, and all his goods which he had gotten, the cattle of his getting, which he had gotten in Padan-aram, for to go to Isaac his father in the land of Canaan.

19 And Laban went to shear his sheep: and Rachel had stolen the <sup>1</sup>images that were her father's.<sup>9</sup> to frustrate their purposes; and they often outwit themselves who intend to impose upon others. All agreements ought to be made with great clearness and accuracy, that no stain be thereby occasioned to our character; and in the use of lawful means to promote our wealth, our trust should be fixed on the promised providence of God. His blessing can quickly increase a little, and make it a great store.

20 And Jacob stole away unawares to <sup>1</sup>Laban the Syrian, in that he told him not that he fled.

CHAPTER XXXI. [Ver. 13. This is a simple statement, but there is most cheering truth embodied in it. He had vowed prospectively to dedicate a tenth of his property to the Lord, and thus in the ordinary affairs of life to testify his complete dependence on the divine will. Now after a long and hard struggle, when wealth was acquired, and by the envy of an unjust master was placed in peril, the Lord graciously reminds him of the vision at Bethel. P.]

Jacob had pitched his tent in the mount: and Laban with his brethren pitched in the mount of Gilead.

26 And Laban said to Jacob, <sup>b</sup>What hast thou done, that thou hast stolen away unawares to me, and carried away my daughters, <sup>c</sup>as captives taken with the sword?

27 Wherefore didst thou flee away secretly, and steal away from me, <sup>d</sup>and didst not tell me, that I might have sent thee away <sup>e</sup>with mirth, and with songs, with tabret, <sup>f</sup>and with harp?

28 And hast not suffered me <sup>g</sup>to kiss my sons and my daughters? Thou hast now <sup>h</sup>done foolishly in <sup>i</sup>so doing.

29 It <sup>j</sup>is in the power of my hand to do you hurt: but the <sup>k</sup>God of your father spake unto me yesternight, saying, Take thou heed that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad.

30 And now, <sup>l</sup>though thou wouldest needs be gone, because thou sore longedst after thy father's house, <sup>m</sup>yet wherefore hast thou <sup>n</sup>stolen my <sup>o</sup>gods?

31 And Jacob answered and said to Laban, Because <sup>p</sup>I was afraid: for I said, Peradventure thou wouldest take by force thy daughters from me.

32 With whomsoever thou findest thy gods, let him not live: before <sup>q</sup>our brethren discern thou what <sup>r</sup>is thine with me, and take <sup>s</sup>it to thee. For Jacob knew not that Rachel had stolen them.

33 And Laban went into Jacob's tent, and into <sup>t</sup>Leah's tent, and into the two maid-servants' tents; but he found <sup>u</sup>them not. Then went he out of Leah's tent, and entered into Rachel's tent.

34 Now <sup>v</sup>Rachel had taken the images, and put them in the camel's furniture, and sat upon them. <sup>w</sup>And Laban searched <sup>x</sup>all the tent, but found <sup>y</sup>them not.

35 And she said to her father, Let it not displease <sup>z</sup>my lord that I cannot <sup>aa</sup>rise up before thee; for <sup>ab</sup>the custom of women <sup>ac</sup>is upon me. And he searched, but found not the images.

36 ¶ And Jacob <sup>ad</sup>was wroth, and chode with Laban: and Jacob answered and said to Laban, What <sup>ae</sup>is my trespass? what <sup>af</sup>is my sin, that thou hast so hotly pursued after me?

37 Whereas thou hast searched all my stuff, what hast thou found of all thy household-stuff?

<sup>r</sup> The objections of unbelievers against the Bible are generally founded on two false principles. 1. They enumerate all the weaknesses, errors, and sins of the most prominent Scripture characters, as things approved of God, because recorded in his word. 2. Presuming that Christians must consequently approve and defend every part of their conduct, they accuse Christianity and Christians of approving and defending what is evil. Both these assumptions are erroneous in all cases, consequently erroneous in the present example. Rachel was weak, superstitious, and, alas! it may have been covetous, and as sin is ever progressive, she succeeded in concealing one fault only by committing another. And if the Spirit of God in this, and in similar cases, have not uttered any special sentence of condemnation, it is simply because the law of God is presumed to be so well known as to require no particular exposition or application.—f

<sup>k</sup> Fear is a state of mind modified by its object. A slave may fear a severe task-master, a child a tender parent. This modification of the feeling of fear arises from the feelings with which it is associated. In the slave it is associated with anticipated severity, in the child with unquestioned love. In the one it is the fear of terror, in the other the fear of reverence.

<sup>l</sup> There is a fear, sometimes supposed to be the fear of God, which is altogether inconsistent with true religion. It is not, however, the fear of God, but the fear of punishment. This false fear love casteth utterly out of the heart. 1. In the love which cherisheth that godly fear which the Scripture declares to be the very beginning of wisdom, Pr. 9. 10.

<sup>m</sup> The Fear of Isaac signifies 'the God of Isaac.' The Hebrew word is used to denote not merely the abstract idea of 'fear,' but the person or object which causes it. It has this latter sense here. The rebuke which Jacob administered to Laban was sharp and deserved.—f

<sup>u</sup> The word Gilead signifies 'rugged,' and was intended to indicate the physical aspect of the country, of which it was the original name. After Jacob and Laban made the covenant, Jacob raised the heap of stones and called it Gilead; 'the heap of witnesses,' thus making the name of the mound apply, by a slight change of sound, to the heap he had raised. Such a play upon words is very common in the East.

<sup>v</sup> yet Laban called the heap Jegar-sahadutha, which in his own Aramaic language was identical with Gilead. The exact spot is unknown; but it must have been near Mahanaim.—f

38 This twenty years <sup>aa</sup>have I <sup>ab</sup>been with thee; thy ewes and thy she-goats <sup>ac</sup>have not cast their young, and the rams of thy flock have <sup>ad</sup>I not eaten.

39 That which was torn of <sup>ae</sup>beasts I brought not unto thee; I bare the loss of it: of <sup>af</sup>my hand didst thou require it, <sup>ag</sup>whether stolen by day, or stolen by night.

40 <sup>ah</sup>Thus I was; <sup>ai</sup>in the day the drought consumed me, and the frost by night; and my sleep departed from mine eyes.

41 Thus <sup>aj</sup>have I been twenty years in thy house: I served thee fourteen years for thy two daughters, and six years for thy cattle; and thou hast changed my wages <sup>ak</sup>ten times.

42 Except the God of my father, the God of Abraham, and <sup>al</sup>the Fear <sup>am</sup>of Isaac, had been with me, surely thou hadst sent me away now empty: God <sup>an</sup>hath seen mine affliction, and the labour of my hands, and rebuked <sup>ao</sup>thee yesternight.

44 Now therefore come thou, <sup>aw</sup>let us make a covenant, I and thou; and let it be for a witness between me and thee.

45 And Jacob took a <sup>ax</sup>stone, and set it up for a pillar.

46 And Jacob said unto his <sup>ay</sup>brethren, Gather stones: and they took stones, and made an heap; and they did eat there upon the heap.

47 And Laban called it <sup>az</sup>Jegar-sahadutha; but Jacob called it Galeed.<sup>9</sup>

48 And Laban said, This heap <sup>ba</sup>is a witness between me and thee this day. Therefore was the name of it called <sup>bb</sup>Galeed;

49 And <sup>bc</sup>Mizpah: for he said, The LORD watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from another.

50 If thou shalt afflict my daughters, <sup>bd</sup>or if thou shalt take <sup>be</sup>other wives besides my daughters, no man <sup>bf</sup>is with us; see, God <sup>bg</sup>is witness betwixt me and thee.

REFLECTIONS.—What stings do riches carry with them, that for them a man is envied of his neighbour! But base-minded indeed are those wretches who are ungrateful, and who reckon temporal wealth the principal glory. What an evil world is this, where the best behaviour cannot secure one's reputation! Too often sour looks deprive families of their best supports. It is a mercy that, in the very crisis of difficulty, God visits and comforts his people: that he never changes, but wills that we should live near to him. When we get worldly blessings in a new-covenant channel, they are doubly sweet; and yet, when outward mercies increase, we have great need to be stirred up to think of our celestial home. When we have gone safely out under God's direction, we need not fear to return under his care. But how apt are the best to forget the distinguished service of God, unless they be both driven and drawn to it! How pleasant when married persons dwell together in unity, and do nothing important without mutual consent! How strong is our affection to idols, when we will rather steal them than want them! and how despicable those deities that can be stolen and hidden among the stuff! God hath in his hand the hearts of all men; and he will continue to rescue his people when upon the brink of ruin, and will restrain their most outrageous enemies. Bad hearts are pregnant with evil surmises; and, if God hinder their mischievous designs, they readily pretend that they never formed them. Whatever wicked men think of foolish mirth and riotous feasting at the parting of friends, it is ordinarily a token of much coldness or corruption in religion. Rough and undeserved reproaches provoke even good men and of calm spirits to vindicate themselves with heat, and to recriminate on their reproachers; and even to utter hasty wishes, which would render them miserable if they took effect. But God can marvellously overrule the rage of men to a most friendly issue. And with meekness and prudence we ought to cherish even the smallest approach towards peace and reconciliation. To forgive and forget injuries, and render good for evil, is truly Christian; and near relations are doubly bound to mutual forgiveness and living

51 And Laban said to Jacob, Behold this heap, and behold this pillar, which I have cast betwixt me and thee;

52 This heap be witness, and this pillar be witness, that I will not pass over this heap to thee, and that thou shalt not pass over this heap, and this pillar, unto me, for harm.

54 Then Jacob offered sacrifice<sup>2</sup> upon the mount, and called his brethren <sup>3</sup>to eat bread: and they did eat bread, and tarried all night in the mount.

55 And early in the morning Laban rose up, and kissed his sons and his daughters, <sup>2</sup>and blessed them: and Laban departed, and returned unto his place.

<sup>1</sup> Jacob's vision at Mahanaim. <sup>3</sup> His message to Esau. <sup>6</sup> He is afraid of Esau's coming. <sup>9</sup> He prayeth for deliverance. <sup>13</sup> He sendeth a present to Esau. <sup>24</sup> He wrestleth with an angel at Peniel, where he is called Israel. <sup>31</sup> He halteth.

AND Jacob went on his way, <sup>2</sup>and the angels of God met him.

2 And when Jacob saw them, he said, This is God's <sup>1</sup>host: and he called the name of that place <sup>2</sup>Mahanaim.

3 ¶ And Jacob sent messengers before him to Esau his brother, unto the land of <sup>3</sup>Seir, the country<sup>3</sup> of Edom.<sup>4</sup>

4 And he commanded them, saying, Thus shall ye speak unto <sup>1</sup>my lord Esau; Thy servant Jacob saith thus, I have sojourned with Laban, and stayed there until now:

5 And I have oxen, and asses, flocks, and men-servants, and women-servants;<sup>5</sup> and I have sent to tell my lord, that I may find grace in thy sight.

6 ¶ And the messengers returned to Jacob, saying, We came to thy brother Esau, and also he <sup>1</sup>cometh to meet thee, and four hundred men with him.<sup>6</sup>

7 Then Jacob was <sup>2</sup>greatly afraid and distressed: <sup>3</sup>and he divided the people that was with him, and the flocks, and herds, and the camels, into two bands;

8 And said, If Esau come to the one company, and smite it, then the other company which is left shall escape.

9 ¶ And Jacob said,<sup>7</sup> O<sup>1</sup> God of my father Abraham, and God of my father Isaac, the LORD which saidst unto me, <sup>2</sup>Return unto thy country, and to thy kindred, and I will deal well with thee:

10 I am not <sup>1</sup>worthy of the least of all<sup>8</sup> the mercies, and of all the <sup>1</sup>truth, which thou hast showed unto thy servant; for <sup>2</sup>with my staff I passed over this Jordan, and now I am become two bands.

11 Deliver<sup>2</sup> me, I pray thee, from the hand of my brother, from the hand of Esau: for I fear him, lest he will come and smite me, <sup>2</sup>and the mother with<sup>9</sup> the children.

12 And <sup>2</sup>thou saidst, I will surely do thee good, and make thy seed as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered for multitude.

13 ¶ And he lodged there that same night; and took of that which came to his hand <sup>2</sup>a present for Esau his brother;

14 Two hundred she-goats, and twenty he-goats, two hundred ewes and twenty rams, 15 Thirty milch camels<sup>1</sup> with their colts, forty kine and ten bulls, twenty she-asses and ten foals.

16 And he delivered them into the hand of his servants, every drove by themselves; and said unto his servants, Pass over before me, and put a <sup>1</sup>space betwixt drove and drove.

17 And he commanded the foremost, saying, When Esau my brother meeteth thee, and asketh thee, saying, Whose art thou? and whither goest thou? and whose are these before thee?

18 Then thou shalt say, They be thy servant Jacob's; it is a present sent unto my lord Esau: and, behold, also he is behind us.

19 And so commanded he the second, and the third, and all that followed the droves, saying, On this manner shall ye speak unto Esau, when ye find him.

20 And say ye moreover, Behold, thy servant Jacob is behind us. For he said, I will appease him with the present that goeth before me, and afterward I will see his face; peradventure he will accept of me.<sup>2</sup>

21 So went the present over before him; and himself lodged that night in the company.

23 And he took them, and sent<sup>3</sup> them over the brook, and sent over that he had.

25 And when he saw that he <sup>1</sup>prevailed not against him, <sup>2</sup>he touched the hollow of his thigh; and the hollow of Jacob's thigh was out of joint, as he wrestled with him.

26 And he said, <sup>1</sup>Let me go, for the day breaketh.<sup>6</sup> And he said, <sup>2</sup>I will not let thee go, except thou bless me.

CHAPTER XXXII. Ver. 24–28. The Son of God in human form appeared to Jacob as if he intended to cast him down; but Jacob, enabled of God with bodily, and chiefly spiritual strength, in fervent prayer prevailed over what opposition Christ gave him. To render him sensible of his weakness, Christ disjoined his thigh, 2 Co. 12. 7; but after encouraging his supplications, he changed his name as a token of bettering his condition. Hence, when the church is represented as infirm, she is called Jacob, Am. 7. 2, 5, 8; Is. 41. 14; but when her valour and excellency are signified, she is called Israel, Ga. 6. 16. Thus God gave Jacob strength to overcome, and also the reward and praise of the victory.

27 And he said unto him, What is thy name? And he said, Jacob.

28 And he said, Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but Israel: for as a prince hast thou power with God and with men, and hast prevailed.

29 And Jacob asked him, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, thy name. And he said, Wherefore is it that thou dost ask after my name? And he blessed him there.

30 And Jacob called the name of the place Peniel: for I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved.

31 ¶ And as he passed over Peniel, the sun rose upon him, and he halted upon his thigh.

32 Therefore the children of Israel eat not of the sinew which shrank, which is upon the hollow of the thigh, unto this day; because he touched the hollow of Jacob's thigh in the sinew that shrank.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

1 The kindness of Jacob and Esau at their meeting. 17 Jacob cometh to Succoth. 18 At Shalem he buyeth a field, and buildeth an altar called El-elohe-Israel.

AND Jacob lifted up his eyes, and looked, and, behold, Esau came, and with him four hundred men. And he divided the children unto Leah, and unto Rachel, and unto the two handmaids.

2 And he put the handmaids and their children foremost, and Leah and her children after, and Rachel and Joseph hindmost.<sup>8</sup>

3 And he passed over before them, and bowed himself to the ground seven times, until he came near to his brother.<sup>9</sup>

4 And Esau ran to meet him, and embraced him, and fell on his neck, and kissed him: and they wept.

5 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw the women and the children, and said, Who are those with thee?<sup>1</sup> and he said, The children which God hath graciously given thy servant.

6 Then the handmaidens came near, they and their children, and they bowed themselves.

Jacob was still distrustful of Esau. He had himself practiced cunning and deception, and now he was harassed by the fear of others, when in reality there was no cause. His words to Esau must have left the impression that he would follow him to Seir at such a pace as the cattle and children could bear, but the movement Esau and his formidable escort set out southward Jacob turned westward and crossed the Jordan.

9 And Esau said, I have enough,<sup>3</sup> my brother; keep that thou hast unto thyself.<sup>4</sup>

11 Take, I pray thee, my blessing that is brought to thee; because God hath dealt graciously with me, and because I have enough. And he urged him, and he took it.

13 And he said unto him, My lord knoweth that the children are tender, and the flocks and herds with young are with me; and if men should overdrive them one day, all the flock will die.

14 Let my lord, I pray thee, pass over before his servant; and I will lead on softly, according as the cattle that goeth before me and the children be able to endure, until I come unto my lord unto Seir.

15 And Esau said, Let me now leave<sup>7</sup> with thee some of the folk that are with me. And he said, What needeth it?<sup>8</sup> let me find grace in the sight of my lord.<sup>9</sup>

16 So Esau returned that day on his way unto Seir.

17 ¶ And Jacob journeyed to Succoth, and built him an house, and made booths for his cattle: therefore the name of the place is called Succoth.<sup>1</sup>

18 ¶ And Jacob came to Shalem, a city of Shechem,<sup>2</sup> which is in the land of Canaan, when he came from Padan-aram, and pitched his tent before the city.

Ver. 29. He granted his request, and confirmed the blessings which he had formerly obtained, ch. 27. 28, 29; 28. 3, 4, 13-15; and comforted him under the hurt of his thigh, Ho. 6. 1.

REFLECTIONS.—What sore trials saints often meet with in the very way which God directs them to take! But seasonable are the visits which God and his angels make to his people in such times of need. May Jesus and his angels so meet me in my way to the Canaan above! Deep-rooted, indeed, is that resentment which neither length of days can wear out, nor the most submissive yielding assuage; and when what would make a friend rejoice, makes a brother envy and rage! Malicious spirits never forget injuries. Jealousy is cruel as the grave; and in this disordered world power and policy are often with the oppressors. In distress it is necessary to betake ourselves to prayer, and to join the protection of God with our prudent endeavours; and amidst fear of danger we ought to trust to and plead God's promises; and while commemorating our mercies, and conscious of our unworthiness, we must insist on his fulfilment of his word. In danger it is prudent to present a part, if that can preserve the whole, for peace cannot be bought too dear; and a large present is a good recommendation to a worldly mind; since apparent courage and confidence in a man's goodness lay him under a kind of obligation to show it. They who would prevail in temptations must first wrestle with God in prayer. If he exercise us with sore trials, we may depend on him, that as our days are so shall our strength be. A deep sense of our insufficiency gives our faith occasion to take more firm hold of Christ—God loves importunate prayers; and perseverance therein will be crowned with victory. How pleasant to have our hearts, and names, and all things made new! Such memorials of remarkable fellowship with God are honourable and pleasing; and even children may look back upon their parents' mercies, as upon their own, with regard and thankfulness. Let me here ask myself, What experience have I had of the ministration of God's angels? In what instances have I broken the bones with a soft answer, and pacified strong wrath with a gift in the bosom? What promises, spoken to my heart, have I pleaded at the throne of grace? What nights or days have I spent in wrestling with God, in behalf of myself, my family, my country, or the church of God? What blessings and answers of peace have I obtained? Where are those Bethels and Peniels in which God Almighty hath appeared unto me, and I have seen him in the person of Jesus Christ, 'as it were face to face,' and been preserved?

CHAPTER XXXIII. REFLECTIONS.—It is prudent to keep out of view whatever might revive old quarrels; and humble submission powerfully mollifies offended pride. Cheerfully may we wait the issue of that which hath been committed to God. He often makes the issue of our trials much better than our fears suggested; and easily he mollifies the most fierce and froward heart. How sweet in itself, and what a token of a pious soul, is it to view all that we have as the gifts of our gracious God! What a distinguished mercy it is to obtain the answer of our prayers, and to recover the favour of offended friends! And how inconsiderable the wants, and great the wealth, of those who have God their portion and guardian! A heart truly Christian is open and generous: but, if we have enough of our own, we ought civilly to refuse needless obligations, though

3 And his soul clave unto Dinah the daughter of Jacob; and he loved the damsel, and spake kindly<sup>5</sup> unto the damsel.

4 ¶ And Shechem spake unto his father Hamor, saying, <sup>6</sup>Get me this damsel to wife.

5 And Jacob heard that he had defiled Dinah his daughter: now his sons were with his cattle in the field; and Jacob held his peace until they were come.<sup>5</sup>

6 And Hamor the father of Shechem went out unto Jacob, to commune with him.

7 And the sons of Jacob came out of the field when they heard <sup>7</sup>it: and the men were grieved, and they were very wroth, because he had wrought <sup>8</sup>folly in <sup>9</sup>Israel,<sup>6</sup> in lying with Jacob's daughter; which thing <sup>10</sup>ought not to be done.

8 And Hamor communed with them, saying, The soul of my son Shechem longeth for your daughter: I pray you give her him to wife.

9 And <sup>11</sup>make ye marriages with us, <sup>12</sup>and give your daughters unto us, and take our daughters unto you:

10 And ye shall dwell with us: and the land shall be <sup>13</sup>before you; dwell and trade ye therein, and get you possessions therein.<sup>7</sup>

we should never be behind in acts of civility. Parents ought to manifest a most affectionate regard for their families, and especially to take care of their young ones. Perils of dangers escaped deserve a thankful remembrance; and wherever saints have houses, there God must be worshipped as their God and their glory. O, my soul, never fear that anything is too hard for the Lord! but always think, and speak, and act, as one whose God is JEHOVAH, and who follows peace with all men, and holiness! Never, therefore, let houses and booths for cattle have the preference of an altar for the Lord. We must not expect earthly enjoyments at free cost, because we have the heavenly so; but let the faith of God, as my own God, and the God of my seed, be rendered familiar to my heart and life; and then contentment, and patient expectation, will lead me cheerfully through all.

CHAPTER XXXIV. [Ver. 7. Were very wroth. A sensitive regard to family honour, when conjoined with personal purity of principle and conduct in all its members, is one of the most important public feelings, and one of the surest indexes of public morals. That this noble sentiment may, when discovered from religion, produce deceit and violence, as in the case of Jacob's sons, ver. 13, 25, is no charge against the sentiment itself, but rather an admonition to cherish it, in conjunction with that fear of God without which every human principle of morals is either too weak to insure its observance, or speedily degenerates into some specious vice. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Into what scenes of guilt and misery do the pride, the vanity, and lust of young persons often plunge themselves and their relations! One sin naturally makes way for another: and young women who are given to gadding abroad, rarely maintain their chastity. Yet it is but just that such as have defiled young women should espouse them in marriage, and repair their outward injury, though they cannot lessen their guilt before God. How readily the affairs

12 Ask<sup>8</sup> me never so much dowery and <sup>9</sup>gift, and I will give according as ye shall say unto me; but give me the damsel to wife.

13 ¶ And the sons of Jacob answered Shechem and Hamor his father <sup>10</sup>deceitfully, and said, (because he had defiled Dinah their sister,)

14 And they said unto them, We cannot do this thing, to give our sister to one that is <sup>11</sup>uncircumcised; for that <sup>12</sup>were a reproach unto us:

15 But in this will we consent unto you: If ye will be as we <sup>13</sup>be, that every male of you be circumcised;

16 Then will we give our daughters unto you, and we will take your daughters to us, and we will dwell with you, and we will become one people.

17 But if ye will not hearken unto us, to be circumcised, then will we take our daughter, and we will be gone.

18 And their words pleased Hamor, and Shechem Hamor's son.

19 And the young man deferred not to do the thing, because he had delight in Jacob's daughter: and he <sup>14</sup>was <sup>15</sup>more honourable than all the house of his father.

20 ¶ And Hamor and Shechem his son came unto <sup>16</sup>the gate of their city, and communed with the men of their city, saying, 21 These men <sup>17</sup>are peaceable with us; therefore let them dwell in the land, and trade therein; for the land, behold, <sup>18</sup>it is large enough for them: let us take their daughters to us for wives, and let us give them our daughters.

22 Only herein will the men consent unto us for to dwell with us, to be one people, if every male among us be circumcised, as they <sup>19</sup>are circumcised.

23 <sup>20</sup>Shall<sup>8</sup> not their cattle, and their substance, and every beast of theirs, <sup>21</sup>be ours? only let us consent unto them, and they will dwell <sup>22</sup>us.

24 And unto Hamor, and unto Shechem his son, hearkened all that went out of the gate of his city: and every male <sup>23</sup>was circumcised, all that went out of the gate of his city.

25 ¶ And it came to pass on the third day, when they were <sup>24</sup>sore, that two of the sons of of a family run wrong when parents' authority is so low that they must stand in awe of their children! How often heathens show more respect to parents, in point of their marriage, than many professed Christians! Men's rage at one sin frequently issues in their doing what is still worse—in making religious pretences the mean of accomplishing the most devilish villanies; or in pretending public welfare in order to obtain private ends. The hopes of gain will carry some men a great way in religion; and yet, after all, they lose their aim; for the profane reception of the seals of God's covenant issues most surely in just and inevitable ruin. Nothing is so treacherous or cruel that indulged malice will not attempt. But it is still worse when children, after plunging their parents into disgrace and danger, add to their grief by an insolent justification of their conduct. Let parents restrain their children from idleness, visits and foolish amusements; let them retain their proper authority; let them transact marriages with candour and self-denial—if they wish to be happy.

NABLOUS—WHERE JACOB HID THE EARRINGS. [Genesis, xxxv:4.]—
 “And they gave unto Jacob all the strange gods which were in their hand and all their earrings which were in their ears; and Jacob hid them under the oak which was by Shechem.” Nablous is the modern name of Shechem. It is now a thrifty, well kept Eastern city with a population of about 20,000, of which 160 are Samaritans, 600 are Christians, 200 are Jews, and the rest Mohammedans. The principal structures of the city are mosques. The only Samaritans in the world live here near their sacred mountain, where they continue to worship as they did when the woman of Samaria talked with our Savior at Jacob's well. There is a Samaritan synagogue here, where is kept what is said to be the oldest copy of the Bible in the world. The whole country in the neighborhood of Shechem or Nablous is historic.

Jacob, "Simeon and Levi, Dinah's brethren, took each man his sword, and came upon the city boldly, and slew all the males.

26 And they slew Hamor and Shechem his son with the edge of the sword, and took Dinah out of Shechem's house, and went out.

27 The sons of Jacob came upon the slain, and spoiled the city, because they had defiled their sister.

28 They took their sheep, and their oxen, and their asses, and that which was in the city, and that which was in the field, 29 And all their wealth, and all their little ones, and their wives took they captive, and spoiled even all that was in the house.

30 ¶ And Jacob said to Simeon and Levi, Ye have troubled me, to make me to stink among the inhabitants of the land, among the Canaanites and the Perizzites: and I being few in number, they shall gather themselves together against me, and slay me; and I shall be destroyed, I and my house.

31 And they said, Should he deal with our sister as with an harlot?

25 Rachel's sepulchre is still a noted spot. Jews and Mohammedans unite in honouring it. It is marked by a small building surmounted by a white dome. It is on the leading road from Jerusalem to Bethlehem, three miles from the former and one from the latter. The original name of Bethlehem appears to have been Ephrath, 'fruitful.' This gave place to Beth-lehem, 'house of bread,' which has given place to the Arabic Beth-lahm, 'house of flesh.' — P.

land of Canaan, (that is, Beth-el,) he, and all the people that were with him.

7 And he built there an altar, and called the place El-beth-el; because there God appeared unto him, when he fled from the face of his brother.

8 ¶ But Deborah, Rebekah's nurse, died, and she was buried beneath Beth-el under an oak: and the name of it was called Allon-bachuth.

9 ¶ And God appeared unto Jacob again, when he came out of Padan-aram, and blessed him.

10 And God said unto him, Thy name is Jacob: thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name: and he called his name Israel.

11 And God said unto him, I am God Almighty; be fruitful, and multiply: a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee; and kings shall come out of thy loins:

12 And the land which I gave Abraham and Isaac, to thee I will give it, and to thy seed after thee will I give the land.

13 And God went up from him in the place where he talked with him.

14 ¶ And Jacob set up a pillar in the place where he talked with him, even a pillar of stone; and he poured a drink-offering thereon, and he poured oil thereon.

15 And Jacob called the name of the place where God spake with him, Beth-el.

16 ¶ And they journeyed from Beth-el; and there was but a little way to come to Ephrath: and Rachel travailed, and she had hard labour.

17 And it came to pass, when she was in hard labour, that the midwife said unto her, Fear not; thou shalt have this son also.

18 And it came to pass, as her soul was in departing, (for she died,) that she called his name Ben-oni; but his father called him Benjamin.

19 And Rachel died, and was buried in the way to Ephrath, which is Beth-lehem.

20 And Jacob set a pillar upon her grave: that is the pillar of Rachel's grave unto this day.

21 And Israel journeyed, and spread his tent beyond the tower of Edar.

22 And it came to pass, when Israel dwelt in that land, that Reuben went and lay with CHAPTER XXXV. Ver. 1. He was to go thither to build an altar for sacrifices of thanksgiving for deliverances received, and to strengthen his faith in God's protection against present fears, ch. 34. 30.

Ver. 2. Their outward purification was to be attended with internal purification of their heart from idols, or from cruel dispositions. — [Put away. Whilst wicked men and seducers wax worse and worse, Jacob labours to make the sin and sorrow of his family an occasion of family reformation; and thus, out of evil, to extract good. That he did not sooner attempt to purge them from idolatry, cannot be charged against Jacob; for though the narrative is silent about any such attempt, no one can thence infer that the attempt was never previously made. Let the extent of Jacob's family (for he was a prince in the land) be considered; let the idolatrous materials of which it was originally composed be taken into account; and let Jacob be judged, not by those who, in circumstances somewhat similar, have most efficiently introduced and most successfully maintained it; and they, instead of censuring past failure as evidence of past neglect, will admire that grace of God which led Jacob to reform his family religion, and that moved his children and household to renounce every rite of idolatry to embrace the truth and worship of God. — Clean. Compared with Ex. 19. 10, this verse furnishes the first recorded example of washing as a ceremonial picture of regeneration. 'Ye must be born again,' and 'except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God,' Jn. 3. 5-7. — C.]

Ver. 7. He had formerly called it Beth-el, i.e. the house of God. Now, to attest his experience of God's fulfilment of his promises, he calls it El-Beth-el, i.e. the God of Bethel.

TOMB OF RACHEL—WHERE JACOB SET UP A PILLAR. [GENESIS, xxxv:19.]—"And Rachel died, and was buried in the way to Ephrath, which is Bethlehem. And Jacob set a pillar upon her grave; that is the pillar of Rachel's grave unto this day." This tomb is between Jerusalem and Bethlehem, near the latter place. Jews, Moslems and Christians all agree that here Rachel was entombed. Some monument has marked this spot for 3,600 years. The present square structure is modern, and was repaired a few years ago by Sit Moses Montifiore. The Jews meet here every Friday to pray. The building is 23 feet on each side. The height of the wall is 20 feet; the dome is 10 feet high. This is about one mile from Bethlehem and about five miles from Jerusalem. It is on the road from Jerusalem to Hebron and Egypt.

Bilhah, his father's concubine:<sup>9</sup> and Israel heard it. Now the sons of Jacob were twelve.

23 ¶ The sons of Leah; Reuben, Jacob's first-born, and Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Zebulun.

24 The sons of Rachel; Joseph, and Benjamin.

25 And the sons of Bilhah, Rachel's handmaid; Dan, and Naphtali.

26 And the sons of Zilpah, Leah's handmaid; Gad, and Asher. These are the sons of Jacob, which were born to him in Padan-aram.

27 ¶ And Jacob came unto Isaac his father unto Mamre, unto the city of Arba, (which is Hebron,) where Abraham and Isaac sojourned.

28 ¶ And the days of Isaac were an hundred and fourscore years.<sup>1</sup>

29 And Isaac gave up the ghost,<sup>2</sup> and died, and was gathered unto his people, being old and full of days; and his sons Esau and Jacob buried him.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

1 Esau's family in Canaan. 6 His removal to mount Seir. 9 His generations in mount Seir. 15 The dukes which descended of his sons. 20 The sons and dukes of Seir. 31 The kings of Edom. 40 The dukes that descended of Esau, according to their habitations.

NOW these are the generations of Esau, who is Edom.

2 Esau took his wives of the daughters of Canaan; Adah the daughter of Elon the Hittite, and Aholibamah the daughter of Anah, the daughter of Zibeon the Hivite;

3 And Bashemath, Ishmael's daughter, sister of Nebajoth.

4 And Adah bare to Esau Eliphaz; and Bashemath bare Reuel;

5 And Aholibamah bare Jeush, and Jaalam, and Korah. These are the sons of Esau, which were born unto him in the land of Canaan.

6 ¶ And Esau took his wives,<sup>3</sup> and his sons, and his daughters, and all the persons of his house, and his cattle, and all his beasts, and all his substance, which he had got in the land of Canaan; and went into the country from the face of his brother Jacob.

7 For their riches were more than that they might dwell together; and the land wherein they were strangers could not bear them because of their cattle.

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! how apt are the best of saints to forget their Bethel-enjoyments and their Bethel-vows, till the Lord by his providence shuts them up, and by his word reminds them of them! And yet how precious are such visits, and how fixed and lasting ought to be our care in maintaining intimate fellowship with God when once we have attained it! What corruptions and idols have need to be purged from the best hearts and families on earth, especially before solemn approaches to God! for let us always remember, there is no acceptable drawing near to God without having on Jesus' righteousness and grace, and with allowed sin in the heart; and sins must be put away with a resolution never to return to them. How much better to pay our vows too late than never! What deaths, what disorders, may we expect to meet with on earth! But surely it is a mercy much to be esteemed, that our forgetfulness of God doth not make him forget his kindness or promises to us. He often sweetens our past troubles, and prepares us for future ones, with the manifestations of his favour; and his sweetness never changes, even when the family, the wives, the children, or other created enjoyments, which we have so impatiently desired, prove deathful or distressing to us. Ah! how plainly men's sins are written on their judgments; and how infuriated they must be who think so little of death, amidst so many births, deaths, and graves, which all warn us of it! May our hearts be set upon our Christ, our family, our house eternal in the heavens! An old age on earth is so filled up with sins and troubles that it is scarcely worth coveting. But in the now deceased Isaac let me behold my Redeemer! How often promised! how earnestly desired! how long expected! how supernatural! and how gladdening to angels and men was his birth! How maliciously was he, the Father's only begotten Son, hated, mocked, and persecuted by his Jewish brethren, at the expense of their ejection from the church of God!

8 Thus dwelt Esau in mount Seir: Esau is Edom.

9 ¶ And these are the generations of Esau, the father of the Edomites,<sup>4</sup> in mount Seir.<sup>5</sup>

10 These are the names of Esau's sons: Eliphaz the son of Adah the wife of Esau, Reuel the son of Bashemath the wife of Esau.

11 And the sons of Eliphaz were Teman, Omar, Zepho,<sup>6</sup> and Gatam, and Kenaz.

12 And Timna was concubine to Eliphaz, Esau's son; and she bare to Eliphaz Amalek:<sup>7</sup> these were the sons of Adah, Esau's wife.

13 And these are the sons of Reuel; Nahath, and Zerah, Shammah, and Mizzah: these were the sons of Bashemath, Esau's wife.

14 And these were the sons of Aholibamah, the daughter of Anah, the daughter of Zibeon, Esau's wife; and she bare to Esau Jeush, and Jaalam, and Korah.

15 ¶ These were dukes<sup>8</sup> of the sons of Esau: the sons of Eliphaz the first-born son of Esau; duke Teman, duke Omar, duke Zepho, duke Kenas, 16 Duke Korah, duke Gatam, and duke Amalek. These are the dukes that came of Eliphaz in the land of Edom: these were the sons of Adah.

17 And these are the sons of Reuel, Esau's son; duke Nahath, duke Zerah, duke Shammah, duke Mizzah. These are the dukes that came of Reuel in the land of Edom: these are the sons of Bashemath, Esau's wife.

18 And these are the sons of Aholibamah, Esau's wife; duke Jeush, duke Jaalam, duke Korah: these were the dukes that came of Aholibamah, the daughter of Anah, Esau's wife.

19 These are the sons of Esau, (who is Edom,) and these are their dukes.

20 ¶ These are the sons of Seir the Horite, who inhabited the land;<sup>1</sup> Lotan, and Shobal, and Zibeon, and Anah, 21 And Dishon, and Ezer, and Dishan. These are the dukes of the Horites, the children of Seir in the land of Edom.

22 And the children of Lotan were Hori and Heman; and Lotan's sister was Timna.

23 And the children of Shobal were these;

* In the note on ch. 32, the importance of a sensitive regard to family honour was remarked; but the necessity of conjoining it with personal purity was added. Reuben, through the power of the one sentiment, family honour, practises deceit, and joins in revenge, slaughters a whole city; while, for want of the other, personal religion, he is himself guilty of a crime as foul as that which he avenged, with this additional aggravation, that he offered it not against a stranger, but a father.—Note. We must not mistake indignation against one sin for spiritual hatred of all sin, nor zeal for a favourite virtue at zeal for the glory of God.

¶ The record of Isaac's death is not inserted in its chronological order. This will appear from the following facts, which ought to be kept in mind. Isaac was sixty years old when Jacob was born. Jacob was seventy-eight years old when he went to Haran, and his father one hundred and thirty-eight. Jacob remained in Haran twenty years, and Joseph was seven years old when he left. Ten years later Joseph was sold into Egypt. Ch. 37, 2, and thirteen years afterwards he stood before Pharaoh. Ch. 41, 32. He was then thirty years old. Consequently, Isaac was one hundred and fifty-eight years old when Jacob returned from Haran to Canaan; he was one hundred and sixty-eight when Joseph was sold by his brethren; and his death took place only about one year before Joseph was presented to Pharaoh.—P.

¶ The Horites, dwellers in caves, were the principal occupants of Mount Seir. They appear to have been a gigantic race, related to the Emim and Rephaim. The chiefs here mentioned probably reigned in the country before the days of Esau. Esau conquered the Horites, seized their country, and either extirpated them or reduced them to submission. The descendants of Esau had full possession of Mount Seir, and were firmly established in it before the exodus.—P.

With what cheerfulness he assumed our nature, bore our sins and punishments, bore his cross, and laid down his life a ransom for men, that he might render the everlasting covenant a new testament in his blood, and purchase all spiritual blessings for us! Being raised from death he is espoused to a chosen church, chiefly consisting of Gentile sinners; and his blood, his prayers, and his power produce a most numerous offspring of spiritual and professed seed. But how great is his glory at his Father's right hand! and he will be glorious in the church below, where he digs the wells of salvation to give drink to his people, notwithstanding the envy of a carnal world. For a time what a struggle between his Jewish and Gentile church, till at last the former, rejecting their birthright and forfeiting their blessing, were cast out, and the latter became the highly-favoured but much-afflicted people of God!

CHAPTER XXXVII. Ver. 29, 34. Rending the upper garments was an emblem of rending the heart, Joel 2. 13; and was used at funerals, 2 Sa. 3. 31; or upon the news or sight of any great calamity. Job 1.

RAS EL 'AIN, NABLOUS—WHERE JOSEPH'S BRETHREN WENT TO FEED THEIR FLOCK. [GENESIS, xxxvii:12.]—"And his brethren went to feed their father's flock in Shechem." Here we have another view in Shechem. We see a stream flowing down in a small channel cut for it from the foot of Gerizim. The springs of Gerizim make the valley of Shechem the most beautiful and fruitful of Central Palestine. We see sloping up toward the left of the picture the sides of Mount Gerizim. Upon the summit of this mount there once stood a temple built by the Samaritans, when the Jews returned from captivity and would not allow them to help rebuild the Temple at Jerusalem because they had become a mixed race. Across the valley from Mount Gerizim is Mount Ebal. Between these two mountains Jesus often passed as he traveled from Nazareth to Jerusalem. Shechem is the oldest city connected with the history of Palestine.

FLOCKS NEAR THE PIT INTO WHICH JOSEPH WAS THROWN BY HIS BRETHREN.
[GENESIS, xxxvii: 17.]-Joseph was sent by his father to look after the welfare of his brethren, and was found by a man wandering in a field at Shechem, and the man asked him saying: What seekest thou? and he said, I seek my brethren. Tell me, I pray thee, where they feed their flocks. "And the man said, They are departed hence, for I heard them say: Let us go to Dothan. And Joseph went after his brethren and found them in Dothan." And when his brethren saw him coming, they said: Come, therefore, and let us slay him and cast him into some pit.

We see the flocks still feeding on the hills of Dothan, and the young shepherd we see watching them has on his coat of many colors, very much like that which excited the envy of Joseph's brethren. The hillside is still dotted, it is said, with rock-cut bottle-shaped cisterns, and it was in one of these that Joseph was thrown by his brethren.

FENCE AT DOTHAN—WHERE JOSEPH'S BRETHREN SOLD HIM TO THE ISHMAELITEISH MERCHANTS. [Genesis, xxxvii:25]—The thorny cactus everywhere abounds in Palestine, and is used by the natives for the purpose of making fences. One of the tallest of these cactus fences we saw at Dothan. In agreement with the narrative in Genesis, it is remarkable to find that the great highway from Gibeon to Egypt still passes near Dothan. It was along this road, beside which stands this cactus fence, that the Ishmaelites came from Gilead with their camels bearing spices and balm and myrrh, going to carry them down to Egypt, to whom Joseph was sold by his brethren; and it is said that modern Ishmaelites passing in the same way would not hesitate to make such a purchase now. The plains about Dothan have been used for pasturing sheep in all ages. Here the nomadic shepherd still reigns, while the higher lands are held by a settled population. Elisha resided at Dothan.

son; and called his name Shelah: and he was at 'Chezib when she bare him.

6 And 'Judah took a<sup>6</sup> wife for Er his first-born, whose name was Tamar.

7 And Er, Judah's first-born, was 'wicked' in the sight of the LORD; and the LORD slew him.

8 And Judah said unto Onan, Go 'in unto thy brother's wife, and marry her, and raise up seed to thy brother.

9 And Onan knew that the seed should 'not be his: and it came to pass, when he went in unto his brother's wife, that he spilled it on the ground, 'lest that he should give seed to his brother.

10 And the thing which he did 'displeased the LORD: wherefore he slew him also.

11 Then said Judah to Tamar his daughter-in-law, 'Remain a widow at thy father's house till Shelah my son be grown: (for he said, Lest peradventure he die also, as his brethren did.) And Tamar went and dwelt in her father's house.

12 ¶ And in process of time the daughter of Shuah, Judah's wife, died.<sup>8</sup> and Judah was comforted,<sup>9</sup> and went up 'unto his sheep-shearers to 'Timnath, he and his friend Hirah the Adullamite.

13 And it was told Tamar, saying, Behold, thy father-in-law goeth up to Timnath to shear his sheep.<sup>9</sup>

14 And she put her widow's garments off from her, and covered her with a veil, and wrapped herself, and sat in 'an open place, which is by the way to 'Timnath: for she saw that Shelah was grown, and she was not given unto him to wife.

15 When Judah saw her, he thought her to be an harlot; because she had covered her face.

16 And he turned unto her by the way, and said, 'Go to, I pray thee, let me come in unto thee; (for he knew not that she was his daughter-in-law.) And she said, 'What wilt thou give me, that thou mayest come in unto me?

17 And he said, I will send thee a kid from the flock. 'And she said, Wilt thou give me a pledge till thou send it?

In some exemplary manner the Lord slew him, therein commencing that series of afflictions which softened Judah's heart, and brought him back to God. Contrast his unfeeling cruelty to his father, verse 32, with his generous devotedness, chap. 44. 33. 34, and can we entertain a doubt that old things had passed away from his heart, and all things had become new!—C.

<sup>2</sup> Judah, as an independent pastoral prince, exercises the power of life and death. The death of burning pronounced against Tamar would, at first sight, seem to indicate a high moral sense of propriety and deep abhorrence of sin, while on closer examination we discern that it may merely indicate an intense feeling of injury and desire of revenge (compare ch. 34. 7, 25). In the present instance the culprit is guilty of one sin, the judge of two—the violation of his promise, ver. 14, and the very sin which he so rigorously condemns.—C.

marriage of Judah took place immediately after, or rather before, the selling of Joseph, is not absolutely certain.

Ver. 8. According to this patriarchal custom, afterwards enacted into an express law of God, De. 25. 5, 6, the first-born was accounted legal son and heir to the deceased brother, and the rest of the children reckoned his who begot them.

Ver. 9. His sin was extremely heinous, not only as it proceeded from envy of his brother's honour, and contempt of the promised seed, but as it was horrid and unnatural in itself. Nor, till the last judgment, will it appear what guilt of this nature hath been committed among mankind, nor how fearfully God hath punished the same.

REFLECTIONS. — Unhallowed and over-hasty marriages often issue in fearful and numerous mischiefs; and such sins in parents are punished by the like in their children. The lusts of the flesh issue in terrible plagues and untimely deaths. And extremely foolish is their choice who dare to purchase a momentary enjoyment of their lust by exposing themselves to everlasting despair in hell. How tremendous the discernment of God in marking out men for objects of his distinguished judgment against sin! And empty professors of the true religion are generally fixed upon for this purpose. At what an easy rate do most men part with their true honour and salvation, while they are mightily concerned about their temporal interests or worldly securities! Temporal loss and worldly shame weigh more with them than sin, with all the sorrow which attends it. So deceitful indeed is sin, that hardened sinners are sometimes the most severe against their fellow, but less guilty, offenders! And malice against their persons puts on the cloak of zeal against their sins. O what a mercy, if such be brought to a timely sense of, and return from, their sinfulness at last! Especially ought we to exercise much tenderness and compassion towards such as we have tempted into sin. But is anything so astonishing, as that this enormous wickedness, this unnatural sin, should be used by JEHOVAH as the distant means of the incarnation of his only begotten Son! Behold how—where sin had abounded and reigned unto disorder, shame, and death—grace reigns, through righteousness, unto

COFFEE HOUSE IN THE GARDEN OF THE VIRGIN AT MATARIYEH—WHERE JOSEPH LIVED. [GENESIS, xxxix:1.]—"And Joseph was brought down to Egypt; and Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh, captain of the guard, an Egyptian, bought him of the hands of the Ishmaelites which had brought him down thither." We give this picture of a coffee house in the garden of The Virgin, because Matariyeh is only about a half mile from the site of the Temple of the Sun which stood in Heliopolis. It was a priest of this temple whose daughter Joseph married, and it was doubtless in this place that Joseph lived and met his father when he came down from Canaan under the exigency of famine to live in Egypt. This coffee house is for the accommodation of tourists who come out from Cairo to visit Matariyeh because of its connection with the sojourn of Joseph and Mary, and with the history of Joseph the son of Jacob in Egypt.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

1 Joseph is advanced in Potiphar's house. 7 He resisteth his mistress's temptation, is falsely accused by her, and cast in prison. 21 God is with him there.

AND Joseph was brought down to Egypt; and Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh, captain of the guard, an Egyptian, bought him of the hands of the Ishmeelites, which had brought him down thither.

2 And the LORD was with Joseph, and he was a prosperous man; and he was in the house of his master the Egyptian.

3 And his master saw that the LORD was with him, and that the LORD made all that he did to prosper in his hand.

4 And Joseph found grace in his sight, and he served him; and he made him overseer over his house, and all that he had he put into his hand.

5 And it came to pass, from the time that he had made him overseer in his house, and over all that he had, that the LORD blessed the Egyptian's house for Joseph's sake; and the blessing of the LORD was upon all that he had in the house, and in the field.

6 And he left all that he had in Joseph's hand; and he knew not ought he had, save the bread which he did eat: and Joseph was a goodly person, and well-favoured.

7 ¶ And it came to pass after these things, that his master's wife cast her eyes upon Joseph; and she said, Lie with me.

8 But he refused; and said unto his master's wife, Behold, my master wotteth not what is with me in the house, and he hath committed all that he hath to my hand:

9 There is none greater in this house than I; neither hath he kept back any thing from me but thee, because thou art his wife: how then can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God?

10 And it came to pass, as she spake to Joseph day by day, that he hearkened not unto her, to lie by her, or to be with her.

11 And it came to pass about this time, that Joseph went into the house to do his business; and there was none of the men of the house there within.

12 And she caught him by his garment, saying, Lie with me: and he left his garment in her hand, and fled, and got him out.

7 This continued imprisonment, followed by the liberance of the butler first, and finally of Joseph, indicates a high degree of legal civilization amongst the Egyptians at this period. In a despotic government they would all have perished at the first ebullition of anger.—C.

8 The character of Joseph stands out as one of the purest in the whole compass of sacred history. No temptation could overcome his high-toned morality, no calamity could shake his implicit faith in God. Adversity in its bitterest form did not unduly depress him, and neither did the giddiest height of prosperity generate in him unseemly pride. In his father's house, pampered and fondled in slavery, wantonly and falsely accused; in the palace, wielding unlimited power, he was always the same truthful, pure, just, noble-minded, God-fearing man.—P.

4 This is the second instance of Joseph's extraordinary success, or as the world would call it, good fortune. The Scripture traces his progress to a higher source. The Lord was with him, showed him mercy, gave him favour. The character of Joseph from his youth was one of extreme transparency. If we may so speak; because one of unmingled honesty to man and unfeigned piety towards God. Temporal success God may deny to his dearest child, He 12. 6. 20 And Joseph's master took him, and put him into the prison, a place where the king's prisoners were bound: and he was there in the prison.

21 ¶ But the LORD was with Joseph, and showed him mercy, and gave him favour in the sight of the keeper of the prison.

22 And the keeper of the prison committed to Joseph's hand all the prisoners that were in the prison; and whatsoever they did there, he was the doer of it.

23 The keeper of the prison looked not to any thing that was under his hand; because the LORD was with him, and that which he did, the LORD made it to prosper.

CHAPTER XL.

1 The butler and baker of Pharaoh in prison are committed to Joseph's charge. 5 He interpreteth their dreams. 20 They come to pass according to his interpretation. 23 The ingratitude of the butler.

AND it came to pass after these things, that the butler of the king of Egypt and his baker had offended their lord the king of Egypt.

2 And Pharaoh was wroth against two of his officers, against the chief of the butlers, and against the chief of the bakers.

3 And he put them in ward in the house of inconceivable honour, and everlasting life, by Jesus Christ our Lord!

CHAPTER XXXIX. REFLECTIONS.—What need we have of humble hearts—for who knows how low and debased God may make our lot on earth! But the advantage of God's presence and favour is in every condition chiefly to be desired. If he be with us we shall be well wherever we are. His blessing makes rich and honoured; and without it all our labours are in vain. Godly and faithful servants are an inestimable treasure; and such as are wise will not fail to esteem and prefer them. Providential smiles are often but inlets to fearful and strong temptations, or to grievous and lasting distresses. But to what horrid lengths, in the most shameful wickedness, will such go as have once broken through the natural restraints of common modesty!—abandoned themselves, they can use the most shameless endeavours to draw others into sin. A fiery furnace is less to be feared than a beautiful abandoned woman. Flight is the only preservative from violent temptations to uncleanness; and surely it is better to hazard our life than to wound our conscience. But in such most ensnaring temptations, a deep sense of the evil of sin, as offensive to God and injurious to man, is the only thing that will effectually prevent compliance. But how hard to obtain protection from a lying tongue! The best of men have been accused of the most atrocious crimes. And there is a great readiness in men to believe an evil report, especially against the professors of religion. Here the most improbable story gains easy credit. How often guilt is honoured, and innocence oppressed and punished! Yet let me not be weary in well-doing, or in resisting unto blood, striving against sin; for the bitterest sufferings, with a good conscience, are to be preferred to all the pleasures of sin. Though persecutors should be deaf to my plea, there is one, JEHOVAH, who seeth and judgeth. In his time he will vindicate my character and plead my cause. No prison can exclude his presence. He will certainly give me my reward in heaven, and perhaps part of it in a prison, where I shall z That we take no note of time, but from its loss, is a just and striking observation.A bird's-day attained is really the loss of a unit from the sum of our years. Then how comes such a loss to be an occasion of congratulation and of feasting? Chiefly because worldly-minded men seldom retrace the 'time part' of their lives, but rather think it a Pe. 4. 3, or anticipate that portion of the future when they must give account to him who (1 Pe. 4. 5) is ready to judge the quick and the dead.But rather think it a 'strange' (1 Pe. 4. 4) if Christian converts can not with them to the same end of riot. But how may a Christian observe a birth-day? Pharaoh furnishes a useful lesson. 1. He employed his birth-day in reviewing the affairs of his household: his servant, found innocent, he restored; another, and guilty, he condemned. So, a duty neglected, should by the Christian be zealously resumed, a sin discovered, be unreservedly mortified. 2. A year is the period of amount of a Christian's natural days, should be so much graced to his experience of the grace of God. 3. The loss of the past, should lead him to 'walk circumspectly, redeeming, improving, putting to the highest use, the time, because the days are evil.' Ep. 5. 16. 4. Let the anniversary of our natural birth remind us that 'unless we be born again, we can neither enter into the kingdom of God.' Jn. 3. 3. 5.—C.

did eat up the seven well-favoured and fat kine.
50 Pharaoh awoke.

5 And he slept and dreamed the second time: and, behold, seven ears of corn came up upon one stalk, rank<sup>4</sup> and good.

6 And, behold, seven thin ears, and blasted with the east wind, sprung up after them.

7 And the seven thin ears devoured the seven rank and full ears. And Pharaoh awoke, and, behold, it was a dream.

8 And it came to pass in the morning that his<sup>a</sup> spirit was troubled; and he sent and called for all the magicians of Egypt, and all the wise men thereof: and Pharaoh told them his dreams; but there was none that could interpret them unto Pharaoh.

9 ¶ Then spake the chief butler unto Pharaoh, saying, I do remember my faults this day:

10 Pharaoh was wroth with his servants, and put me in ward<sup>b</sup> in the captain of the guard's house, both me and the chief baker:

11 And we dreamed a dream in one night, I and he; we dreamed each man according to the interpretation of his dream.

12 And there was there with us a young man, an Hebrew, servant to the captain of the guard; and we told him, and <sup>he</sup> interpreted to us our dreams: to each man according to his dream he did interpret.

13 And it came to pass, as he interpreted to us, so it was; <sup>me</sup> he restored unto mine office, and him he hanged.<sup>c</sup>

14 ¶ Then<sup>d</sup> Pharaoh sent and called Joseph, and they brought him <sup>hastily</sup> out of the dungeon: and he shaved<sup>e</sup> himself, and <sup>changed</sup> his raiment, and came in unto Pharaoh.

15 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I have dreamed a dream, and there is none that can interpret it: and I have heard say of thee, that thou canst understand a dream to interpret it.<sup>f</sup>

16 And Joseph answered Pharaoh, saying, It<sup>g</sup> is not in me: God shall give Pharaoh an answer<sup>h</sup> of <sup>peace</sup>.

17 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, In my dream, behold, I stood upon the bank of the river:

18 And, behold, there came up out of the river seven kine, fat-fleshed and well-favoured; and they fed in a meadow:

19 And, behold, seven other kine came up after them, poor, and very ill-favoured, and lean-

But, above all things, we must admire that providence that permits this forgetfulness to keep Joseph in prison till he is needed, and then employs the ingeniousness to bring him forth to liberty and honour.—C.

<sup>o</sup> This is one of many passages in which the truth of the Scripture narrative is attested by an incidental and slight allusion to remarkable customs, which no mere inventor would think of noticing, or notice without explaining. Shaving was a remarkable custom of the Egyptians, in which they were distinguished from other oriental nations, who carefully cherished the beard, and regarded the loss of it as a deep disgrace. Here Joseph shaves himself in conformity with an Egyptian usage, of which this passage conveys the earliest intimation.

<sup>6</sup> We may observe here, that Joseph directs Pharaoh to look up to God, as the author of all these events; and that not in an ordinary manner; since such fertility and such famine did not proceed from natural causes, but from an overruling providence, which made the river Nile overflow its banks so largely for seven years together, and so occasion a great plenty; and then for the next seven years overflow very little, if at all, and so produce a very sore and long famine. Nor can he be objected to Joseph, that he was guilty of presumption or boldness, in giving his advice to Pharaoh concerning the provision that was to be made against the ensuing scarceness, since he was conscious to himself that he was best able to give such advice; and would have been guilty of the sin of omission had he neglected to do it, in so great and so general a concern.—Patrick.

fleshed, such as I never saw in all the land of Egypt for badness.

20 And the lean and the ill-favoured kine did eat up the first seven fat kine.

21 And when they had eaten them up,<sup>1</sup> it could not be known that they had eaten them; but they were still ill-favoured, as at the beginning. So I awoke.

22 And I saw in my dream, and, behold, seven ears came up in one stalk, full and good:

23 And, behold, seven ears, withered,<sup>2</sup> thin, and blasted with the east wind,<sup>3</sup> sprung up after them.

24 And the thin ears devoured the seven good ears. And I told this unto the magicians; but there was none that could declare it to me.

26 The seven good kine <sup>are</sup> seven years, and the seven good ears <sup>are</sup> seven years: the dream is one.

27 And<sup>6</sup> the seven thin and ill-favoured kine that came up after them <sup>are</sup> seven years; and the seven empty ears blasted with the east wind shall be seven years of famine.

28 This is the thing which I have spoken unto Pharaoh: what God is about to do he showeth unto Pharaoh.

29 Behold, <sup>there come</sup> seven years of great plenty throughout all the land of Egypt:

30 And there shall arise after them <sup>seven</sup> years of famine; and all the plenty shall be forgotten<sup>7</sup> in the land of Egypt; and the famine shall consume the land:

31 And the plenty shall not be known in the land by reason of that famine following; for it shall be very grievous.<sup>8</sup>

32 And for that the dream was <sup>doubled</sup> unto Pharaoh twice; it is because the thing is established<sup>9</sup> by God, and God will shortly bring it to pass.

33 Now therefore let Pharaoh look out a man discreet and wise, and set him over the land of Egypt.

34 Let Pharaoh do this, and let him appoint <sup>officers</sup> over the land, and <sup>take up</sup> the fifth part<sup>10</sup> of the land of Egypt in the seven plenteous years.

35 And let them gather all the food of those good years that come, and lay up corn under

REFLECTIONS.—Certain, though slow, is the execution of God's purposes of favour to his people; and by the most insignificant, or even extravagant, means he often accomplishes them. But when patience hath had her perfect work, God can easily furnish the means of his people's deliverance: and wehn his time of delivering his people comes, he causes men to remember and to do their duty towards them; and wisely to accomplish his purpose. How amiable and excellent, when great gifts and great graces are adorned with the deepest humility, referring all the glory to God, and behaving modestly towards men! But changeable and perishing are all earthly enjoyments, especially desirable ones. Let me then use them with caution, and lay up in heaven a better and enduring substance; for it is infinitely necessary to provide without delay against future, against everlasting wants. In the meanwhile we must esteem it an undeserved mercy, that God hath set prosperity and adversity, plenty and famine, debasement and glory, the one against the other. How glorious the character in which extensive knowledge, firm friendship, active diligence, unshaken fidelity, forgetfulness of injuries received, and hearty acknowledgment of God in all things, are remarkably connected! Happy the nation the management of which is intrusted to such persons! But chiefly rejoice, my soul, that Jesus was taken from prison and from judgment, and hath all power given to him in heaven and on earth, in order to bestow the hand of Pharaoh, and let them keep food in the cities.

36 And that food shall be for store to the land against the seven years of famine, which shall be in the land of Egypt; that the land perish not through the famine.

37 And the thing was good in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of all his servants.

38 ¶ And Pharaoh said unto his servants, Can we find such a one as this is, a man in whom the Spirit of God is?<sup>2</sup>

39 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, Forasmuch as God hath showed thee all this, there is none so discreet and wise as thou art:

40 Thou shalt be over my house, and according unto thy word shall all my people be ruled: only in the throne will I be greater than thou.

41 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, See, I have set thee over all the land of Egypt.

42 And Pharaoh took off his ring from his hand, and put it upon Joseph's hand, and arrayed him in vestures of fine linen,<sup>3</sup> and put a gold chain about his neck.<sup>4</sup>

43 And he made him to ride in the second chariot which he had; and they cried before him, Bow<sup>5</sup> the knee: and he made him ruler over all the land of Egypt.

44 And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I am Pharaoh,<sup>6</sup> and without thee shall no man lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt.

45 And Pharaoh called Joseph's name Zaphnath-paaneah,<sup>7</sup> and he gave him to wife Asenath, the daughter of Poti-pherah 'priest of On.'<sup>8</sup> And Joseph went out over all the land of Egypt.

46 ¶ (And Joseph was thirty years old when he stood before Pharaoh king of Egypt.) And Joseph went out from the presence of Pharaoh, and went throughout all the land of Egypt.

47 And in the seven plentiful years the earth brought forth by handfuls.

48 And he gathered up all the food of the seven years, which were in the land of Egypt, and laid up the food in the cities: the food of the field, which was round about every city, laid he up in the same.

49 And Joseph gathered corn as the sand of the sea, very much, until he left numbering; for it was without number.

50 ¶ And unto Joseph were born two sons before the years of famine came, which Asenath, the daughter of Poti-pherah priest<sup>9</sup> of On, bare unto him.

51 And Joseph called the name of the first-born Manasseh:<sup>1</sup> For God, said he, hath made me forget all my toil, and all my father's house.<sup>2</sup>

1 That Joseph, from his knowledge of his brethren's character,

may have believed them capable of bein the limits of pos-course was open and his intentions kind.

But as it is said in ver. 7 that he spoke roughly to them, we rather conclude he was feigning; and though his design was good, we may not excuse on one word of dissimulation

by which it was to be accomplished. Joseph

54 And<sup>6</sup> the seven years of dearth began to come, according as Joseph had said: and the dearth was in all lands; but in all the land of Egypt there was bread.

55 And when all the land of Egypt was famished, the people cried to Pharaoh for bread: and Pharaoh said unto all the Egyptians, 'Go unto Joseph; what he saith to you, do.'

56 And the famine was over all the face of the earth.<sup>6</sup> And Joseph opened all the storehouses,<sup>7</sup> and sold unto the Egyptians; and the famine waxed sore in the land of Egypt.

57 And all countries came into Egypt to Joseph for to buy corn; because that the famine was so sore in all lands.

CHAPTER XLII.

1 Jacob sendeth his ten sons to buy corn in Egypt. 6 They are imprisoned by Joseph for spies, but set at liberty on condition to bring Benjamin. 21 They have remorse for Joseph. 24 Simeon is kept for a pledge. 25 They return with corn, and their money. 29 Their relation to Jacob. 35 He is afraid, and refuseth to send Benjamin.

NOW when Jacob saw that there was corn in Egypt, Jacob said unto his sons, Why do ye look one upon another?

2 And he said, Behold, I have heard that there is corn in Egypt; get you down thither, and buy for us from thence, that we may live, and not die.

3 And Joseph's ten brethren went down to buy corn in Egypt.

4 But Benjamin, Joseph's brother, Jacob sent not with his brethren: for he said, 'Lest peradventure mischief befall him.'

5 And the sons of Israel came to buy corn among those that came: for the famine was in the land of Canaan.

6 ¶ And Joseph was the governor over the land, and he it was that sold to all the people of the land: and Joseph's brethren came, and bowed down themselves before him with their faces to the earth.

7 And Joseph saw his brethren, and he knew them, but made himself strange unto them, and spake roughly unto them; and he said unto them, Whence come ye? And they said, From the land of Canaan to buy food.

8 And Joseph knew his brethren, but they knew not him.

9 And Joseph remembered the dreams which he dreamed of them, and said unto them, Ye are spies: to see the nakedness of the land ye are come.

blessings on perishing sinners! Rejoice that God hath made him to forget his labour, and made him fruitful in the land of his affliction! He seeth his seed, the travail of his soul, and is satisfied. And what a mercy is it that all nations have access to him, not to buy with money, but to receive all the blessings of time and eternity from him without money and without price.

CHAPTER XLII. Ver. 7. Joseph dealt thus harshly with them, (1) That he might hereby procure a full account of the present state of his father's family:

(2) That they might be the more thoroughly convinced of, and humbled for, their former sins, particularly their hatred, intended murder, and actual selling of himself: (3) To enhance their joy when he should discover himself: (4) To render the fulfilment of his own dreams the more conspicuous.

GRAIN BOATS ON THE NILE - SHOWING HOW CORN HAS ALWAYS BEEN BROUGHT DOWN FROM UPPER EGYPT. [GENESIS, xli : 49.]—"And Joseph gathered corn as the sand of the sea, very much, until he left numbering; for it was without number." These grain boats we see on the Nile bring down from Upper Egypt every year the same kind of corn that Joseph gathered together during the seven years of plenty, against the seven years of famine. In our country this is called wheat. In the Bible it is called corn. The wheat is loaded in these boats without being sacked, poured into the frame work or body of them, and after the boats reach their destination at Cairo, the wheat is sacked and carried upon the shore, whence it is shipped to different countries. The place where these boats land is about a mile above Cairo, near the island of Rhoda, and near the Nilometer. Standing here we are very near the reputed place where Moses was discovered in the Nile by the daughter of Pharaoh.

WATER DRAWING IN EGYPT—CHARACTERISTIC METHOD IN ALL AGES. [GENESIS, xli: 57.]—"And all countries came into Egypt to Joseph for to buy corn, because that the famine was so sore in all lands." It is very appropriate, therefore, that the accompanying picture represents a scene near the village of Matariyeh where Joseph lived. Here came Abraham with his wife Sarah at the very dawn of Hebrew history. Here many centuries later Joseph and the Virgin Mother found rest and shelter, and here after the crucifixion and resurrection came the messengers of the Gospel to preach peace on earth. This is a water-drawing scene characteristic of Egypt in all ages, helping us to see how from the Nile people have been able to irrigate their soil and thus secure abundant crops while famines came often to other lands.

10 And they said unto him, Nay, my lord; but to buy food are thy servants come.

11 We are all one man's sons;<sup>9</sup> we are true men thy servants are no spies.

12 And he said unto them, Nay, but to see the nakedness<sup>1</sup> of the land ye are come.

13 And they said, Thy servants are twelve brethren, the sons of one man in the land of Canaan; and, behold, the youngest is this day with our father, and one <sup>is</sup> not.

14 And Joseph said unto them, <sup>That is it</sup> that I spake unto you, saying, Ye are spies:

15 Hereby ye shall be proved: <sup>By the life of Pharaoh</sup> ye shall not go forth hence, except your youngest brother come hither.

16 Send one of you, and let him fetch your brother, and ye shall be kept<sup>3</sup> in prison, that your words may be proved, whether there be any truth in you: or else, by the life of Pharaoh, surely ye are spies.

17 And he put<sup>4</sup> them all together into ward three days.

18 And Joseph said unto them the third day, This do, and live; for I fear God.

19 If ye be true men, let one of your brethren be bound in the house of your prison: go ye, carry corn for the famine of your houses:

20 But bring your youngest brother unto me; so shall your words be verified, and ye shall not die. And they did so.<sup>5</sup>

21 ¶ And they said one to another, We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear; <sup>therefore</sup> is this distress come upon us.

22 And Reuben answered them, saying, Spake I not unto you, saying, Do not sin against the child; and ye would not hear? therefore, behold, also his blood is <sup>required</sup>.

23 And they knew not that Joseph understood them; for he spake unto them by an interpreter.<sup>6</sup>

24 And he turned himself about from them, and wept; and returned to them again, and communed with them, and took from them Simeon,<sup>7</sup> and bound him before their eyes.

25 ¶ Then Joseph commanded to fill their sacks with corn, and to restore every man's

These were sad tidings indeed; and what made their poor afflicted father break out into this melancholy complaint: 'That one way or other, him they had deprived of his children; that Joseph was dead, Simeon was left in Egypt, and he was going to take Benjamin from him likewise, which were things too heavy for him to bear.'—Stackhouse.

26 And they laded their asses with the corn, and departed thence.<sup>8</sup>

27 And as one of them opened his sack to give his ass provender in the inn, he espied his money; for, behold, it was in his sack's mouth.

28 And he said unto his brethren, My money is restored; and, lo, it is even in my sack: and their heart failed<sup>1</sup> them, and they were afraid, saying one to another, What is this that God hath done unto us?

29 ¶ And they came unto Jacob their father unto the land of Canaan, and told him all that befell unto them,<sup>2</sup> saying, 31 And we said unto him, We are true men; we are no spies.

32 We be twelve brethren, sons of our father: one is not, and the youngest is this day with our father in the land of Canaan.

33 And the man, the lord of the country, said unto us, Hereby shall I know that ye are true men: leave one of your brethren here with me, and take food for the famine of your households, and be gone;

34 And bring your youngest brother unto me: then shall I know that ye are no spies, but that ye are true men: so will I deliver you your brother, and ye shall traffic in the land.

35 ¶ And it came to pass, as they emptied their sacks, that, behold, every man's bundle of money was in his sack: and when both they and their father saw the bundles of money, they were afraid.

36 And Jacob their father said unto them, Me have ye bereaved of my children: Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away. All these things are against me.

37 And Reuben spake unto his father, saying, Slay my two sons, if I bring him not to thee: deliver him into my hand, and I will bring him to thee again.

REFLECTIONS.—What a mercy it is to be assured that in the Canaan above there is no scarcity, no want! And here on earth one country can ordinarily supply the wants of another. But is it not strange that the accursed descendants of Ham should have plenty, when God's faithful people, the seed of Abraham, are in want! Yet even this is evidently to bring about his purposes for his people, and to show us that all the mysteries of his providence shall display his power and wisdom, and in the issue bring greater benefits to his redeemed; and, in God's time, the most malignant opposers of his designs are made willingly to submit thereto, and accomplish the same. But while trusting in the Lord, parents and masters ought to provide, with great care, for the external subsistence, and how much more for the religious edification, of their families. What harsh measures are sometimes necessary to awaken, and thoroughly convince, such consciences as have been long asleep and hardened in sin! but the fear of God, prevalent in the heart, effectually determines men to equity and benevolence, and restrains from tyrannical cruelty and injustice. Trying providences often recall sin to men's remembrance, and render that bitter which was formerly sweet. And it is indeed a needful stroke that awakens the conscience to a serious remembrance of former sins. When we share with others in their calamity, it is no small comfort to know ourselves clear of their guilt. How often God writes men's sins on their troubles! These Hebrews had sold their brother for money, and now his money fills them with dread; guilty consciences being subject to perpetual alarms. There is need of constant preparation for trials, as we often meet with them when and where they were least expected. But mournful is the case of families when mutual trust in one another is weakened. Surely there is great need of a holy disengagement from all creatures; for in proportion to our love to them, will be our fears of losing them, and our distress in parting from them. Very often the best of saints distress themselves with needless fears that all things are against them, when they are really, nay remarkably, working for their good. And no wonder, when the very children from whom distinguished comforts are justly expected, so often, by their wickedness, bring their aged parents with sorrow to the grave. But now, my soul, when Jesus deals roughly with me, to convince and humble my proud spirit, or to try my love to himself and his Father, and to my fellow-saints, let me always acknowledge my offences with brokenness of heart; and let me bless him who hath so planned, and so executes his schemes in the which ye go, then shall ye bring down my gray hairs <sup>h</sup>with sorrow to the grave.

16 And when Joseph saw Benjamin with them, he said to the <sup>m</sup>ruler of his house, Bring these men home,<sup>5</sup> and <sup>a</sup>slay, and make ready; for these men shall dine with me at noon.

17 And the man did as Joseph bade: and the man brought the men into Joseph's house.

18 And the men were <sup>a</sup>afraid, because they were brought into Joseph's house:<sup>6</sup> and they said, Because of the money that was returned in our sacks at the first time are we brought in; that he may <sup>a</sup>seek occasion against us, and fall upon us, and take us for bondmen, and our asses.

19 ¶ And they came near to the steward of Joseph's house; and they communed with him at the door of the house, of redemption, that I am always obliged to return to himself, as my great supplier, in time of need.

20 And said, O Sir, <sup>a</sup>We came indeed <sup>a</sup>down at the first time to buy food:

CHAPTER XLIII. Ver. 27. Joseph still retained his tender affection for his father and his brethren; but, in order to fulfil the designs of Providence, he had been restrained of God from inquiring after them, till his brethren came into Egypt.

Ver. 32. The Egyptians detested eating with such as fed upon the animals which they worshipped, or who neglected their manner of dressing their victuals.

Ver. 33. They marvelled that he, who had before used them so roughly, should now use them so kindly.

Ver. 34. Benjamin's large portion might be intended, not only to do him honour, but also to try his temperance, and whether his brethren would envy him on account of his distinguished preferment.

REFLECTIONS.—The trials, the sore trials, of God's faithful people, may often last long, and sink deep, before their deliverance come: but in difficult circumstances, where something dear to us is at stake, it is good to take the advice of others who are less interested. What a mercy is bread, that nothing earthly can supply the want of it! What then can supply the want of Jesus, the bread of life? In the use of every prudent endeavour to avoid danger it is proper to commit our affairs to the Lord, and submit ourselves entirely to his disposal; but men, when their consciences are overcharged with guilt, are apt to fear without ground, even where kindness is intended. In every circumstance honesty is the best policy; and every success in business should be regarded as a treasure given by God to us. What tender passions pos-

29 And he lifted up his eyes, and saw<sup>s</sup> his brother Benjamin, his mother's son, and said, Is this your younger brother, of whom ye spake unto me? And he said, God be gracious unto thee, my son.

30 And Joseph made haste; for his bowels did yearn upon his brother: and he sought where to weep; and he entered into his chamber, and wept there.

31 And he washed his face, and went out, and refrained himself, and said, Set on bread.

32 And they set on for him by himself, and for them by themselves, and for the Egyptians which did eat with him by themselves: because the Egyptians might not eat bread with the Hebrews; for that is an abomination unto the Egyptians.<sup>9</sup>

33 And they sat before him, the first-born according to his birthright, and the youngest according to his youth: and the men marvelled one at another.

34 And he took and sent messes unto them from before him: but Benjamin's mess was five times so much as any of theirs. And they drank, and were merry with him.

CHAPTER XLIV.

1 Joseph's policy to stay his brethren. 18 Judah's humble supplication to him.

AND he commanded the steward of his house, saying, Fill the men's sacks with food,<sup>b</sup> as much as they can carry, and put every man's money in his sack's mouth:

2 And put my cup, the silver cup, in the sack's mouth of the youngest, and his corn-money. And he did according to the word that Joseph had spoken.

3 As soon as the morning was light, the men were sent away, they and their asses.

4 And when they were gone out of the city, and not yet far off, Joseph said unto his steward, Up, follow after the men; and when thou dost overtake them, say unto them, Wherefore have ye rewarded evil for good?

5 Is not this it in which<sup>1</sup> my lord drinketh, and whereby indeed he divineth?<sup>2</sup> Ye have done evil in so doing.<sup>3</sup>

6 ¶ And he overtook them, and he spake unto them these same words.

7 And they said unto him, Wherefore saith my lord these words? God forbid that thy servants should do according to this thing.

8 Behold, the money which we found in our sacks' mouths we brought again unto thee out of the land of Canaan: how then should we steal out of thy lord's house silver or gold?

Ex. 8. 26. 9 It is not likely the objection to eating with the Hebrews arose from their being Hebrews, but because they were foreigners. The Hebrews were as yet too obscure a people to have excited any peculiar national antipathies. Such distinctions still remain both amongst civilized and barbarous nations. The Hindoo will not eat with the Christian, even one Indian caste will refuse to eat with another; and in the South Sea Islands, before Christianity appeared amongst them, men would, upon no account, eat in company with women. Even in Christian countries, refinement effects nearly as great a separation of ranks, as we find in Egypt, India, or the South Seas, effected by superstition and national antipathies. What a humanizing ordinance is the Lord's table! where believers of all countries, ranks, and sexes, 'tarry one for another,' whilst at one table, they being many, are one bread and one body; and are all partakers of that one bread, 1 Co. 10. 17.—C.

21 ¶ And the children of Israel did so: and Joseph gave them waggons, according to the commandment<sup>1</sup> of Pharaoh, and gave them provision for the way.

22 To all of them he gave each man changes of raiment: but to Benjamin he gave three hundred<sup>2</sup> pieces of silver,<sup>3</sup> and five changes of raiment.

23 And to his father he sent after this manner; ten asses laden with<sup>4</sup> the good things of Egypt, and ten she-asses laden with corn and bread, and meat for his father by the way.

24 So he sent his brethren away, and they departed: and he said unto them, See that ye fall<sup>5</sup> not out by the way.<sup>1</sup>

25 ¶ And they went up out of Egypt, and came into the land of Canaan unto Jacob their father,

5 ¶ And Jacob rose up from Beer-sheba: and the sons of Israel carried Jacob their father, and their little ones, and their wives, in the waggons which Pharaoh had sent to carry him.

6 And they took their cattle, and their goods, which they had gotten in the land of Canaan, and came into Egypt, Jacob, and all his seed with him:

7 His sons, and his sons' sons with him, his daughters, and his sons' daughters, and all his seed, brought he with him into Egypt.

8 ¶ And these are the names of the children of Israel, which came into Egypt, Jacob and his sons: "Reuben, Jacob's first-born.

9 And the sons of Reuben; Hanoch, and Phallu, and Hezron, and Carmi.

10 And the sons of Simeon; Jemuel, and Jamin, and Ohad, and Jachin, and Zohar, and Shaul the son of a Canaanitish woman.

11 And the sons of Levi; Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.

12 And the sons of Judah; Er, and Onan, and Shelah, and Pharez, and Zarah: but Er and Onan died in the land of Canaan. And the sons of Pharez were Hezron and Hamul.

13 And the sons of Issachar; Tola, and Phuvah, and Job, and Shimron.

14 And the sons of Zebulun; Seread, and Elon, and Jahleel.

15 These be the sons of Leah, which she bare unto Jacob in Padan-aram, with his daughter Dinah: all the souls of his sons and his daughters were thirty and three.

16 And the sons of Gad; Ziphion, and Haggi, Shuni, and Ezbon,<sup>7</sup> Eri, and Arodi, and Areli.

17 And the sons of Ashur; Jimnah, and Ishuah, and Isui, and Beriah, and Serah their sister. And the sons of Beriah; Heber, and Malchiel.

18 These are the sons of Zilpah, whom ren, as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven me. Let me carefully conceal their faults from the world; and, to the utmost of my power, render them good for evil. In so doing I shall heap coals of fire on their head; I shall sting, yea, I shall melt their hearts. And let me carefully provide for the support and comfort of my aged parents. Following peace with all men, and keeping death always in my view, let me be such a comfort to them as may contribute to their leaving this world in a cheerful and a Christian like manner. But let me here behold, as in a glass, with what affection Jesus reveals himself, secretly reveals himself, unto his brethren of mankind, who have been his betrayers and murderers! — and how they are confounded, how they are love-melted at his presence! how encouraged by the gracious words, the exceeding great and precious promises, which proceed from his mouth! Let me behold what desire he and his Father have to place them with himself, in due time, in the best of the celestial abodes! how reviving the hopes of being for ever with the Lord, and seeing him as he is, are to the dying saints; and how agreeable the tokens of approaching death are to them on that account.

CHAPTER XLVI. [Ver. 27. Were threescore and ten. The statement of Moses in this verse seems not to agree with that of Stephen, Ac. 7. 14. Moses makes the number that came into Egypt to be only threescore and ten, Stephen makes Joseph call his father and all his kindred threescore and fifteen souls. Now is there here either an error or a contradiction? Neither. Moses first rates the descendants of Jacob who accompanied him to Egypt at sixty and six, who are found thus:—Jacob's own children, eleven sons and one daughter, 12; Reuben's sons, 4; Simeon's sons, 6; Levi's sons, 3; Judah's three sons and two grandsons, 5; Issachar's sons, 4; Zebulun's sons, 3; Gad's sons, 7; Asher's four sons, one daughter, two grandsons, 7; Dan's son, 1; Naphtali's sons, 4; Benjamin's sons, 10; in all, sixty-six. To these add Jacob himself, Joseph and his two sons born in Egypt, and the result is seventy, the whole of Jacob's family that settled in Egypt, according to ver. 27. In this statement the wives of Jacob's twelve sons are omitted, and they amounted but to nine. For Judah's wife was dead, ch. 38. 12, Simeon's also appears to have been dead, ch. 46. 10, and Joseph's wife was already in Egypt. Now these nine added to sixty-six give seventy-five, the whole amount of Jacob's kindred that Joseph called into Egypt. C.]

Ver. 34. [Abomination. Deep, inveterate, and almost unconquerable prejudices, against whole nations, and particular professions and employments, have been common in all ages; and have never been eradicated but by Christianity, which teaches, 'in Christ there is neither Jew nor Greek, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free; but Christ is all.' The Egyptian prejudices against shepherds are ascribed to two causes: the one recorded by Josephus, the inroads, conquests, and cruelties of the borderers, called shepherd-kings; the Laban gave to Leah his daughter; and these she bare unto Jacob, even sixteen souls.

19 The<sup>v</sup> sons of Rachel, Jacob's wife; Joseph, and Benjamin.

20 And<sup>u</sup>nto Joseph in the land of Egypt were born Manasseh and Ephraim, which Asenath, the daughter of Poti-pherah priest<sup>s</sup> of On, bare unto him.

21 And<sup>a</sup> the sons of Benjamin were Belah, and Becher, and Ashbel, Gera, and Naaman, Ehi,<sup>9</sup> and Rosh, Muppim,<sup>1</sup> and Huppim, and Ard.

22 These are the sons of Rachel, which were born to Jacob: all the souls were fourteen.

24 And the sons of Naphtali; Jahzeel, and Guni, and Jezer, and Shillem.

25 These<sup>d</sup> are the sons of Bilhah, which Laban gave unto Rachel his daughter, and she bare these unto Jacob: all the souls were seven.

26 All the souls that came with Jacob into Egypt, which came out of his loins, besides Jacob's sons' wives, all the souls were threescore and six;

27 And the sons of Joseph, which were born him in Egypt, were two souls: all the souls of the house of Jacob, which came into Egypt, were threescore and ten.<sup>3</sup>

28 ¶ And he sent<sup>v</sup> Judah before him unto Joseph, to direct his face unto Goshen; and they came into the land of Goshen.

29 And Joseph made ready his chariot, and went up to meet Israel his father, to Goshen, and presented himself unto him: and he fell on his neck, and wept on his neck a good while.

30 And Israel said unto Joseph, Now let me die, since I have seen thy face, because thou art yet alive.

31 ¶ And Joseph said unto his brethren, and unto his father's house, I will go up and show Pharaoh, and say unto him, My brethren, and my father's house,<sup>4</sup> which were in the land of Canaan, are come unto me:

32 And the men are shepherds, for their trade hath been to feed cattle; and they have brought their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have.

33 And<sup>m</sup> it shall come to pass, when Pharaoh shall call you, and shall say, What is your occupation?

34 That ye shall say, Thy servants' trade hath been about cattle from our youth even until now, both we and also our fathers; that ye may dwell in the land of Goshen:<sup>5</sup> for every shepherd is an abomination unto the Egyptians.<sup>6</sup> other mentioned by Tacitus, the sacrifice by the shepherd nations of the bull and the ram—the one representing Apis, the other Jupiter Ammon, two principal deities of Egypt. The first was most probably the sole ground of prejudice in the days of Joseph, as there is no evidence that in his time the Egyptians had sunk into that idolatry, for which, by apostasy from the patriarchal religion of Abraham and Joseph, they became liable to the divine judgment some centuries afterwards in the days of Moses. [C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Learn, my soul, to begin all thy thanksgivings with the beginnings of thy mercies; and let me worship God as not only my own, but also the God of my fathers. In all the changes of thy lot consult the Lord's direction, and supplicate his presence. It is safe to go anywhere on earth if his ever-

Gnizeh, they are found caricatured as a deformed and unseemly race (Wicki-sow). But the cause of it is not so clear. The most probable explanation is that a foreign race of shepherds had got possession of Egypt, and had for a long period tyrannized over the inhabitants. The Egyptians had thus been taught to hate all shepherds. Joined with this may have been the fact that Egypt was an agricultural and commercial country, highly civilized; and that the shepherd tribes were rude and barbarous nomads, and were therefore held in contempt.—P.

8 It is not implied that Goshen was the best province of Egypt in all respects, but only that it was the best adapted for the Israelites, who were shepherds. It was more of a pastoral than an agricultural province. Joseph knew this; he also knew that the province was little valued by the Egyptians, and that consequently there would be the less cause for jealousy should the Israelites be put in possession of it. Goshen lay on the north-eastern border of Egypt, bordering on the desert, and probably embracing nearly the whole of the isthmus of Suez.—P.

CHAPTER XLVII.

1 Joseph presenteth five of his brethren and his father before Pharaoh. 11 He giveth them habitation and maintenance. 13 He getteth all the Egyptians' money, 16 their cattle, 18 their lands for Pharaoh. 22 The priests' land was not bought. 23 He letteth the land to them again for a fifth of the increase. 28 Jacob's age. 29 He sweareth Joseph to bury him with his fathers.

THEN<sup>a</sup> Joseph came and told Pharaoh, and said, My father, and my brethren, and their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have, are come out of the land of Canaan; and, behold, they are in<sup>b</sup> the land of Goshen.

2 And he took some of his brethren, even five men, and presented them unto Pharaoh.

3 And Pharaoh said unto his brethren, What is your occupation? And they said unto Pharaoh, Thy servants are shepherds, both we and also our fathers.

4 They said moreover unto Pharaoh, For to sojourn in the land are we come;<sup>7</sup> for thy servants have no pasture for their flocks; for the famine is sore in the land of Canaan: now therefore, we pray thee, let thy servants dwell in the land of Goshen.

5 And Pharaoh spake unto Joseph, saying, Thy father and thy brethren are come unto thee:

6 The land of Egypt is <sup>a</sup>before thee; in the <sup>b</sup>best of the land make thy father and brethren to dwell; in the land of Goshen let them <sup>d</sup>dwell: and if thou knowest any <sup>f</sup>men of activity among them, then make them rulers over my cattle.

7 And Joseph brought in Jacob his father, and set him before Pharaoh: and Jacob <sup>b</sup>blessed Pharaoh.

8 And Pharaoh said unto Jacob, How old art thou?<sup>9</sup>

9 And Jacob said unto Pharaoh, The days of the years of my pilgrimage are an hundred and thirty years: few and evil have the days of the years of my life been, and have not attained unto the <sup>k</sup>days of the years of the life of my fathers in the days of their pilgrimage.

10 And Jacob blessed Pharaoh, and went out from before Pharaoh.

11 ¶ And Joseph placed his father and his brethren, and gave them a possession in the land of Egypt, in the best of the land, in the land of Rameses, as Pharaoh had commanded.

12 And Joseph <sup>m</sup>nourished his father, and his brethren, and all his father's household, with bread, according <sup>n</sup>to their families.<sup>1</sup>

13 ¶ And there was no bread in all the land: for the famine was very sore, so that the land of Egypt, and all the land of Canaan, fainted by reason of the famine.

14 And Joseph gathered up all the money

Let me therefore always take care of my whole family, and live in the firm assurance that on Jesus is the care of all the churches. Let me hope that, though my beginnings be small, they will, in God's time, greatly, and even

SPRING OF THE VIRGIN—WHERE JOSEPH MET JACOB. [GENESIS, xlii:29, 30.]—“And Joseph made ready his chariot, and went up to meet Israel, his father, and presented himself unto him; and he fell on his neck, and wept on his neck a good while. And Israel said unto Joseph, Now let me die since I have seen thy face, because thou art yet alive.” We give the view of the Spring of the Virgin because it is in the neighborhood where Joseph lived and where his father met him. The water in this region is such as has percolated through the soil from the Nile. Eber says that this spring is mentioned in records of the highest antiquity. It was believed for centuries that the balsam shrub could thrive here and nowhere else. This spot has come to be dear to the human race because the holy family sojourned here during their stay in Egypt, and because of its connection with Moses and Joseph.

that was found in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, for the corn which they bought: and Joseph brought the money into Pharaoh's house.

15 And when money<sup>1</sup> failed in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, all the Egyptians came unto Joseph, and said, "Give us bread: for why should we die in thy presence? for the money faileth.

16 And Joseph said, "Give your cattle; and I will give you for your cattle, if money fail.

17 And they brought their "cattle unto Joseph: and Joseph gave them bread in exchange for horses, and for the flocks, and for the cattle of the herds, and for the asses; and he fed them with bread for all their cattle for that year.

18 When that year was ended, they came unto him the second<sup>2</sup> year, and said unto him, "We will not hide it from my lord, how that our money is spent; my lord also hath our herds of cattle: there is not ought left in the sight of my lord, but our bodies, and our lands.

19 Wherefore shall we die before thine eyes, both we and our land? buy us and our land for bread, and we and our land will be servants unto Pharaoh; and give us seed, that we may live, and not die, that the land be not desolate.

20 And Joseph bought all the land of Egypt for Pharaoh; for the Egyptians sold every man his field, because the famine prevailed over them: so the land became Pharaoh's.

21 And as for the people, he removed them to cities from one end of the borders of Egypt even to the other end thereof.<sup>3</sup>

22 Only the land of the priests<sup>4</sup> bought he not: "for the priests had a portion assigned them of Pharaoh, and did eat their portion which Pharaoh gave them; wherefore they sold not their lands.

23 ¶ Then Joseph said unto the people, Behold, I have bought you this day, and your land, for Pharaoh: lo, here is "seed for you, and ye shall sow the land.

24 And it shall come to pass in the increase, that ye shall give "the fifth<sup>5</sup> part unto Pharaoh, and four parts shall be your own, for seed of the 25.5 In requiring but a fifth part, he dealt mercifully with them, and faithfully for the king.—[From ch. 41. 34. 35 it would appear that the produce collected as a royal rent was but the 1/5th part of each year's crop, and whether this was, or was not, an increase on the customary amount does not appear; but, at all events, it was a moderate impost, and there appears no symptom of public dissatisfaction or complaint. How far private individuals may have availed themselves of Joseph's interpretation, and laid up in store against the anticipated famine, does not appear. But to estimate Joseph's management aright, Pharaoh must be considered as a mercantile king, one chief part, at least, of whose revenue consisted in agricultural produce, and not in direct or indirect pecuniary taxes; an arrangement still common in some eastern nations, and of which may still be traced in the seigniorial rents of some parts of Italy and other European nations. It was, therefore, not merely Joseph's right, but his duty, to sell to the best advantage his employer's merchandise. Nor was his employer bound by any principle of even charity, to bestow his goods, while the purchaser was able to buy. Let the idle scoffers who revile Joseph for his wisdom and fidelity set the example of bestowing their goods to men able to pay for them; and then, but not till then, can they escape from the weight of their own revilings. Had Joseph, indeed, enslaved the people, or had he taken advantage of the necessities to inflict an overwhelming rack-rent, there might and there would have been ground for accusation; but he did none of these things, but after an administration of justice and mercy, left the people grateful, content, and prosperous.—C.]

2 Joseph, who could not be long absent from court, took leave of his father, but without giving strict charge to some of the family, that upon the very first appearance of danger they should immediately send for him. Accordingly, as soon as word was brought him that his father was dying, he took his two sons who were with him, Manasseh and Ephraim, and went to visit him; who, when he heard that his favourite son was come, summoned all his spirits together, and was so far revived as to be able to sit up in his bed.—Sackhouse.

25 And they said, Thou hast saved our lives: let us "find grace in the sight of my lord, and we will be Pharaoh's servants.<sup>6</sup>

26 And Joseph made it a law over the land of Egypt unto this day, that Pharaoh should have the fifth part; except the land of the priests<sup>7</sup> only, which became not Pharaoh's.

27 ¶ And Israel dwelt in the land of Egypt, in the country of Goshen; and they had possessions therein, and grew, and "multiplied exceedingly.

28 ¶ And Jacob lived in the land of Egypt seventeen years: so the whole age<sup>8</sup> of Jacob was an hundred forty and seven years.<sup>9</sup>

29 And the time drew nigh that Israel "must die; and he called his son Joseph, and said unto him, If now I have found grace in thy sight, put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh, and deal kindly and truly with me; bury me not, I pray thee, in Egypt:

30 But I "will lie with my fathers; and thou shalt carry me out of Egypt, and bury me in their burying-place.<sup>1</sup> And he said, I will do as thou hast said.

31 And he said, Swear unto me. And he swore unto him. And "Israel bowed himself upon the bed's head.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

1 Joseph with his sons visiteth his sick father, who strengtheneth himself to bless them. 3 He repeateth God's promise. 5 He taketh Ephraim and Manasseh as his own. 7 He telleth Joseph of his mother's grave. 8 He bleisseth Ephraim and Manasseh. 17 He preferreth the younger before the elder. 21 He prophesieth their return to Canaan.

AND it came to pass after these things, that A one told Joseph, Behold, thy father is sick: and he took with him his two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim.<sup>2</sup>

2 And one told Jacob, and said, Behold, thy son Joseph cometh unto thee: and Israel "strengthened himself, and sat upon the bed.

3 ¶ And Jacob said unto Joseph, "God Almighty appeared unto me at Luz in the land of Canaan, and blessed me,

4 And said unto me, Behold, I will make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and I will make quickly, increase. Wherever I am, in station or in place, let me attend to its relative duties, giving honour to whom honour is due; and let me never be ashamed of an honest calling, but endeavour therein to abide with God. Be it my care and happiness to live always near the heavenly state, and as little connected with carnal and worldly men as possible; that when it pleases God to call me hence, I may be willing and ready at his bidding.

CHAPTER XLVII. [Ver. 21. Cities. The removal of the people to cities was necessary, for, in a rural distribution of houses, it would have been difficult, if not impossible, to provide them food. It is most probable, however, that Joseph found many of the Egyptians, what they are at this day, an unsettled, a nomadic people. By bringing them into cities during the famine he accustomed them to stationary dwellings and settled habits; and where infidelity has accused him of cruelty, civilization must hail him as one of her chief benefactors. The habits of the wandering tribe called Gipsies in England will abundantly illustrate the evils of an unsettled condition; and the success of at least one minister in Scotland in inducing a village of these wanderers, situate in his parish, to resign their nomadic habits, and come under the permanent inspection of the ministry and regular preaching of the gospel, and afford opportunities for the systematic education of their children, will be cause of gratulation to every Christian philanthropist, and will form the best illustration and defence of the conduct of Joseph in this regulation. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Let me never be ashamed of my relations, however low they be in station, if they be honest; nor let me ever be an idler, an inactive person, either in church or state. Activity and ingenuity in my profession are the way to preferment. What though man's days be shortened, and filled up with troubles, yet my life on earth, whether perplexed or prosperous, is but a pilgrimage to the better country above. In the meanwhile, let me highly esteem, as a blessing, the prayers of such as fear God: and if he put me into power, let my care be to do good to all, especially to those of the household of faith. Let mercy, as well as equity, run through all my conduct. But go where I will, and enjoy what I may, let me keep sight of the promises and of the everlasting abodes: and though, for a while, I content myself with this world as a lodging, let my care, my hope, be to go to the heavenly Canaan at my death, and be with Christ, which is far better. Even here also let me behold him presenting a lost world of his brethren before the great King, the Lord of hosts, and preparing mansions for them.—behold him as giving out of his unbounded stores all the necessary blessings of time and eternity, not for our money, our cattle, our land, our persons, but freely, according to the exceeding riches of his grace; and by his oath concerning the promises of our present peace and everlasting happiness!

6 And thy issue, which thou begetteth after them, shall be thine, and shall be called after the name of their brethren in their inheritance.

7 And as for me, when I came from Padan, Rachel died by me in the land of Canaan in the way, when yet there was but a little way to come unto Ephrath: and I buried her there in the way of Ephrath; the same is Beth-lehem.

8 ¶ And Israel beheld Joseph's sons, and said, Who are these?

9 And Joseph said unto his father, They are my sons, whom God hath given me in this place. And he said, Bring them, I pray thee, unto me, and I will bless them.

10 (Now the eyes of Israel were dim for age, so that he could not see.) And he brought them near unto him; and he kissed them, and embraced them.

11 And Israel said unto Joseph, I had not thought to see thy face; and, lo, God hath showed me also thy seed.

12 And Joseph brought them out from between his knees, and he bowed himself with his face to the earth.

14 And Israel stretched out his right hand, and laid it upon Ephraim's head, who was the younger, and his left hand upon Manasseh's head, guiding his hands wittingly; for Manasseh was the first-born.

15 And he blessed Joseph, and said, God, before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac did walk, the God which fed me all my life long unto this day,

CHAPTER XLIX. [Ver. 2. The patriarchal blessing is embodied in these remarkable words; and the characteristics and future history of each son and tribe are sketched in outline. Like most ancient prophecies the language is poetical and highly figurative; but events are shadowed forth so plainly that the student of history can have little difficulty in recognizing them. P.]

Ver. 4. Whatever power or dignity the Reubenites had at first, they quickly lost it, Nu. 10:18-21; Jos. 4:12, 13; xxii. with Ju. 5:15, 16; 1 Ch. 15:18-26. They never rendered themselves famous by any noted exploit; nor did any judge, king, or prophet, that we know of, proceed from among them.

Ver. 6. They digged down the walls of the house where Hamor and Shechem secured themselves; and they seized upon oxen and carried them off for a spoil.

Ver. 7. The Simeonites had their inheritance in Canaan out of the lot of Judah, Jos. 19:1-9; this being too small for them, they had to seize for themselves part of Arabia, 1 Ch. 4:39-43; and it is said that many of them dispersed themselves among the other tribes, in the character of teachers. The Levites lived scattered among all the other tribes; and were the spiritual instructors of their brethren, and the collectors of the sacred revenues, Jos. xxi.; 1 Ch. vi. xxiii.-xxvi.

Ver. 8-12. The tribe of Judah was the most numerous and powerful of all, Nu. 1:27; 26:22; 2 Sa. 24:9; 2 Ch. 14:8; 17:14-16. To them their fellow-tribes often submitted themselves, Ju. 1:2; 3:9, 10; 20:18; chiefly under David and Solomon, 1 Ch. xii.; 1 Ki. iv.; many individuals of these adhered to them in the days of Rehoboam, 1 Ki. 12:17; 2 Ch. 11:16, 17; Asa, 2 Ch. 15:9; 16:6; 17:2; Hezekiah, 2 Ch. 30:11; and after their return from Babylon, Eze. 37:15-22. The tribe of Benjamin almost always adhered to them. In the march of the tribes, and in their going forth to war, God appointed them the precedence, Nu. 10:14; Ju. 1:2; 20:18. The first of the judges was one of them, Ju. 3:9, 10. The only kings that ever God in mercy granted to the Hebrew nation were of them, 1 Sa. xvi.; 2 Sa. vii.; Ps. lxxxix. Their conquests and spoils were peculiarly remarkable, Ju. 1:2; 2 Sa. 3:1; viii. x. xxi. 2 Ch. xiii. xiv. xx. xxvi.; Is. 33:4; 37:36. In Canaan they had the first lot of the country assigned them; it was very extensive and fertile; it abounded with vines and pastures, which rendered wine and milk almost as common as water. But the predictions respecting this tribe have their principal accomplishment in Jesus Christ, who is the Lion of the tribe of Judah, to whom God hath given all power in heaven and in earth, Mat. 28:18; Ps. lxxii., and whom he hath commanded all men to adore, Jn. 5:22, 23; Phi. 2:9-11. He conquers all his and his people's enemies, Col. 2:14, 15; Ps. cx. He bestows a fulness of grace and glory upon his people, Ps. 68:12, 13. He is the true vine, who prepares for his people the wine and milk of gospel-truths, ordinances, influences, and blessings, Is. 55:1; Joel 3:18. He is called Shiloh, that is, the Author of our peace, prosperity, and salvation, Is. 9:6, 7; Mi. 5:5; Ep. 2:14; Jc. 2:3, 6; Mat. 1:21. Till he came in the flesh, Mat. 1:1; Lu. xi., the tribe of Judah not only retained its distinct form as a tribe (which none of the rest, nor that of Benjamin, properly did), but retained a governing power in its princes, judges, kings, deputies of the Chaldean, Persian, and Grecian monarchs, Maccabean governors or kings, or in the Sanhedrim or great council of their elders. Scarcely had Jesus appeared in the flesh when Judea was altogether reduced into a Roman province, having no sovereign but the Roman emperor, Jn. 19:12, 15. No sooner had the gathering of the Gentiles to Shiloh taken place, by the spread of the gospel, than the city and temple of Jerusalem were destroyed, the constitution of their church and state dissolved, and themselves scattered as vagabonds among all nations, to be standing witnesses, for many generations, that he is come.

[Ver. 8. The birthright which Reuben had sacrificed is here given to Judah. From first to last the tribe of Judah was the most influential among the twelve; and it finally gave a name to the whole nation—Jew. P.—Ver. 10. Feet. In ch. 48:12, we find Joseph bringing his two sons from between his knees, as a place of parental endearment and protection. By the lawgiver never departing from between Judah's feet, we may accordingly well understand a succession of rulers in the tribe of Judah, till the coming of Christ, the Shiloh, our peace, our peace-maker. C.—This remarkable prophecy has been variously interpreted. It is interesting to know that ancient Jewish rabbins almost unanimously adopted the Messianic interpretation. Thus in the Targum of Onkelos it is rendered, 'Until Messiah comes, whose is the kingdom.' In the Jerusalem Targum, 'Until King Messiah comes, whose is the kingdom.' Rashi, 'Until Shiloh comes—King Messiah,' &c. The word Shiloh appears to be derived from a root which signifies 'to rest,' or 'to be secure,' and would therefore mean 'the giver of rest.' Reference is undoubtedly made to a great personal Ruler and Peace-giver, who should spring from the tribe of Judah. P.]

Ver. 16, 17. Though the Danites were the offspring of a concubine, they had as much power as the other tribes sprung of free women. They harassed the Philistines in Samson and others, Ju. xiii.-xvi. But they proved a stumbling-block to the other tribes by their idolatry, Ju. 18:29-31.

Ver. 18. I pray for, and expect, the promised deliverances to myself and posterity, but especially that spiritual and eternal salvation, to be accomplished by the Son of God in human nature.

Ver. 19. The Gadites were exceedingly exposed to the invasions and ravages of the Ammonites, Arabians, Syrians, Assyrians, &c., Ju. 10:8; 1 Sa. 11:1, 2; 2 Ki. 10:33; 15:29; 1 Ch. 5:26.

Ver. 21. [Words. Or on the authority of the Septuagint, Chaldee paraphrase, and Arabic version, spreading tree, shooting out goodly branches. But as the noun translated words, signifies divergencies, may we not retain the translation, 'a hind let loose,' that giveth forth goodly branches or antlers? The image of freedom, and grace, and fruitfulness, is thus complete. C.—'Naphtali is a hind let loose,' or 'a graceful hind'—timid and distrustful of its own powers, swift of foot to elude its enemies; but when brought to bay fierce and strong to defend its life. 'He giveth goodly words.' The tribe was to be famous for poetic genius; and we have one noble ode ascribed in part to a Naphtalite, Ju. v. P.]

Ver. 22. Joseph's posterity spread themselves far and wide, dwelling on both sides of Jordan, Jos. 12:6; 13:7; 16:17.

Ver. 24. Joseph's graces continued firm; enabling him to withstand temptations, endure injuries, and per-above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren.<sup>6</sup>

27 ¶ Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf: in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil.

28 ¶ All these are the twelve tribes of Israel: and this is it that their father spake unto them, and blessed them; every one according to his blessing he blessed them.<sup>7</sup>

29 ¶ And he charged them, and said unto them, I am to be gathered unto my people: bury me with my fathers in the cave that is in the field of Ephron the Hittite;

30 In the cave that is in the field of Machpelah, which is before Mamre, in the land of Canaan, which Abraham bought with the field of Ephron the Hittite, for a possession of a burying-place.

31 (There<sup>a</sup> they buried Abraham and Sarah his wife; there they buried Isaac and Rebekah his wife; and there I buried Leah.)

32 The purchase of the field, and of the cave that is therein, was from the children of Heth.

33 And when Jacob had made an end<sup>8</sup> of commanding his sons, he gathered up his feet into the bed, and yielded up the ghost, and was gathered unto his people.

form duties: and his honours were secured to him. He was a shepherd, to direct and provide for the Hebrews in Egypt, and the stone, under God, upon whom their happiness and safety were founded in that country. Joshua, who brought them into Canaan, sprung of him.

Ver. 25. God blessed his posterity with plenteous rains and dews, with fountains of water, and with multitudes of children, richly supplied with every enjoyment.

Ver. 26. Jacob's blessings excelled those of Abraham and Isaac, (1) In their extent, none of his children being excluded, as Ishmael and Esau had been. (2) In their distinct clearness: the land of Canaan, which had been formerly bequeathed in general, was now distributed to Joseph and his brethren. (3) In the apparent nearness of fulfilment; his posterity now increasing fast. Joseph was separated from his brethren when he was sold into Egypt, and afterwards by his distinguished honours there.

Ver. 33. [The phrase gathered to his people occurs also ch. 25. 8, 17; 35. 29, and intimates not that the parties who died were buried, but that they still lived, and were gathered in immortality to the people of the living God. It is the phrase employed by Paul, 2 Th. 2. 1, 'Now, we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—How important is the proper work of a death-bed! for dying parents solemnly to pray for, to warn, and to direct their surviving children, is useful and becoming. The sins of parents often entail disgrace and misery upon their posterity; and the blessing of God fixes most remarkably where, for a time, there is the least appearance of it. But the lots of mankind, even in the same family, are greatly diversified. Let me therefore, first of all, and above all, make choice of Jesus, the once promised SHILOH, and now glorified Lord and Christ, and of his salvation, and then be content with such things as I have. Amidst all my work on earth, let me seek and wait for the salvation of God, that when I have finished my course I may be gathered to Jesus and his people above!—But is not the now-departed patriarch a glass to show me my Redeemer? Is not he justly named Jacob and Israel? How long expected, earnestly desired, and supernatural was his birth! Divinely was he chosen to be the Father of many nations of believers, the peculiar people of God. He took the first Adam by the heel, fulfilling the covenant which he had broken; he supplanted and overthrew Satan and his works in the world; and, by his bloody service and suffering, he secured his mediatorial heirship of all things. What inestimable blessings he obtained for men, by offering himself to God in the likeness of sinful flesh! In this his work of love, how exposed to trouble from Jewish brethren, from Satan, the accuser of men, and from JEHOVAH, his loving Father above! How distressful his earthly exile! Hard was his service, numerous his sorrows, unsettled his lot, and remarkable his plainness and integrity. What love he bears to his mother and spouse the church! Faithful was he in his work, prevalent is he in his intercession, and glorious and extensive in his reward; for in the multitude of his redeemed he shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied. Having finished his work, and blessed his disciples, he retired to his rest in the heavenly Canaan—the midst of the throne of God. And innumerable multitudes of spiri-

2 And Joseph commanded his servants the physicians to embalm his father: and the physicians embalmed Israel.

3 And forty days were fulfilled for him; (for so are fulfilled the days of those which are embalmed;) and the Egyptians mourned for him threescore and ten days.

4 ¶ And when the days of his mourning were past,<sup>9</sup> Joseph spake unto the house of Pharaoh, saying, If now I have found grace in your eyes, speak, I pray you, in the ears of Pharaoh, saying,

5 My father made me swear, saying, Lo, I die: in my grave which I have digged for me in the land of Canaan, there shalt thou bury me. Now therefore let me go up, I pray thee, and bury my father, and I will come again.

6 And Pharaoh said, Go up, and bury thy father, according as he made thee swear.

7 ¶ And Joseph went up to bury his father: and with him went up all the servants<sup>2</sup> of Pharaoh, the elders of his house, and all the elders of the land of Egypt,

8 And all the house of Joseph, and his brethren, and his father's house: only their little ones, and their flocks, and their herds, they left in the land of Goshen.

9 And there went up with him both chariots and horsemen: and it was a very great company.

10 And they came to the thrashing-floor of Atad, which is beyond Jordan,<sup>3</sup> and there they mourned with a great and very sore lamentation: and he made a mourning for his father seven days.

11 And when the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, saw the mourning in the floor ual seed spring from his twelve apostles, those dignified patriarchs in the gospel church.

CHAPTER L. Ver. 2. It has been customary with many nations to embalm the dead bodies of persons of rank, taking out the bowels, and so seasoning the body with salt and spices, &c., as to preserve it long from putrefaction. In Egypt they carried this art to such a degree, that bodies embalmed remained uncorrupted for thousands of years: which are now sometimes sold in Europe under the name of mummies.

Ver. 3. It was the custom of the Egyptians to mourn seventy days for their dead, and of the Hebrews to mourn seven, 1 Sa. 31. 13; and just so long the joy of the latter lasted at their solemn weddings, ch. 29. 27; Ju. 14. 17.—[The process of embalming was tedious and expensive. The brain and intestines were first removed, and the head and body filled with spices. The corpse was then steeped in naturum for seventy days, and then washed, wrapped in bandages of linen covered with gum, and placed in a wooden case. The whole body was thus preserved so well that the features remained almost unchanged for centuries. The mummy preserved in its case was carried with the greatest care, and placed in the cave of Machpelah. That cave has been deemed sacred ever since. May it not be, therefore, that the remains of Jacob exist still, and shall one day be brought to light by some enterprising explorer? P.]

Ver. 10. Beyond Jordan, in the books of Moses, denotes the west side of Jordan, as he delivered his writings on the east of it. In other parts of Scripture the phrase denotes the east of Jordan, as the writers lived on the west of it. Some, however, think that of Atad, they said, This is a grievous mourning to the Egyptians: wherefore the name of it was called Abel-mizraim,<sup>4</sup> which is beyond Jordan.

12 And his sons did unto him <sup>m</sup>according as he commanded them:

13 For <sup>h</sup>his sons carried him into the land of Canaan, and buried him in the cave of the field of Machpelah, which Abraham <sup>b</sup>bought with the field, for a possession of a burying-place, of Ephron the Hittite, before Mamre.

14 ¶ And Joseph returned into Egypt, he, and his brethren, and all that went up with him to bury his father, after he had buried his father.

15 ¶ And when Joseph's brethren saw that their father was dead,<sup>5</sup> they said, <sup>h</sup>Joseph will peradventure hate us, and will certainly requite us all the evil which we did unto him.

16 And they sent a messenger unto Joseph, saying, Thy father did command before he died, saying, 17 So shall ye say unto Joseph, <sup>f</sup>Forgive, I pray thee now, the trespass of thy brethren, and their sin; for they did unto thee evil: and now, we pray thee, forgive the trespass of the <sup>s</sup>servants of the God of thy father. And Joseph wept when they spake unto him.

5 As soon as their father was buried, Joseph's brethren began to reflect on the wrongs they had formerly done him, and were not a little apprehensive that as he had the power, he might have it in his intention, to avenge himself of them; and therefore they consulted together and framed this message:

—That it was their father's earnest request that he should forget all past injuries, and continue them under his protection as formerly. This, when Joseph heard, such was his compassionate temper, that he could not refrain from weeping, and therefore to remove their fears, he sent immediately for them, and receiving them with the same kind affection as when their father was alive, excused the actions committed against him in such an obliging manner, and gave them such assurances of his future love and adherence to them upon all occasions, as made them return to their families full of joy and satisfaction.

20 But as for you, <sup>ye</sup>ye thought evil against me; but God meant it unto good, to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive.

21 Now therefore fear ye not: <sup>i</sup>I will nourish you, and your little ones. And he comforted them, and spake kindly unto them.

22 ¶ And Joseph dwelt in Egypt, he, and his father's house: and Joseph lived an <sup>h</sup>hundred and ten years.<sup>8</sup>

23 And Joseph saw Ephraim's children of the third generation: <sup>h</sup>the children also of Machir, the son of Manasseh, were brought up upon Joseph's knees.<sup>9</sup>

24 ¶ And Joseph said unto his brethren, <sup>i</sup>I die: and <sup>h</sup>God will surely visit you, and bring you out of this land, unto the land which he <sup>s</sup>swore to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob.

25 And <sup>i</sup>Joseph took an oath of the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you, and ye shall carry up my bones from hence.

26 ¶ So Joseph died, being an hundred and ten years old: and they embalmed him; and he was put in a coffin in Egypt.

the Hebrew word signifies either beyond or on this side.

—[The route of the funeral-procession was no doubt the direct one from Egypt across the desert to Gaza and Hebron. The 'thrashing-floor of Atad' was probably somewhere to the south-west of Hebron. The expression 'beyond Jordan' does not always mean east of that river. Its meaning must depend on the point of view of the writer or speaker. Here it must evidently signify west. P.]

Ver. 11. [Mourning for the dead is both lawful and salutary for believers; provided it be not accompanied with murmuring against God, and be mingled with the blessed hope of the immortality of the spirit, 2 Co. 5. 8, or the resurrection of the body, 2 Th. 4. 13. C.]

Ver. 16. [Thy father did command before he died. There is no reason to infer, because this command is not previously mentioned, that therefore it is a fiction of Joseph's brethren. Joseph's employment about the court, and his brethren's residence in Goshen, allowed but little time for intimacy, and that full restoration of confidence which is best confirmed by habitual intercourse. Their recollection of their offence against Joseph makes them anxious for a renewed confirmation of his forgiveness.—Note, How should the recollection of our offences against Christ, our brother (He. 2. 11), lead us, with Peter, to 'weep bitterly' at the 'throne of grace, that we may both obtain mercy, and find grace to help us in time of need,' He. 4. 16. C.]

Ver. 17. Joseph wept, pitying their perplexity, and grieved at their jealousy of his good-will.

REFLECTIONS. — With tender affection ought children and others to take their last farewell of dying friends; and with due care should they be decently interred. Yea, in every case it is kind and dutiful, by partaking, to alleviate the sorrows of the afflicted. It is proper that servants have their master's permission to attend work of their own, be it ever so necessary; nor should that permission be withheld upon a reasonable request. What a loss to a country, what an alarming call to preparation for eternity, is the death of one of God's true children! But it is comely to have an amicable correspondence settled between friends on the occasion of the death of their common relations. And it is altogether unlike a Christian to make the death of friends, especially parents, a mean of commencing strife and debate, on account of some carnal bequeathments. Difficult is the work of quieting a guilty conscience, if thoroughly awakened: but it were hard-hearted, indeed, to refuse forgiveness of injuries, especially when requested by such as are at once our brethren and the servants of the God of our fathers. And when penitential confessions of injury done meet with a ready forgiveness from the receiver, it is highly ornamental and becoming; at the same time it is necessary for offenders principally to deal with God himself, through the blood of his Son. But to finish a religious life in the vigorous exercises of faith on God's promises, and in high friendship with his people, must be the summit of the true Christian's desire. Meanwhile, amidst the deaths of useful relations, that our God cannot die, cannot leave us, and can and will deliver us out of all our distresses, is a source of unfailling comfort and abiding consolation.

THE SECOND BOOK OF MOSES, CALLED EXODUS,

Contains a history of one hundred and forty-five years, and therein exhibits the fulfilment of God's promises to the patriarchs, in the multiplication of their seed, and their deliverance from bondage in Egypt; and represents the establishment of those laws and ordinances which God required them to observe as memorials of his favours. We have here particularly represented the tyranny of Pharaoh king of Egypt; the cruel bondage and marvellous increase of the Israelites; the birth, education, and exile of Moses; his and his brother Aaron's divine mission to deliver their brethren; the ten plagues inflicted on the Egyptians for refusing to let the Israelites leave their country, and their destruction in the Red Sea; the Hebrews' celebration of the passover, departure from Egypt, and safe passage through the Red Sea; God's sustenance of them by sweetened water, or water from a flinty rock, and by quails and bread from heaven; his laws relative to the passover, feast of unleavened bread, firstlings, manna, &c.; his solemn publication of his moral law from Mount Sinai; his directions relative to their civil and religious conduct; his entrance into covenant with them, ch. i.-xxiv.; his directions concerning the tabernacle and its furniture, and concerning the apparel and consecration of his priests; the Hebrews' idolatrous making and worshipping the golden calf; Moses' intercession for them, and God's gracious reconciliation by means of it; their voluntary contribution for, and actual making and erecting, the tabernacle and its whole furniture, ch. xxv.-xl. There are, perhaps, more types of Christ in this than in any other book in the Bible.

CHAPTER I.

1 The children of Israel, after Joseph's death, multiply greatly. 8 The more they are oppressed by a new king, the more they multiply. 15 The piety of the midwives, in saving the men-children alive, is rewarded by God. 22 Pharaoh commandeth the male-children to be cast into the river.

NOW "these are the names of the children of Israel which came into Egypt; every man and his household came with Jacob.

2 Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah,

3 Issachar, Zebulun, and Benjamin,

4 Dan, and Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

5 And all the souls that came out of the loins<sup>1</sup> of Jacob were <sup>seventy</sup> souls: for Joseph was in Egypt already.<sup>2</sup>

6 And <sup>Joseph</sup> died,<sup>3</sup> and all his brethren, and all that generation.

7 And<sup>4</sup> the children of Israel were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty; and the land was filled with them.

8 ¶ Now there arose up a <sup>new</sup> king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph.

9 And he said unto his people, <sup>Behold</sup>, the people of the children of Israel are more and mightier than we:

10 Come<sup>5</sup> on, let us deal wisely with them; lest they multiply, and it come to pass, that, when there falleth out any war, they join also unto our enemies, and fight against us, and so get<sup>6</sup> them up out of the land.

11 Therefore they did set over them taskmasters to <sup>afflict</sup> them with their burdens. And they built for Pharaoh treasure-cities, Pithom and Raamses.<sup>4</sup>

The same number is given in De. 10. 32. It is remarkable that the Septuagint version of Genesis and Exodus makes the number 75, of whom nine are said to be children of Joseph. In Ac. 7. 14 Stephen says, 'Then came Joseph, and called his father Jacob to him, and all his kindred, three-score and fifteen souls.' Stephen may either have followed the Septuagint version, which was then commonly used in Palestine; or, which is more probable, he may have included the living wives of the patriarchs, making up the number thus—sons and grandsons 66, wives 9.—P.

11 Shall kill him. To persons educated in the principles of Christianity, this deliberate cruelty of Pharaoh seems almost incredible. But when it is recollected that infanticide was tolerated by the laws of Solon at Athens and of Lycurgus at Sparta, (and these were the two most renowned legislators of Greece), and that it is still legally practised to a vast extent in Hindostan, China, and elsewhere, this record of a decree, to us so apparently improbable, becomes an internal evidence of the truth of the Mosaic history.—C.

12 But the more they afflicted them, <sup>the</sup> more they multiplied and grew. And they were <sup>'grieved</sup> because of the children of Israel.

13 And the Egyptians made the children of Israel to serve with <sup>rigour</sup>:

14 And they made their lives bitter with hard bondage, in mortar, and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field: all their service, wherein they made them serve, was with rigour.

15 ¶ And the king of Egypt<sup>5</sup> spake to the Hebrew midwives; (of which the name of the one was Shiphrah, and the name of the other Puah;)<sup>6</sup>

16 And he said, When ye do the office of a midwife to the Hebrew women, and see them upon the stools; if it be a son, then ye shall <sup>'kill</sup> him;<sup>7</sup> but if it be a daughter, then she shall live.

17 But the midwives <sup>'feared</sup> God, and did not as the king of Egypt commanded them, but saved the men-children alive.

18 And the king of Egypt called for the midwives, and said unto them, <sup>'Why</sup> have ye done this thing, and have saved the men-children alive?

19 And <sup>'the</sup> midwives said unto Pharaoh, Because the Hebrew women are not as the Egyptian women; for they are lively, and are delivered ere the midwives come in unto them.

20 Therefore <sup>'God</sup> dealt well with the midwives: and <sup>'the</sup> people multiplied, and waxed very mighty.

CHAPTER I. Ver. 8. Perhaps this king pertained to a new family, which obtained the throne about a hundred years after the Hebrews went down to Egypt. —[It is known that a number of dynasties, different in race and character, ruled over Egypt. It is probable that we have here an indication of the rise of a new dynasty—strangers to the country, and ignorant of its history. If not entirely ignorant of history, the new king was at least so opposed to the policy of his predecessors, that he ignored the claims and services of the Israelites. P.]

Ver. 10. The Israelites about this time began their compliance with the Egyptian idolatry, for which God justly punished them by the hand of the Egyptians, Jos. 24. 14; Eze. 20. 7, 8; 23. 8; Ps. 105. 25.

Ver. 11. Perhaps these cities were not only intended for depositing the stores of the country, but also for protecting it from the Arabs, Philistines, and others on the north-east, or for retaining the Hebrews in their bondage.

Ver. 19. Probably, by virtue of the special assistance of God, it was really so with many of the Hebrew women.

Ver. 21. While God exceedingly multiplied the Hebrews, he increased the families and happiness of the midwives.

REFLECTIONS.—One generation quickly passes

ROAD TO THE PYRAMIDS. [EXODUS, 1:8.]—"Now there arose up a new king over Egypt which knew not Joseph." We give a beautiful picture above illustrating a scene in Egypt just across the River Nile at the turn of the road, as we pass from Cairo to the Pyramids. One meets here in the early morning market folk coming from the country with donkeys laden with all kinds of vegetables; camels bearing fresh loads of clover, and expecting from the sale of these to take back in the afternoon such necessities from the stores as they need. This is a macadamized road lined on either side by acacia trees. This picture was taken by our artist instantaneously, hence the people appear to be in motion. This scene is about a mile out from Cairo and about eight miles from the Pyramids, though the Pyramids were in sight even at this point.

THE NILOMETER, WHERE MOSES WAS FOUND IN THE BULRUSHES. [Exodus ii: 5].—"And the daughter of Pharaoh came down to wash herself at the river; and her maidens walked along by the river's side: and when she saw the ark among the flags she sent her maid to fetch it. And when she had opened it, she saw the child." According to tradition, Moses was hid in the rushes near the scene which we give above.

The Nilometer measures the annual rise of the river. It is situated at the southern extremity of the Island of Rhoda opposite old Cairo. Egypt is often called the gift of the Nile, and hence this river is held in almost sacred reverence by the natives. The inundation of the Nile begins about the end of June and reaches its highest point at the end of September. It then gradually subsides until by the end of January the country begins to dry up again.

21 And it came to pass, because the midwives feared God, that he made them houses.<sup>4</sup>

22 ¶ And Pharaoh charged all his people, saying, Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river, and every daughter ye shall save alive.

CHAPTER II.

1 Moses is born, and laid in an ark cast among the flags. 5 He is found, and brought up by Pharaoh's daughter. 11 He slayeth an Egyptian. 13 He reproveth an Hebrew. 15 He fleeth into Midian. 21 He marryeth Zipporah. 22 Gershom is born. 23 God respecteth the cry of the Israelites.

AND there went a man of the house of Levi, and took to wife a daughter of Levi.

2 And the woman conceived, and bare a son:<sup>5</sup> and when she saw him that he was a goodly child, she hid him three months.

3 And when she could not longer hide him, she took for him an ark of bulrushes,<sup>6</sup> and daubed it with slime and with pitch, and put the child therein; and she laid it in the flags by the river's brink.

4 And his sister stood afar off, to wit what would be done to him.

5 ¶ And the daughter of Pharaoh came down to wash herself at the river; and her maidens walked along by the river side: and when she saw the ark among the flags, she sent her maid to fetch it.

6 And when she had opened it, she saw the child: and, behold, the babe wept. And she had compassion on him, and said, This is one of the Hebrews' children.

7 Then said his sister to Pharaoh's daughter, Shall I go and call to thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee?

8 And Pharaoh's daughter said to her, Go. And the maid went and called the child's mother.<sup>8</sup>

9 And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, Take this child away, and nurse it for me, and

They were nomads, roaming over a wide region, but they had a permanent nucleus, or 'home,' on the eastern border of Edom. Their pasture grounds extended as far as Gilead and Bashan on the north, and along both shores of the Atlantic Gulf on the south. Hence Horeb was said to be in the land of Midian, ch. 3. 1, which it is probable that Jethro left the camp of Israel at Horeb to go to his own land, that is to the chief seat of his tribe on the east of the Red Sea.

¶ Though learned and bred at a court, Moses could not get his hand to such an office as this when there was occasion, and loved to be doing justice, assisting the helpless, and appearing in the defence of such as he saw injured. The conduct of Moses affords a lesson to those who have received a liberal education, not to be above working with their hands, as they know not to what circumstances they may be reduced in the course of providence.

10 And the child grew,<sup>7</sup> and she brought him unto Pharaoh's daughter, and he became her son. And she called his name Moses:<sup>8</sup> and she said, Because I drew him out of the water.

11 ¶ And it came to pass in those<sup>9</sup> days, when Moses was grown, that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their burdens: and he spied an Egyptian smiting an Hebrew, one of his brethren.

12 And he looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he slew the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand.

13 And<sup>10</sup> when he went out the second day, behold, two men of the Hebrews strove together: and he said to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow?

14 And he said, Who made thee a prince and a judge over us? Intendest thou to kill me, as thou killedst the Egyptian? And Moses feared, and said, Surely this thing is known.

15 Now, when Pharaoh heard this thing, he sought to slay Moses. But Moses fled from the face of Pharaoh, and dwelt in the land of Midian:<sup>11</sup> and he sat down by a well.

16 ¶ Now the priest of Midian had seven daughters: and they came and drew water, and filled the troughs to water their father's flock.

17 And the shepherds came and drove them away: but Moses stood up and helped them, and watered their flock.<sup>12</sup>

18 And<sup>13</sup> when they came to Reuel their father, he said, How is it that ye are come so soon to-day?

19 And they said, An Egyptian delivered us out of the hand of the shepherds, and also drew water enough for us, and watered the flock.

20 And he said unto his daughters, And where is he? why is it that ye have left the man? call him, that he may eat bread.

away, and another comes. Those who wax great or numerous should therefore remember their original meanness. Remarkable is the birth of God's promise when its full time comes. In two hundred and fifteen years Abraham's promised seed had increased to seventy persons: in as many more they are increased to about three millions. Services done to men are soon forgotten, but those done to God are had in everlasting remembrance. At the same time, God's kindness often sharpens men's cruelty. And to what horrid and savage barbarity their selfish designs often push them! But it is vain for devils or men to contend with the Lord. Their best-laid attempts against his designs will but promote their accomplishment: and God's church often thrives best in the fiery furnace of troubles, continued one after another. Let me, therefore, always depend on God; always obey God rather than man. Never let such as are barbarous themselves make me an instrument of their cruelty; for if I hide or help God's outcasts in the day of their distress, he is not unfaithful to forget my labour of love, and may perhaps repay me in kind.

CHAPTER II. [Ver. 1. The man's name was Amram, of the family of Kohath, Levi's second son. The woman was Jochebed, of the same family. Miriam and Aaron, the brother and sister of Moses, were born before Pharaoh's cruel law was enacted. P.]

Ver. 2. She had born Miriam about ten and Aaron about four years before.

Ver. 6. Pharaoh's daughter knew this from her father's cruel edict, or from the beauty and circumcision of the babe.

Ver. 11. Being forty years old, Ac. 7. 23, and instructed by his parents and his God concerning his real kindred, he resolved to abandon the honours of the court, join himself to the oppressed people of God, and exert himself for their deliverance, He. 11. 24-26.

Ver. 14. Perhaps the contempt which the Hebrews now showed to Moses provoked God to defer their deliverance forty years, Ac. 7. 25.

Ver. 15. Pharaoh was enraged at Moses taking part with the Hebrews, and afraid of his heading them in a rebellion.

Ver. 14. [The act of Moses must be judged in the light of the times in which he lived, and the circumstances of his people. It cannot be fully justified, and it cannot be entirely condemned. Moses was trained in the court of a despot. He still retained the strongest feelings of love for his brethren. He saw one of them on the point of being murdered by the hand of a cruel Egyptian taskmaster. Moved by a generous impulse to save a brother, and roused to madness by a sense of wrong, he took the law into his own hand, as those occupying high places in the East are apt to do. Had Moses been the real, as he was the adopted, son of Pharaoh's daughter, he would have had nothing to fear; but being an Israelite, and acting beyond the bounds of justice on behalf of an Israelite, his own life was imperilled. P.]

Ver. 16. Reuel was a prince or priest of the true God among the Midianites, who dwelt along the coast of the east branch of the Red Sea; as Melchizedek was among the Canaanites, Ge. 14. 18: but whether he was the same with Jethro, and Hobab was his son, or whether Reuel was Jethro's father, and Jethro the same as Hobab, is not very evident, compare ch. 3. 1 with 18. 1, 27; Nu. 10. 29.

REFLECTIONS.—While wicked men exert themselves for the ruin of God's church, he is often preparing matters for her deliverance, though frequently his great works and his greatest instruments are apparently almost stifled in their birth. When God calls to it, it is becoming, with cheerfulness and confidence, to venture everything which concerns us on his providence. But strong faith in God ought always to be attended with the use of the most proper means which are in our power. It is easy for God to raise up friends to his distressed children among his principal enemies; or to find out methods for qualifying beforehand such as he intends for great work. And it is honourable for the greatest to observe and sympathize with the meanest in their adversities, and to be made the instrument of their relief: and where faith in and love to God duly

22 And she bare <sup>2</sup>him a son, and he called his name <sup>3</sup>Gershom.<sup>2</sup> for he said, I have been a stranger in a strange land.

23 ¶ And it came to pass <sup>4</sup>in process of time, that the king of Egypt died: and the children of Israel <sup>5</sup>sighed by reason of the bondage, and they cried; and their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage.

24 And God heard their groaning, and God remembered his <sup>6</sup>covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob.

25 And God looked upon the children of Israel, and God <sup>7</sup>had respect unto them.

CHAPTER III.

1 Moses keepeth Jethro's flock. 2 God appeareth to him in a burning bush. 3 He sendeth him to deliver Israel. 11 Moses inquireth, and is told the name of God. 15 God's message to Israel.

NOW Moses <sup>8</sup>kept the flock of Jethro his father-in-law, the priest of Midian: and he led the flock to the back-side of the desert, and came to the <sup>9</sup>mountain of God, even to Horeb.<sup>3</sup>

2 And the <sup>10</sup>Angel of the LORD appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he looked, and, behold, the <sup>11</sup>bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed.

3 And Moses said, I will now turn aside, and see this <sup>12</sup>great sight, why the bush is not burned.

4 And when the LORD saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, <sup>13</sup>Moses, Moses! And he said, Here am I.

5 And he said, <sup>14</sup>Draw not nigh hither: <sup>15</sup>put off thy shoes from off thy feet; for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground.<sup>4</sup>

6 Moreover he said, <sup>16</sup>I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses <sup>17</sup>hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God.

7 ¶ And the LORD said, I have surely <sup>18</sup>seen the affliction of my people which are in Egypt, and have heard their cry by reason of their taskmasters; for I know their sorrows;

9 It would seem from a careful examination and comparison of several passages that Horeb was a name given to a group of mountains, while Sinai was the specific name of one prominent and noted peak. This peak, however, gave its name to a district. Ex. 19. 1. 2. It should also be noted that the names Horeb and Sinai are more than once interchanged, and are given to the same mountain. P. 4 In the East the shoes are always taken off on entering mosque, church, or other sacred building; and even on entering a room. Where a gentleman would take off his hat in England, an Eastern, whether male or female, would take off the shoes. To facilitate this operation loose overshoes are worn by the higher classes. P. — The eastern shoe, or sandal, was so constructed as to be easily removed, like the European slipper. In eastern countries it is to take off the shoe, both in ancient and modern times, closely corresponds with the European custom of taking off the hat.

25 The impartiality of the sacred history, an in recording his own infirmities, errors, and transgressions, in this and the several succeeding verses, peculiarly deserves our attention. Moses, by narrating the various objections which his unbelief made to the divine call, and his presumption and obstinacy in adhering to them, notwithstanding all that God and the inspired writers, of which we have many examples, such as Samuel recording his own mistakes to the chosen of God in the family of Jesse, and the reproofs he received from God on that account; and, likewise, John the Divine states the great danger he was in of falling into idolatry by worshipping an angel, and the check he received from the messenger; and many others, which will occur to the mind of the attentive reader.

8 And I am <sup>19</sup>come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that land unto <sup>20</sup>a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey; unto the place of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites.

9 Now therefore, behold, the <sup>21</sup>cry of the children of Israel is come unto me; and I have also seen the oppression wherewith the Egyptians oppress them.

10 Come now therefore, and I will <sup>22</sup>send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people the children of Israel out of Egypt.

11 ¶ And Moses said unto God, <sup>23</sup>Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?<sup>5</sup>

12 And he said, Certainly <sup>24</sup>I will be with thee: and this shall be a <sup>25</sup>token unto thee that I have sent thee; When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, <sup>26</sup>ye shall serve God upon this mountain.

14 And God said unto Moses, <sup>28</sup>I AM THAT I AM: and he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you.

15 ¶ And God said moreover unto Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, <sup>29</sup>The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: this is my name for ever, and this is my <sup>30</sup>memorial unto all generations.

16 Go and gather the <sup>31</sup>elders of Israel together, and say unto them, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, appeared unto me, saying, I have

Ver. 5. The pulling off his shoes marked with what holiness, humility, and reverence we ought to approach unto God.—The ground was holy, was occasionally consecrated by the special manifestation of God thereon.

Ver. 6. God was the God of Abraham, &c. He was engaged to them by manifold promises, which he was now come to perform.

Ver. 7. I have seen, &c. I have kindly observed, mercifully regarded, and pitied their misery.

Ver. 8. I am about to manifest my infinite power and condescension in their deliverance.—A land flowing with milk and honey, is one abounding with necessary and agreeable productions.

Ver. 12. In the view of this solemn fellowship with me, encourage yourself to promote this deliverance.

Ver. 13. Which of these names should I use, that they may be most encouraged to expect the deliverance?—[The names by which God revealed himself to his people in primeval times were descriptive of the attributes—of power, mercy, &c.—which he was about specially to manifest. At creation he was Elohim, the 'God of power'; to Abraham in a strange land he was El-Shaddai, 'God Almighty'; to Melchizedek he was El-Elyon, 'The Most High,' far above all other gods.

prevail in the heart, no carnal consideration will deter such an one from joining himself to God's church and people. The sincerest kindness and friendship is frequently requited with abuse and contempt, and the strongest carnal affection quickly turned into murderous rage. But God regards even the affectionate design, and graciously provides a place of refuge for his persecuted friends and servants, where they may be safe and useful. No change of lot, no change of country, can make us lose the enjoyment of our God; nor deprive us of him as our reconciled God in Christ, to sympathize with us in, and bring us safely through, our most grievous afflictions.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 1. Horeb or Sinai was called the mount of God, as he at this time appeared on it, and soon after proclaimed his laws from it, ch. xix. xx. —[Horeb. Sinai and Horeb were the names of two eminences of the same mountain range. C.]

Ver. 2. This flame represented the awful majesty, perfect purity, and infinite power of God. The bush burning and not consumed, denotes the church of God, and particularly the Israelites, in their state debased, exposed, persecuted, and afflicted; but preserved by the presence and power of God, Jn. 16. 33; Ac. 14. 22;

Ps. 46. 1-5. But perhaps it chiefly prefigured the Godhead as dwelling in the manhood of Christ; and the terrible execution of divine justice upon him, while he was preserved by his Godhead, and his Father's residence in him, Jn. 1. 14; Col. 2. 9; 1 Ti. 3. 16; Is. 1. liii.; 2 Co. 5. 19, 21.—[The Angel of the Lord. That God is essentially 'invisible' is the revealed doctrine of Scripture, 1 Ti. 1. 17, and, when his infinity is considered, must be the deduction of reason. Yet to deny God the power of rendering himself visible were to limit both his omnipotence and his wisdom. Nay, it were to deny to God the capacity that he has actually bestowed upon the spirit of man; which, though invisible to the eye, makes its presence, its will, and its excellence visible by spirit and action in a body. On this occasion God renders himself visible by a flame of fire, by speech, promise, and command; and this appearance is called 'the Angel of the Lord,' ver. 2; 'JEHOVAH,' and 'God,' ver. 4; and the 'God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob,' and 'God,' ver. 6. Now, it is declared, Jn. 1. 18, 'No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared (educated) him.' Therefore, this manifestation of the invisible God was 'the WORD that was with God, and was God.' C.]

CHEOPS FROM THE MENA HOUSE—A TOMB STANDING WHEN THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL WERE IN EGYPT. [Exodus, ii:23.]—"And it came to pass, in process of time, that the king of Egypt died; and the children of Israel sighed by reason of the bondage, and they cried, and their cry came up unto God, by reason of the bondage." Cheops is the tomb of an Egyptian king by this name. This was not the king represented in the twenty-third verse of the second chapter of Exodus as dying, but Cheops was the second king of the fourth dynasty, and lived B. C. 3733. His name was found written in red ink upon the blocks of stone inside the pyramid. The four sides measure about 755 feet each. The height of the pyramid is now 451 feet, but it is said to have been originally 481 feet. This pyramid had been standing 2202 years when Moses was sent to deliver Israel. This is according to the calculation of Wallis Budge.

surely visited you, and seen that which is done to you in Egypt:

17 And I have said, I will bring you up out of the affliction of Egypt unto the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, unto a land flowing with milk and honey.

18 And they shall hearken to thy voice: and thou shalt come, thou and the elders of Israel, unto the king of Egypt, and ye shall say unto him, The LORD God of the Hebrews hath met with us; and now let us go, we beseech thee, three days' journey into the wilderness, that we may sacrifice to the LORD our God.<sup>6</sup>

19 ¶ And I am sure that the king of Egypt will not let you go, no, not by a mighty hand.

20 And I will stretch out my hand, and smite Egypt with all my wonders which I will do in the midst thereof: and after that he will let you go.

21 And I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians: and it shall come to pass, that, when ye go, ye shall not go empty:

22 But every woman shall borrow<sup>7</sup> of her neighbour, and of her that sojourneth in her house, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment: and ye shall put them upon your sons, and upon your daughters; and ye shall spoil the Egyptians.

The request implied that the Israelites must be completely out of Egypt—away from the idols, the temples, the pollutions of the land, and the evil and restraining influences of the people—ere they could worship Jehovah freely and acceptably.—P.

d Miracles were from the first the palpable evidences of a divine commission. Man had no means of directly testing the genuineness of the commission of the prophet or apostle. He could not be expected to admit it without satisfactory evidence. Hence God, in gracious condescension to human weakness, gave to his servants divine power, the exercise of which was to be the visible evidence of their divine commission.—P.

But Moses obeys God without gaining saying and though he fled on his own impulse, he fearlessly seizes it by the tail on God's authority.—P.

5 That they may believe that the LORD God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath appeared unto thee.

6 ¶ And the LORD said furthermore unto him, Put now thine hand into thy bosom. And he put his hand into his bosom: and when he took it out, behold, his hand was leprous as snow.

Ver. 14. I am that I am, I am the Fountain of being, eternally and unchangeably existing in, of, from, and by myself.—[Moses having asked God by what name he would declare him to the Israelites, God gives the name EHYEH, 'I am.' It signifies the self-existent, eternal, and immutable God. It signifies immutability exhibited especially in the fulfilment of promises after a long and almost hopeless interval. This was the character God was now about to manifest to the Israelites. Hence he said to Moses, 'EHYEH is what I am,' that is, 'EHYEH is my name:—'Thou shalt say unto the children of Israel, EHYEH hath sent me unto you.' The translation in the English version of what is in reality a proper name obscures the sense. P.]

Ver. 19. Notwithstanding manifold plagues inflicted on his kingdom, he will not let you go but by mere constraint.

Ver. 22. The word here rendered borrow signifies merely to ask: it was no sin thus to ask the Egyptians' property. God, the original and supreme proprietor of all things, commanded it. The Egyptians had forfeited their right by their wickedness, with respect to him. Hereby, too, he, as a righteous Judge, ordered payment of their wages to the Hebrews, who had been defrauded.—[Borrow. This statement has often become the butt of the infidel's arrow, on the ignorant supposition that the God of the Hebrews meditated, planned, and approved robbery, under pretence of borrowing. The passage obtains a triumphant defence upon two principles. 1. The word translated borrow, simply signifies to ask. 2. Let the objector reflect how long Israel had served Egypt, in a state of cruel and unremunerated slavery; and then say, were all the treasures of Egypt sufficient to pay them reasonable wages? He that buys a slave has some pretence (and but a pretence) to use him as his property, and render him nothing beyond food and raiment; but he that makes a freeman a slave, as Pharaoh did, has not even that pretence. Let it be farther remembered, that the Hebrews were, at this period, not merely field-labourers, but practical architects (ch. 5. 14), and accomplished artisans (ch. 31. 3-6; 35. 30-35); and the amount of wages due will be still farther increased, and the 'spoiling of the Egyptians' such an act of common justice as an upright judge, in modern times, would inflict upon any one refusing to pay his servant's wages. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—However long God seem to neglect, he will visit me at last. Let me therefore attend to my lawful calling, however mean, expecting his countenance in the way of my duty. If I desire solemn fellowship with him, let me retire from the world, and inquire into what he hath revealed. Let me always approach his presence with strong faith, holy awe, clean hands, and a pure heart. Let me, with joy and wonder, behold him as in Christ crucified, and as present in his church, to preserve her in her hottest troubles. Let me trust in him as my own and my father's God, and rejoice in the firmness and perpetuity of his new-covenant relations to us. Let me admire his mercy and wisdom in appearing for the salvation of his people, when they have given over looking for him; and let me firmly hope, that, whatever be the unworthiness of the object, the weakness of the instrument, or the wickedness or power of the opposer, the Lord will exactly fulfil the promises of his grace. O may I have this great I AM to do all for me, give all to me, and be ALL IN ALL unto me! May I in everything study to have his call cleared up and certified to me! May I receive my directions from him, what I shall say or do! May I labour after faithfulness in my work; and then, leaving it to the Lord, he will succeed my endeavours, and graciously reward me on their account; and the wrongs done to me in this world will be all rectified at last!

CHAPTER IV. Ver. 3, 4. This change of his rod signified that his ministry and miracles would be destructive as serpents to the Egyptians, but helpful and directive to the Hebrews. In like manner, his laws are to unbelievers a killing letter, a ministration of death, 2 Co. 2. 15, 16; 3. 6; but to believers a means of life, Gal. 3. 24.

Ver. 6, 7. This signified, that God, with the utmost ease and despatch, can change the form of our lot; and that it was by the power of God, not his own, that he wrought his miracles.

Ver. 9. This signified, that if the Hebrews should

EAST FROM THE PYRAMIDS OF GIZEH—A SCENE IN THE LAND WHERE THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL SPENT 430 YEARS. [Exodus, iv:19.]—"And the Lord said unto Moses in Midian, Go, return into Egypt: for all the men are dead which sought thy life." To understand men we must study the land in which they grew up. The relation of Moses to the children of Israel, to the Exodus, and the civilization which the Hebrew people developed, was such that we cannot do better than consider him through Egypt, in which he spent the first forty years of his life. The fortunes of Israel were committed to the keeping almost wholly of Moses. Hence we shall illustrate his career by pictures of Egypt. Standing at the pyramids and looking east, we see the direction the children of Israel took when they left the land in which they had sojourned four hundred and thirty years. We see the back of the Sphinx, and in the distance in dim outline, trees which skirt the banks of the Nile.

23 And I say unto thee, Let my son go, that he may serve me: and if thou refuse to let him

Ver. 21. Wonders were put in Moses' hand, in his having power granted him of God to effect them by means of his rod or staff.—As hardness of heart is a sin, Pharaoh hardened his own heart, encouraging himself in his opposition to the command of God; but as it is a punishment of sin, men being free to choose what results in hardening or softening their heart, Ps. 147. 20; or they refuse the outward grace which would effectually soften it, or they give themselves up to their own lusts, and to the power of Satan and the world; by the agency of whom they become more and more blinded, stupefied, and encouraged in their rebellion against God, 2 Th. 2. 10, 11; Ro. 11. 8, 10; 2 Co. 4. 3, 4; 2. 5, 16; 1 Ki. 22. 22; 1 Pe. 2. 8; Ro. 1. 28, 32.

REFLECTIONS.—Learn, my soul, never to be discouraged from present duty by former disappointments. God's promise is sufficient to balance all opposition. Let me accept of miracles recorded in God's word as the most convincing external proofs of a divine mission; and let me admire the kindness of God in so abundantly confirming the intimations of his will to mankind. Never should I excuse myself from the work to which God calls me, from any wickedness about others, or weakness in myself. God can make mountains his way, and qualify me as is necessary. Let me cheerfully connect the exercise of the gifts or graces which God hath given me in whatever order of precedence or subordination he pleaseth, employing

CHAPTER V. REFLECTIONS.—Let me here

4 And the king of Egypt said unto them, Wherefore do ye, Moses and Aaron, let the people from their works? get you unto your burdens.

5 And Pharaoh said, Behold, the people of the land now are many, and ye make them rest from their burdens.

6 ¶ And Pharaoh commanded the same day the taskmasters of the people, and their officers, saying,

7 Ye shall no more give the people straw to make brick, as heretofore: let them go and gather straw for themselves.

8 And the tale of the bricks, which they did make heretofore, ye shall lay upon them; ye shall not diminish ought thereof: for they be idle; therefore they cry, saying, Let us go and sacrifice to our God.

9 Let there more work be laid upon the men, that they may labour therein; and let them not regard vain words.

10 ¶ And the taskmasters of the people went out, and their officers, and they spake to the people, saying, Thus saith Pharaoh, I will not give you straw.

11 Go ye, get you straw where ye can find it: yet not ought of your work shall be diminished.

12 So the people were scattered abroad throughout all the land of Egypt to gather stubble instead of straw.

13 And the taskmasters hasted them, saying, Fulfil your works, your daily tasks, as when there was straw.

14 And the officers of the children of Israel, which Pharaoh's taskmasters had set over them, were beaten, and demanded, Wherefore have ye not fulfilled your task in making brick both yesterday and to-day, as heretofore?

15 ¶ Then the officers of the children of Israel came and cried unto Pharaoh, saying, Wherefore dealest thou thus with thy servants?

16 There is no straw given unto thy servants, and they say to us, Make brick: and, behold, thy servants are beaten; but the fault is in thine own people.

17 But he said, Ye are idle, ye are idle; therefore ye say, Let us go and do sacrifice to the LORD.

8 The brick pyramids at Dashoor and Falsoom still contain straw that is not even yet discoloured. Such bricks were never burned in the fire, but merely dried in the sun; and, in a country where corn never falls, as is the case in some parts of Egypt, have endured unchanged for centuries.—C.

1 This cruel and oppressive mandate will not be rightly understood without alluding to the fact that not only the stubble and the dry remains of grassy plains, which formed a substitute for straw, were frequently burnt up and entirely destroyed by hot winds, but that the grain with its straw was likewise consumed ere it was completely ripe for the sickle, and thus a scarcity prevailed to a greater or less extent almost every year.

3 The task-masters were Egyptians, the officers Hebrews, as may be seen by comparing this account with ver. 16, 17, 21. Such beating of men in office is still common in China and Persia, and is not infrequently applied even to the highest officers of state. It once did, and probably still does, prevail in some provinces of Russia.—Note, How great are the blessings of a government founded in Christianity, and not in force! C.—This is quite oriental. We need only allude to China, which has been aptly said to be governed by the stick. In Persia, also, the stick is in continual action. Men of all ranks and ages are continually liable to be beaten. It is by no means a rare occurrence for the highest and most trusted persons in the state, in a moment of displeasure or caprice in their royal master, to be handed over to the beaters of carpets, who beat them with the stick as if they were dogs. The same practice descends through all ranks; and it has often made the writer's heart ache to see respectable and even venerable white-bearded men chastised by the menials and messengers of great persons, &amp;c.—Pict. 5 We read (Ge. 12. 8) that Abram called upon the name of JEHOVAH ELOHIM; but, still more expressly to the point, we read, Ge. 15. 7, 'I am JEHOVAH that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees.' How, then, are we to reconcile these statements with the assertion in the text? Some translate the word 'know' by appropriate, but this will not solve the difficulty, for Abram did appropriate God by faith. Some translate the sentence interrogatively, and it will bear this form; but by this change, no explanation is gained. Let us then seek the meaning of the passage in the word JEHOVAH itself. JEHOVAH means, he that is, that always is, the unchangeable one. Now, the name 'Almighty God,' in which (Ge. 17. 1) Abram was called and encouraged, refers to power to protect—the attribute which Abram's defenceless condition most needed him to seek for the support of his faith; but the name JEHOVAH—the unchangeable—refers to time, and therefore requires promise and long experience of faithfulness, to illustrate and establish its evidence. Thus Abram had abundant evidence that God was almighty to defend and protect; but though his faith did not doubt, time did not allow him to test his unchangeableness; whereas now, when centuries of changing time, and of God's apparent slackness concerning his promise, 2 Pe. 3. 9, had passed away, JEHOVAH, as the unchangeable, is made known to his people, and an attribute that time alone could develop, is that upon which God rests his chief claim to confidence and obedience.—C.

18 Go therefore now and work: for there shall no straw be given you, yet shall ye deliver the tale of bricks.

19 And the officers of the children of Israel did see that they were in evil case, after it was said, Ye shall not diminish ought from your bricks of your daily task.

20 ¶ And they met Moses and Aaron, who stood in the way, as they came forth from Pharaoh:

21 And they said unto them, The LORD look upon you, and judge; because ye have made our savour to be abhorred in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of his servants, to put a sword in their hand to slay us.

22 ¶ And Moses returned unto the LORD, and said, Lord, wherefore hast thou so evil-entreated this people? why is it that thou hast sent me?

23 For since I came to Pharaoh to speak in thy name, he hath done evil to this people; neither hast thou delivered thy people at all.

CHAPTER VI.

1 God reneweth his promise by his name JEHOVAH. 14 The genealogy of Reuben, 15 of Simeon, 16 of Levi, of whom came Moses and Aaron.

THEN the LORD said unto Moses, Now shalt thou see what I will do to Pharaoh: for with a strong hand shall he let them go, and with a strong hand shall he drive them out of his land.

2 And God spake unto Moses, and said unto him, I am the LORD:

3 And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of God Almighty: but by my name JEHOVAH was I not known to them.

4 And I have also established my covenant with them, to give them the land of Canaan, the land of their pilgrimage, wherein they were strangers.

5 And I have also heard the groaning of the children of Israel, whom the Egyptians keep in bondage; and I have remembered my covenant.

6 Wherefore say unto the children of Israel, I am the LORD, and I will bring you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians, and I will rid you out of their bondage, and I will redeem remark, that however poor and despicable the people of God may be on earth, he will acknowledge them, and in his own way plead their cause. The most presumptuous rebellion against God's will is founded in ignorance of him; and, while persecutors obstinately cleave to their wickedness, God's people ought to be particularly careful of offending him. It is no new thing for carnal men to look on religious worship as useless or hurtful, and to improve God's demands upon his people as a spur to their own cruelty: and cruel princes never want cruel agents to promote their barbarous purposes. In evil times God's ministers may expect a double share of abuse at all hands; and be blamed as the causes of distress, when they are but the innocent and dutiful occasions of it. But what a mercy is it that they have a God to go to with their complaints! Surely there is need to believe in hope against hope, since the heaviest trials may happen when we expect, and are even at the daybreak of, remarkable deliverances. Meanwhile, let me think of the bondage of heathenish and antichristian superstition, idolatry, oppression, and persecution, from which God hath delivered, and will deliver, his gospel-church. But how much more oppressive is the bondage of our natural and unregenerated state!—the bondage to a broken law, which demands the perfect performance of every duty, and yet denies all strength for that effect!—the bondage to divers lusts, which lade men with guilt, drown them in perdition, and pierce them through with many sorrows!—the bondage to this world, in mind nothing but carnal things!—the bondage of the fears of death and hell, which often render life a burden!—and the bondage to Satan, who goeth about seeking whom he may devour! Blessed for ever be the Lord, who hath sent a Saviour and a great One to deliver us! Dare not, my soul, to murmur against him, though fires should go before him, and it should be very tempestuous round about him. Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning.

The marriage was afterward forbidden as incestuous, Le. 18. 12, which might be looked upon as a blot upon his family, though it took place before that law; and Moses does not conceal it, for he sought not his own praise, but wrote with a and thus we find Moses is generally mentioned before Aaron.

<sup>1</sup> Aaron is here mentioned first as he was older than Moses. It is, however, usual in Scripture, as in the case of Shem, Abraham, and others, to name a younger brother first when there is any peculiarly excellent trait in his character; and thus we find Moses is generally mentioned before Aaron.

[Exodus, vi: 27.]—"These are they which spake to Pharaoh king of Egypt, to bring out the children of Israel from Egypt." The Ancient Empire of Egypt includes the first eleven dynasties. It closed B. C. 2533. The children of Israel were in Egypt during the Middle Empire, which lasted from B. C. 2500, when Se-anch-ka-Rä was king, to B. C. 1300, when Seti was king. This last king of Egypt is thought to have been the Pharaoh of the Exodus. In the Gizeh Museum the statues and antiquities are arranged in different rooms under empires. The empire to which this illustration belongs antedates that of Moses by many centuries. But in the study of the ancient land of Egypt we must remember that its history is a connected whole, and that the Ancient Empire made possible the Middle Empire. The parties who secured the pictures illustrating this Bible were shown great courtesy by E. Brugsch Bey, and were permitted to take photographs of anything found in the Gizeh Museum.

9 Moses does not affirm that there was a perfect conformity between his works and those of the magicians; he makes choice of a word which does not necessarily express anything more than a general similitude, such as is consistent with a difference in many important respects—they say and do, or in like manner.—Farmer.

7 We learn from Paul (2 Ti. 3. 8) that at least the chief of them, were Jannes and Jambres, and they withstood Moses, as Farmer judiciously intimates in the preceding note, not as some suppose, by performing, through diabolical power, the same miracle that Moses wrought by the power of God; but merely in like manner, by what is called legerdemain, sleight of hand, and visual deception, with the privacy and through the connivance of Pharaoh, as, from ch. 5. 19, will afterwards appear.

8 That is, they became serpents to the eye of the spectators.

9 Moses relating, not what actually took place, but what, to the senses, appeared to take place. The key to the inconsistent and vacillating conduct of Pharaoh is found, 1. In his total disregard of Jehovah, the true God, ch. 5. 2; and 2. In the idolatrous principle that gods were local, and of different powers, contending even in bitter rivalry for pre-eminence, and occasionally foiled or successful, according to fate and circumstances.—Note. How many are the destructive consequences of one original erroneous principle! Like the foundation on sand, it ensures the ruin of the superstructure.—C.

1 The Nile is the only river of Egypt; but the country is filled with canals and ducts, and cisterns and pools, all constructed for the diffusion of the water over the surface of the ground, and for its preservation for purposes of irrigation and household use, after the Nile has become low. The description in this verse is thus most accurate.—P.

2 Ps. 78. 44. See ver. 17, with ch. 1. 22. Re. 16. 6. Je. 2. 17. 19. 4. 18.

2 The Nile being one of the deities of the Egyptians, this miracle was therefore well qualified to teach them that there was no confidence to be placed in their idols; and that what Moses told was an undeniable fact, that the God of Israel, and he alone, held the uncontrolled dominion of the universe, and that all things were subjected to his sway.

strong consolations from them. The frowardness of gospel-hearers makes ministers despair of success with others, and repeat the excuses which God hath already answered, till he charge them, on their peril, to obey his appointments. O the perverseness of the human heart, and its enmity against God! Before he calls, what numbers run unsent! When he calls to his service, what averseness to comply!—Whatever my pedigree be, whether honourable or ignominious, let me reckon it my chief honour to be God's child, and to be made useful in doing good to souls.—Let me, without gainsaying, obey his voice, and provoke him not; and though my work be difficult or dangerous, as my days are, so shall my strength be.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 1. Moses was a god to Pharaoh: he dealt with him in the name and authority of God, and punished his disobedience with plagues which none but God could inflict.

Ver. 6. They manifested the noblest courage in speaking to or dealing with proud Pharaoh, and the most exact fidelity in the execution of all God's commands.

Ver. 12-22. Whether the magicians imposed upon the sight of the spectators by artfully conveying away the rods, and putting serpents in their places; or whether Satan actuated the rods, and made them appear as serpents; or whether, for the hardening of Pharaoh, God himself effected this change, is hard to determine. It was more easy to impose upon spectators in turning the water into blood, or in bringing up frogs. But it is manifest, that all which the magicians did increased the plagues, but could not remove them; and that the swallowing up of their rods by Aaron's, and their inability to produce lice, proved that Moses' miracles were effected by a power infinitely superior to what they had in command.

REFLECTIONS.—How great is the condescension of God, in putting some of his honour upon sinful men, and in speaking to us by them, that his dread may not make us afraid! But, amidst trials and discouragements, ministers have need to be fully satisfied that, whatever contradiction they meet with, God will do right by their work, both in them that are saved and in them that perish. Happy those who know the Lord to be God by his fulfilment of promises to them!

but miserable indeed are they who know him to be God by the execution of his justice upon them! The contest between Almighty God and the strongest worms of mankind is greatly unequal: let the potsherd strive with the potsherd of the earth; for, if men will not bow before the sceptre of his grace, they must break beneath the rod of his judgment. But, in mercy, God often warns before he punishes them. Sinners frequently desire to see miracles, not for their conviction, but to strengthen their unbelief. And readily is Satan permitted to harden such in their sin by his lying wonders. Through his influence men harden themselves against warnings, against judgments and deliverances: and whatever other shifts they try for relief, they will not so much as cry to God when he bindeth them. But the cause of God and truth shall prevail at last, and reign without contradiction: and dreadful shall be the just miseries of them who oppressed his people and contemned his admonition!

CHAPTER VIII. REFLECTIONS.—How terrible an enemy is God, who, even by frogs, flies, and lice, can subdue the most proud and potent of his

2 And if thou refuse to let them go, behold, I will smite all thy borders with frogs:

3 And the river shall bring forth frogs abundantly, which shall go up, and come into thine house, and into thy bed-chamber, and upon thy bed, and into the house of thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thine ovens, and into thy kneading-troughs.<sup>3</sup>

4 And the frogs shall come up both on <sup>thee</sup>, and upon thy people, and upon all thy servants.<sup>4</sup>

5 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Moses, Say unto Aaron, Stretch forth thine hand with thy rod over the streams, over the rivers, and over the ponds, and cause frogs to come up upon the land of Egypt.

6 And Aaron stretched out his hand over the waters of Egypt; and the <sup>frogs</sup> came up, and covered the land of Egypt.

7 And<sup>a</sup> the magicians did so with their enchantments, and brought up frogs upon the land of Egypt.

8 ¶ Then Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron, and said, <sup>Entreat</sup> the LORD, that he may take away the frogs from me, and from my people; and I <sup>will</sup> let the people go, that they may do sacrifice unto the LORD.

9 And Moses said unto Pharaoh, Glory<sup>5</sup> over me:<sup>6</sup> when shall I entreat for thee, and for thy servants, and for thy people, to destroy<sup>7</sup> the frogs from thee and thy houses, that they may remain in the river only?

12 And Moses and Aaron went out from Pharaoh: and Moses <sup>cried</sup> unto the LORD because of the frogs which he had brought against Pharaoh.

13 And the LORD did <sup>according to</sup> the word of Moses; and the frogs died out of the houses, out of the villages, and out of the fields.

14 And they gathered them together upon heaps: and the land <sup>stank</sup>.

4 Had not God commanded Moses to threaten Pharaoh and the idolatrous Egyptians with the plague of frogs before its infliction, the uncommon increase of this amphibious reptile would doubtless have been attributed to some other cause. It is not absolutely certain whether the frog were an object of worship or of abhorrence in Egypt, possibly of both, as in other instances where religious adoration was offered from sentiments of terror; and if so, they were punished as well by what they venerated as by what they abominated.

9 The Septuagint, Origen, and Jerome translate the word mosquito gnai, an insect which from its habits is known to be insupportably galling. Josephus, supported by the Jewish rabbis, renders the word lice, a species of vermin, of which the Egyptians, from their singular attention to cleanliness, were peculiarly abhorrent. Others think it was the Auratus sanguisuga, or greedy bloodsucker, a small tick which buried itself in the flesh of both man and beast, and this is countenanced by the phraseology of ver. 17. The Egyptian impostors could not imitate this miracle, because the plague was on themselves already, and therefore they acknowledged it to have been caused by the finger of God alone; and Pharaoh, aware of their former chicanery in so often attempting to deceive him, refuses to believe them, looking upon the miracle as a mere temporary triumph of Jehovah. Itis farther to be observed that this plague, unlike the former two, was inflicted without any previous warning, so that James and Jambres could make no preparation, and being taken unawares, acknowledged the finger of God, not because they honoured him, but to hide their own defeat. That this was the real state of the case is rendered still more probable from their continued attempt to 'stand before Moses,' recorded in ch. 9. 11.—C.

5 That is, not what the Egyptians abominated, but what Moses, as a worshipper of the true God, called an abomination, because idolatrously worshipped by the Egyptians. But why does Moses employ such an offensive term to Pharaoh? Because if Pharaoh was an idolater, it was the duty of Moses to bear testimony against idolatry. The bull and the cow are the animals chiefly meant, both of which a Hebrew would have sacrificed, and an Egyptian most abjectly worshipped. That the Egyptians would have stoned the Hebrews, as Moses affirms, had they sacrificed a cow, is well illustrated by the fact, that, in after years, they put a Roman citizen of rank to death for killing a cat—another of their gods—though they exceedingly dreaded the power of Rome, and anxiously courted her favour.—C.

18 And the magicians did so with their enchantments to bring forth lice, but they <sup>could</sup> not: so there were lice upon man and upon beast.

19 Then the magicians said unto Pharaoh, This is the <sup>finger</sup> of God. And Pharaoh's heart was <sup>hardened</sup>, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said.

20 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Rise up early in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh, (lo, he cometh forth to the water,) and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, <sup>Let</sup> my people go, that they may serve me:

21 Else, if thou wilt not let my people go, behold, I will send <sup>swarms of flies</sup> upon thee, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people, and into thy houses; and the houses of the Egyptians shall be full of swarms<sup>1</sup> of flies, and also the ground whereon they are.

23 And I will put a division<sup>2</sup> between my people and thy people: to-morrow<sup>3</sup> shall this sign be.

24 And the LORD did so: and <sup>there</sup> came a grievous swarm of flies into the house of Pharaoh, and into his servants' houses, and into all the land of Egypt; the land was corrupted<sup>4</sup> by reason of the swarm of flies.

25 ¶ And Pharaoh called for Moses and for Aaron, and said, Go ye, sacrifice to your God in the land.

26 And Moses said, <sup>It is not meet so to do;</sup> for we shall sacrifice the <sup>abomination</sup><sup>5</sup> of the Egyptians to the LORD our God: lo, shall we sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, and will they not stone us?

RAMESES II., OR RAMESES THE GREAT—THE KING WHO OPPRESSED THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL. [EXODUS, ix: 1.]—“Then the Lord said unto Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh, and tell him, Thus saith the Lord God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.” We give a photograph of this Pharaoh, who oppressed the Children of Israel. He was the king of Egypt who led to the exodus under the leadership of Moses. His mummy was discovered in Thebes in 1881. Ramesses II. was a great warrior, builder of treasure cities on which the Israelites worked, as we are taught in Exodus 1:2, and was “a new king, who knew not Joseph.” He built temples, obelisks and cities. His body now lies embalmed as we see it along with the kings of Egypt, in the Gizeh Museum. How wonderful that to-day we can behold the features of a very king whose name carried such terror to the people 3500 years ago! Besides this mummy of Ramesses II., there are many statues of him still in Egypt.

30 And Moses went out from Pharaoh, and entreated the LORD.

31 And<sup>d</sup> the LORD did according to the word of Moses; and he removed the swarms of flies from Pharaoh, from his servants, and from his people: there remained not one.

32 And Pharaoh <sup>hardened</sup> his heart at this time also, neither would he let the people go.<sup>4</sup>

4 And the LORD shall <sup>sever</sup> between the cattle of Israel and the cattle of Egypt: and there shall nothing die of all that is the children's of Israel.

5 And the LORD appointed a set <sup>time</sup>, saying, To-morrow the LORD shall do this thing in the land.

6 And the LORD did that thing on the morrow, and <sup>fall</sup> the cattle of Egypt died; but of the cattle of the children of Israel died not one.

7 And Pharaoh sent, and, behold, there was not one of the cattle of the Israelites dead. And the <sup>heart</sup> of Pharaoh was hardened,<sup>7</sup> and he did not let the people go.

8 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses and unto Aaron, <sup>Take</sup> to you handfuls of ashes of the furnace, and let Moses sprinkle it toward the heaven<sup>8</sup> in the sight of Pharaoh;

9 And it shall become small dust in all the land of Egypt, and shall be a <sup>boil</sup> breaking forth with blains upon man, and upon beast, throughout all the land of Egypt.

10 And they took ashes of the furnace, and stood before Pharaoh; and Moses sprinkled it up toward heaven; and it became a <sup>boil</sup> breaking forth with blains upon man and upon beast.

b Here we have a

this storm of hail pro-

ever taken of the land of Goshen being preserved from receiving any damage by the plague. God

and causes rain or

not on another, either in mercy or judgment. The effect it had on Pharaoh is marked and striking.

The haughty monarch humbled himself to Moses in the

tent. No man could

better. He owns his wrongs, and the equity of God's pro-

and yet, as we seen in the sequel, his

dened all the while;

for those who grow

no better under mer-

cies and judgments

frequently get worse.

12 And the LORD <sup>hardened</sup> the heart of Pharaoh, and he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had spoken unto Moses.

13 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Rise up <sup>early</sup> in the morning, and stand before Pharaoh, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, Let my people go, that they may serve me.

14 For I will at this time send all my plagues upon <sup>thine</sup> heart, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people; that thou <sup>mayest</sup> know that there is none like me in all the earth.

15 For now I will stretch out my hand, that I may smite thee and thy people with pestilence; and thou shalt be <sup>cut</sup> off from the earth.

16 And in very deed for <sup>this cause</sup> have I raised thee up,<sup>3</sup> for to show in thee my power; and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth.

17 As yet <sup>exaltest</sup> thou thyself against my people, that thou wilt not let them go?

18 Behold, to-morrow about this time, I will cause it to rain a very grievous hail,<sup>4</sup> such as hath not been in Egypt since the foundation thereof even until now.

19 Send<sup>5</sup> therefore now, and gather thy cattle, and all that thou hast in the field: for upon every man and beast which shall be found in the field, and shall not be brought home, the hail shall come down upon them, and they shall die.

20 He that <sup>feared</sup> the word of the LORD among the servants of Pharaoh made his servants and his cattle flee into the houses:

21 And he that <sup>regarded</sup> not the word of the LORD left his servants and his cattle in the field.

22 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch forth <sup>thine</sup> hand toward heaven,<sup>5</sup> that there may be hail in all the land of Egypt, <sup>upon</sup> man, and upon beast, and upon every herb of the field, throughout the land of Egypt.

23 And Moses stretched forth his rod toward heaven: and the LORD sent <sup>thunder</sup> and hail, and the fire ran along upon the ground; and the LORD rained hail upon the land of Egypt.

24 So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail, very grievous, such as there was none like it in all the land of Egypt <sup>since</sup> it became a nation.

25 And the hail smote throughout all the land of Egypt all that was in the field, both man and beast; and the hail smote every herb of the field, and brake every tree of the field.<sup>6</sup> impudently presumptuous and scandalously perfidious! Let me, with Moses and Aaron, be bold and faithful in every point in the service of God! neither fearing the wrath of kings nor the opposition of devils: and let me always be ready to pray for mine enemies when I have any encouragement to it, any hopes of their change of heart, or of a blessing from the Lord upon them.

CHAPTER IX. [Ver. 6. The Hebrew word rendered 'all' does not in every case and necessarily signify all absolutely. It is frequently used just as the word all is now used in common conversation—to express the idea of a very great number, or a very large proportion. In interpreting both written and spoken language regard must be had to the usus loquendi. P.]

Ver. 24. [The description shows that it was a terrific thunderstorm, accompanied by a heavy fall of hail. In other countries such a storm might have been natural; in Egypt it was miraculous. Besides, it was predicted; and this of itself would show it to have been a miracle. P.]

REFLECTIONS. — God can execute the most numerous, diversified, and extensive judgments upon such as hate him. He can easily make what we have idolized, whether our cattle, our bodies, or our fields, the immediate objects of our punishment; and how severe is the punishment which he hath laid up in store for such as have been most instrumental in deceiving and hardening others! Satan can delude men into sin, but he cannot preserve them from suffering. And in absolute wisdom, God overrules the devices of wicked men, and often their works are made to redound 26 Only<sup>a</sup> in the land of Goshen, where the children of Israel were, was there no hail.

27 ¶ And Pharaoh sent, and called for Moses and Aaron, and said unto them, I have sinned this time: the LORD is righteous, and I and my people are wicked.

28 Entreat<sup>c</sup> the LORD, (for it is enough), that there be no more <sup>a</sup>mighty thunderings and hail; and I will let you go, and ye shall stay no longer.

29 And Moses said unto him, As soon as I am gone out of the city, I will spread abroad my hands unto the LORD; and the thunder shall cease, neither shall there be any more hail; that thou mayest know how that the earth is the LORD's.

30 But as for thee and thy servants, I know that ye will not yet fear the LORD God.

31 And the flax and the barley was smitten: for the barley was in the ear, and the flax was balled.

32 But the wheat and the rye<sup>d</sup> were not smitten: for they were <sup>7</sup>not grown up.<sup>8</sup>

33 And Moses went out of the city from Pharaoh, and spread abroad his hands unto the LORD: and the thunders and hail ceased, and the rain was not poured upon the earth.

34 And when Pharaoh saw that the rain, and the hail, and the thunders, were ceased, he sinned yet more, and hardened his heart, he and his servants.

35 And the heart of Pharaoh was hardened, neither would he let the children of Israel go; as the LORD had spoken by Moses.

CHAPTER X.

1 God threateneth to send locusts. 7 Pharaoh, moved by his servants, inclineth to let the Israelites go. 12 The plague of locusts. 16 Pharaoh sueth again to Moses. 21 The plague of darkness. 24 Pharaoh sueth unto Moses, but is still hardened.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh: for I have hardened his heart, and the heart of his servants, that I might show these my signs before him:

2 And that thou mayest tell in the ears of thy son, and of thy son's son, what things I have wrought in Egypt, and my signs which I have done among them; that ye may know how that I am the LORD.

3 And Moses and Aaron came in unto Pharaoh, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of the Hebrews, How long wilt thou refuse to humble thyself before me? Let<sup>e</sup> my people go, that they may serve me:

4 Else, if thou refuse to let my people go, behold, to-morrow will I bring the locusts into thy coast:<sup>9</sup> t The locust is a creature akin to the cricket and grasshopper. The great brown locust is about three inches in length, has two antennae or feelers of about an inch long, projecting from the head, and two pair of wings. When they migrate from the place of their birth in the great African and Asiatic deserts, they always follow a leader, and appear in such immense flocks as to darken the air. In whatever country they settle, they devour all the produce of the earth; and though the land be before them as the garden of Eden, behind them it is a desolate wilderness. B. chart enumerates ten species, differing in size and habits, but all agreeing in voracity. Their migrations are frequent into many countries of Africa and Asia, and are not unusual in the southern parts of Europe, especially in Spain. When the locust-clouds appear, the consternation of the inhabitants of agricultural districts is extreme; and loud noises, fires, and even artillery, are employed to keep them on the wing, for when they once descend hope of deliverance is over.—Note. How weak is a mighty monarch, and how feeble a nation, when they contend with God, seeing they are unable to conquer an insect!—C.

u Heb. hastened to call.

5 And they shall cover the face<sup>1</sup> of the earth, that one cannot be able to see the earth: and they shall eat the residue of that which is escaped, which remaineth unto you from the hail, and shall eat every tree which groweth for you out of the field.

6 And they shall fill thy houses, and the houses of all thy servants, and the houses of all the Egyptians; which neither thy fathers nor thy fathers' fathers have seen, since the day that they were upon the earth unto this day. And he turned himself, and went out from Pharaoh.

7 ¶ And Pharaoh's servants said unto him, How long shall this man be a 'snare unto us? Let the men go, that they may serve the LORD their God. Knowest thou not yet that Egypt is destroyed?

8 And Moses and Aaron were brought again unto Pharaoh: and he said unto them, Go, serve the LORD your God; but who are they that shall go?

9 And Moses said, We will go with our young and with our old, with our sons and with our daughters, with our flocks and with our herds will we go: for we must hold a feast unto the LORD.

10 And he said unto them, Let the LORD be so with you,<sup>2</sup> as I will let you go, and your little ones: look to it; for evil is before you.

11 Not so: go now ye that are men, and serve the LORD; for that ye did desire. And they were driven out from Pharaoh's presence.

12 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand over the land of Egypt for the locusts, that they may come up upon the land of Egypt, and eat every herb of the land, even all that the hail hath left.

13 And Moses stretched forth his rod<sup>3</sup> over the land of Egypt, and the LORD brought an 'east wind upon the land all that day, and all that night; and, when it was morning, the east wind brought the 'locusts.

14 And the locusts went up over all the land of Egypt, and rested in all the coasts of Egypt: very grievous were they; before them there were no such locusts as they, neither after them shall be such.

15 For<sup>4</sup> they covered the face of the whole earth,<sup>4</sup> so that the land was darkened; and they did eat every herb of the land, and all the fruit of the trees which the hail had left: and there remained not any green thing in the trees, or in the herbs of the field, through all the land of Egypt.

16 ¶ Then Pharaoh called<sup>5</sup> for Moses and to the praise of the glory of his justice. Though men may sport with his judgments, the justice of the Almighty will most certainly overtake them, and fall most heavily on those who remain under the power of a proud hell-hardened heart; which neither warnings, however express, nor judgments, however terrible, can impress. But happy are they who have God for their friend and refuge! Effectual fervent prayer to him is the most powerful antidote against trouble, and under it the surest help and consolation.

CHAPTER X. [Ver. 15. This description of the advent and ravages of the locusts is exceedingly graphic. I had an opportunity of witnessing one terrible invasion of locusts. They first appeared like a yellowish mist dimming the brightness of the sun; gradually the mist grew thicker until the sun was completely obscured. Then a whirring sound was heard, and became so deep Aaron in haste; and he said, 'I have sinned against the LORD your God, and against you.

17 Now therefore 'forgive, I pray thee, my sin only this once, and entreat the LORD your God, that he may take away from me this death' only.

18 And he went out from Pharaoh, and 'entreated the LORD.

19 And the LORD turned a mighty strong west wind, which took away the locusts, and cast them into the 'Red sea; there remained not one locust in all the coasts of Egypt.

20 But 'the LORD hardened Pharaoh's heart, so that he would not let the children of Israel go.

21 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand toward heaven, that there may be 'darkness over the land of Egypt, even darkness which may be felt.<sup>5</sup>

22 And Moses stretched forth his hand toward heaven; and there was a thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days:

23 They saw not one another, neither rose any from his place, for three days:<sup>6</sup> but 'all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings.

24 ¶ And Pharaoh called unto Moses, and said, Go ye, serve the LORD; only 'let your flocks and your herds be stayed: let your little ones also go with you.

25 And Moses said, Thou must give us also sacrifices and burnt-offerings, that we may sacrifice unto the LORD our God.

26 Our<sup>c</sup> cattle also shall go with us; there shall not a hoof be left behind: for thereof must we take to serve the LORD our God; and we<sup>d</sup> know not with what we must serve the LORD, until we come thither.

27 ¶ But the LORD 'hardened Pharaoh's heart, and he would not let them go.

28 And Pharaoh said unto him, 'Get thee

Some have rendered this 'darkness which causeth to feel,' but the expression as it stands is sufficiently intelligible, and although it is difficult, perhaps impossible, to account for the partial limits of the darkness, it was the will of God in this instance it should be so drawn as to make a distinction between the Egyptians and the Israelites.

Lightfoot, in his comments on the latter clause of Ps. 105. 28, 'and they rebelled not against his word,' conceives the language to allude to Israel, who in this plague of darkness performed some special act of obedience, and that upon inquiry will be found to have been the undergoing of circumcision, and that there was a general circumcision in Egypt, appears from Jos. 5. 2-9. It would appear, therefore, that God closed up Egypt in three days' darkness, and in horror, that they might not take an opportunity of injuring the children of Israel while suffering under this rite.

The meaning and force of this verse ought to be noted. It assigns two reasons for the profuse liberality of the Egyptians to the Hebrews:—1. God gave his people favour; and 2. The power of Moses was seen and acknowledged to be paramount. Nothing was beyond his reach. By a word he could destroy in a moment the fruits of the field, the cattle, the industry, and even the life of man. The Egyptians, fearing his power were willing to propitiate him with any sacrifices however costly.

29 And Moses 'said, Thou hast spoken well; I will see thy face again no more.

CHAPTER XI.

1 God's message to the Israelites to borrow jewels of their neighbours. 4 Moses threateneth Pharaoh with the death of the first-born. 9 Pharaoh is still hardened.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Yet will I bring one plague more upon Pharaoh, and upon Egypt; afterwards he will let you go hence: when he shall let you go, he shall surely 'thrust you out hence altogether.

2 Speak now in the ears of the people, and let every man 'borrow of his neighbour, and every woman of her neighbour, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold.

3 And the LORD 'gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians. Moreover, the man Moses was 'very great in the land of Egypt, in the sight of Pharaoh's servants, and in the sight of the people.<sup>7</sup>

4 ¶ And Moses said, 'Thus saith the LORD, 'About midnight will I go out into the midst of Egypt:

5 And all the first-born in the land of Egypt shall die, from the first-born of Pharaoh that sitteth upon his throne, even unto the first-born of the maid-servant that is 'behind the mill; and all the first-born of beasts.

6 And there shall be a 'great cry throughout all the land of Egypt, such as there was none like it, nor shall be like it any more.

7 But against any of the children of Israel 'shall not a dog<sup>8</sup> move his tongue, against man or beast; that ye may know 'how that the LORD doth put a difference between the Egyptians and Israel.

8 And all these 'thy servants shall come down unto me, and bow down themselves unto me, and penetrating that the whole air and earth seemed to tremble, and a sense of fear instinctively crept over one. Soon afterwards the locusts began to alight, and in a few hours the ground was covered with them. For three days the cloud swept over Damascus, and then they lay on the earth in some places to the depth of five and six inches. Every green thing was eaten up—grass, grain, flowers, foliage, and even the tender bark of trees. The houses, courts, and streets of the city were filled with them. It was impossible to keep them off the person; they crawled over back and head, and face and hands. In walking through the streets, and even in the rooms of the houses, one crushed several at every step. P.]

Ver. 16. I have sinned against you, Hebrews, in cruelly oppressing you: I have sinned against you, Moses and Aaron, in scornfully denying your just demands.

Ver. 19. The sea which runs along the east of Egypt is called the Red Sea, either from the colour of the weeds in it; or, rather, because it anciently belonged to the Edomites, Ge. 25. 30, for Edom signifies red.

Ver. 23. The Israelites could have marched away in this darkness; but God would have them brought forth, not as fugitives, but as triumphant conquerors.

Ver. 26. They were to leave nothing of their property behind them, that they might have no temptation to return.

Ver. 29. Moses saw Pharaoh no more; for he denounced the death of the first-born before he left his presence at this time, ch. 11. 4-8; and when they were destroyed, Pharaoh only sent to him, ch. 12. 31.

REFLECTIONS.—Let me, with holy awe, observe, that God intends the judgments which he executes as standing memorials of his supreme power and authority over all creatures, and of his victorious power over the kingdom of Satan, in restraining the malice and chastising the insolence of his and his people's enemies. But there is nothing for which God more readily quarrels with men than for their pride. Whole nations are often ruined through the pride and obstinacy of their governors; and when Satan has got sinners to the brink of ruin, he exerts all his might in pushing them down headlong. The early engagement of children in the service of God is exceedingly contrary to the inclinations and interests of Satan and his agents. But the proudest contemners of God's messengers will be obliged to stoop to them at last. Professors of repentance, extorted by punishment, are but hypocritical, and quickly issue in more obstinate relapses into wickedness: but such as baffle manifold convictions may expect to be given up to such hardness of heart, that nothing but the power of hell will impress or awaken their conscience. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much: it often, for a time, diverts the just rewards of God from his insolent enemies. The wicked need not therefore hasten the godly from among them; for if once a full separation be made, the former will be irrecoverably and inexpressibly miserable, and the just judgment of God will no longer tarry.

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 3. Moses was very great; was much honoured, as one who could bring upon them fearful judgments, and remove them at his pleasure.

Ver. 4. I will go out; manifest my powerful and just purpose in an eminent and extensive manner.

Ver. 7. They shall not meet with the smallest opposition or disturbance in their departure from Egypt.

Ver. 8. Moses' great anger manifested his detestation of Pharaoh's incurable obstinacy, and represented the terrible displeasure of God against him.

Ver. 10. [Out of his land. The refusal of liberty to emigrate is one of those infringements of natural rights that will be clearly comprehended by the inhabitants of free states; and when it is recollected that Moses was instructed merely to ask time and liberty for the worship of God—that is, liberty of conscience—the picture of Egyptian bondage is complete. Yet is not the history of Pharaoh's oppression an accurate emblem of that more cruel tyranny which sin exercises over unconverted men? 'Whosoever committeth sin is the servant (bond-slave) of sin.' Lord, let the Son make us free, then we shall be free indeed! C.]

REFLECTIONS.—How extensive is the justice of God! When life is over the consequences of our saying, Get thee out, and all the people that follow<sup>m</sup> thee; and after that I will go out. And he went out from Pharaoh in <sup>a</sup>a great anger.

9 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, <sup>a</sup>Pharaoh shall not hearken unto you; that my wonders may be multiplied in the land of Egypt.

10 And Moses and Aaron did all these wonders before Pharaoh: and the LORD <sup>a</sup>hardened Pharaoh's heart,<sup>7</sup> so that he would not let the children of Israel go out of his land.

CHAPTER XII.

1 The beginning of the year is changed. 3 The passover is instituted. 11 The rite of the passover. 15 The days of unleavened bread. 29 The first-born are slain. 31 The Israelites are driven out of the land. 37 They come to Succoth. 43 The ordinance of the passover.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and Aaron in the land of Egypt, saying,

2 This <sup>a</sup>month shall be unto you the beginning of months: it shall be the first month of the year to you.<sup>8</sup>

3 ¶ Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying, In the tenth day of this month they shall <sup>b</sup>take to them every man <sup>a</sup>a lamb, according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for an house.<sup>9</sup>

4 And if the household be <sup>a</sup>too little for the lamb, let him and his neighbour next unto his house take it, according to the number of the souls; every man according to his eating shall make your count for the lamb.

5 Your lamb shall be <sup>a</sup>without blemish, a male<sup>f</sup> of<sup>a</sup> the first year; ye shall take it out from the sheep, or from the goats.

6 And ye shall <sup>b</sup>keep it up until the fourteenth day of the same month: and the <sup>a</sup>whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it <sup>a</sup>in the evening.

7 And they shall <sup>b</sup>take of the blood, and strike it on the two side-posts, and on the upper door-post, of the houses wherein they shall eat it.

8 And they shall <sup>a</sup>eat the flesh in that night roast<sup>n</sup> with fire, and <sup>a</sup>unleavened bread; and with bitter herbs they shall eat it.

10 And ye shall let <sup>a</sup>nothing of it remain

CHAP. XII.

<sup>b</sup> The time of their deliverance from Egypt became to the Israelites the commencement of a new era in a double sense:—1. The month Nisan was constituted the first month of their sacred year, by which all religious observances were regulated. 2. The year of the exodus was made the first of an epoch from which afterwards counted, as may be seen in Ex. 16. 1. Nu. 1. 13. 38. 1. Ki. 6. 1. —P.

<sup>e</sup> The Hebrew word rendered "congregation" signifies "an assembly of men organized and regularly constituted." The command was given to the legitimate ruling body. The "house of father's," or rather "father's house," was, as has been stated, ch. 6. 14, not what we would understand by a family, but a subdivision of a tribe or clan—an ancestral house, in fact, in the modern acceptance. —P.

21 ¶ Then Moses called for all the 'elders of Israel, and said unto them, Draw out, and take you a lamb, according to your families, and kill the passover.

22 And ye shall take a bunch of hyssop,<sup>2</sup> and dip it in the blood that is in the bason, and strike the lintel and the two side-posts with the blood that is in the bason; and none of you shall go out at the door of his house until the morning.

24 And ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to thee and to thy sons for ever.

25 And it shall come to pass, when ye be come to the land which the LORD will give you, according as he hath promised, that ye shall keep this service.

26 And<sup>m</sup> it shall come to pass, when your children shall say unto you, What mean ye by this service?

27 That ye shall say, It is the sacrifice of the LORD's passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the Egyptians, and delivered our houses. And the people bowed the head, and worshipped.

28 And the children of Israel went away, and did as the LORD had commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

29 ¶ And<sup>2</sup> it came to pass, that at midnight the LORD smote all the first-born in the land of Egypt, from the first-born of Pharaoh that sat on his throne, unto the first-born of the captive that was in the dungeon; and all the first-born of cattle.

30 And Pharaoh rose up in the night, he, and all his servants, and all the Egyptians; and there was a great cry in Egypt: for there was not a house where there was not one dead.<sup>3</sup> u Only those who have had opportunities of witnessing the wild exhibitions of intense grief in the East, consequent on sudden bereavement, can fully realize the statement 'there was a great cry in Egypt.' The moment a death occurs in a household the female members, and all females who may be present, sprinkle themselves with water, and then throw dust or ashes over their persons; immediately after which they raise in concert a shrill cry or shriek which is heard over the whole neighbourhood. This is often continued for an hour or more—shriek after shriek filling the air. Imagine these shrieks raised in every city, village, and hamlet in the country, and then some conception may be formed of that great cry.—P.

ak The apparent contradiction between this verse and Ge.15. 13, where the period of predicted affliction in a strange land is said to be 400 years, will vanish by the following comparison:—From Abram's entrance into Canaan to the birth of Isaac, 25 years; Isaac at the birth of Jacob was 60, Jacob at going down to Egypt was 130, making 215 years;—then Jacob's children remained in Egypt 215 years more, thus making up the statement given, viz. 430 years. Again, Abram immediately after entering Canaan, resided at Shechem only for a very short period, whence he removed to Bethel, and thence journeyed, going on still towards the south, till, probably in the very first year of his sojourn, famine compelled him to go down into Egypt, to sojourn there. Now, as Abram would naturally be called an Israelite, he would, in this sense, be also one of the children of Israel, whose sojourning in Egypt, commencing with his going down, and closing with their bringing up, gives us the complete period of 430 years. The prediction in Ge.15.13 is 400 years, i.e. a period not less than that.—C.

31 ¶ And he called for Moses and Aaron by night, and said, 'Rise up, and get you forth from among my people, both ye and the children of Israel; and go serve the LORD, as ye have said.

32 Also take your flocks and your herds, as ye have said, and be gone, and bless me also.

33 And the Egyptians were urgent upon the people, that they might send them out of the land in haste; for they said, We be all dead men.<sup>4</sup>

34 And the people took their dough before it was leavened, their kneading-troughs<sup>5</sup> being bound up in their clothes upon their shoulders.

35 And the children of Israel did according to the word of Moses; and they borrowed<sup>6</sup> of the Egyptians jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment.

36 And the LORD gave the people favour in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they lent unto them such things as they required: and they spoiled the Egyptians.

37 ¶ And the children of Israel journeyed from Rameses to Succoth, about six hundred thousand on foot that were men, besides children.

38 And a mixed multitude went up also with them; and flocks, and herds, even very much cattle.

39 And they baked unleavened cakes of the dough which they brought forth out of Egypt, for it was not leavened; because they were thrust out of Egypt, and could not tarry, neither had they prepared for themselves any victual.

40 ¶ Now the sojourning of the children of Israel, who dwelt in Egypt, was four hundred and thirty years.<sup>8</sup>

41 And it came to pass, at the end of the four hundred and thirty years, even the self-same day it came to pass, that all the hosts of the LORD went out from the land of Egypt.

42 It is a night to be much observed unto the LORD for bringing them out from the land of Egypt; this is that night of the LORD to be one of the most glorious titles of Christ, as it is written, 1 Co. 5. 7, 'Christ our PASSOVER is sacrificed for us,' and then we will be prepared to see, in this history, an accurate type of many things concerning him. A few of the most remarkable we shall notice. (1) Egypt, ver. 1, the land of bondage, is the emblem of that slavery and oppression of sin in which Christ finds every man whom he delivers. (2) The new commencement of the sacred year sets forth (ver. 2) that 'newness of life' to which the believer is called, and in which he walks. (3) The Lamb without blemish (ver. 3, 5) furnishes another of Christ's titles, Jn. 1. 29; 1 Pe. 1. 10; Re. 5. 6-8, 12, 13, &c. The Lamb, as the first sacrifice, Ge. 4. 4, aptly sets forth him who, in the purpose of God, and in types and prophecies, is the 'Lamb slain from the foundation of the world,' Re. 13. 8. (4) The blood (ver. 7, 23), sprinkled on the posts of the lintel, but not on the threshold of the door, portrays that blood which is not to be 'trodden under foot,' He. 10. 29. (5) The unleavened bread, ver. 8 (bread uncombined with any yeast or barm), is the emblem of that 'sincerity and truth' with which Christ must be served, 1 Co. 5. 8. (6) Bitter herbs, ver. 8 (as medicinal beyond what are sweet), set forth the renewing and healing power of Christ, while they remind us of that bitterness of repentant recollection with which the believer contemplates his past sin. Thus 'Peter went out and wept bitterly,' Mat. 26. 75. (7) The loins girded, ver. 11, that is, the tucking up of every loose and flowing robe under the girdle, removing its obstruction to movement, sets forth the necessity of 'laying aside,' in the Christian life, the 'sin that doth most easily beset (or entangle) us,' He. 12. 1. (8) The shoes on the feet, contrary to the custom in the East, where the feet at table were bare (see Lu. 7. 38; Jn. 13. 5), indicate the necessity of every spiritual defence against the asperities of the way in which the believer must walk. (9) The staff in the hand—a living hand grasping, and a living man borrowing, support from a dead material, aptly sets forth the aid which a living faith receives from lifeless ordinances; whilst the haste of eating forcibly reminds us, that in all concerns of the soul, we must 'haste and delay not to keep God's commandments,' Ps. 119. 60. C.]

Ver. 27. As offered to God, and attended with the shedding and sprinkling of blood, the passover was a sacrifice; but as received and eaten by men, it was also a sacrament.—The Israelites bowed their heads in token of their thankful acknowledgment of God's favours, and cheerful submission to his laws and ordinances.

Ver. 38. [It is not said that the whole people were first assembled, with their children, flocks, herds, and goods, at Rameses; and that they set out from thence in a regular and dense column. The whole current of the narrative is opposed to any such theory. There was a large council or assembly of representative men with Moses at the capital; but the vast body of the people were in their houses throughout Goshen, or in their tents with their cattle on the adjoining desert; and there they ate the passover, and from thence they set out directly. P.]

Ver. 40. These four hundred and thirty years are to be reckoned from the call of Abraham to leave his native country, Ge. 11. 31; 12. 1-5; during the first half of which he and his promised seed sojourned in Canaan, and the other half they dwelt in the land of Egypt, Ge. 15. 13; xlvii.—[I prefer to take the statement in its plain and literal sense, that the Israelites observed of all the children of Israel in their generations.

43 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses and Aaron, This is the ordinance of the passover; There shall no stranger eat thereof:

45 A <sup>a</sup>foreigner and an hired servant shall not eat thereof.

46 In <sup>a</sup>one house shall it be eaten: thou shalt not carry forth ought of the flesh abroad out of the house; <sup>a</sup>neither shall ye break a bone thereof.

47 All<sup>a</sup> the congregation of Israel shall keep it.

48 And when <sup>a</sup>a stranger shall sojourn with thee, and will keep the passover to the LORD, let all his <sup>a</sup>males be circumcised, and then<sup>a</sup> let him come near and keep it; and he shall be as one that is born in the land: for no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof.

49 One <sup>a</sup>law shall be to him that is home-born, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among you.<sup>1</sup>

50 Thus did all the children of Israel; <sup>a</sup>as the LORD commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

51 And it came to pass <sup>a</sup>the self-same day, that the LORD did bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt by their <sup>a</sup>armies.

4 This<sup>a</sup> day came ye out, in the month Abib.

5 And it shall be, when the LORD <sup>a</sup>shall bring thee into the land of the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which he sware unto thy fathers to give thee, a land flowing with milk and honey, that <sup>a</sup>thou shalt keep this service in this month.

6 Seven<sup>a</sup> days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, and in the seventh day shall be a feast to the LORD.

7 Unleavened bread shall be eaten seven days: and there shall no leavened bread be seen with thee; neither shall there be leaven seen with thee in all thy quarters.

8 And <sup>a</sup>thou shalt show thy son<sup>3</sup> in that day, saying, This is done because of that which the LORD did unto me when I came forth out of Egypt.

actually remained in Egypt 430 years. The difficulties that beset this view, especially in regard to the recorded genealogical table of the tribe of Levi, may be overcome by supposing that all the individuals are not mentioned, but only such as were men of note. Several may thus have been omitted between Kohath and Amram. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Come near, my soul, and behold what the Lord hath wrought for Israel! He had multiplied them amidst cruel bondage and murder; he had protected them amidst ruinous plagues: and now, after a solemn feast, he brings them forth with wealth, with honour, in health, in peace, in order, and in due time! Behold what things he who sitteth on the throne makes new! A new year; new festivals; new liberties; a new nation to himself! Behold how their enemies push them into liberty; how they enrich them; and what a mixed multitude take part with them in their journey! Behold the care with which God distinguishes his people from the rest of the world! But chiefly behold God's great work of the redemption of mankind, through the blood of his Son! O the strong hand! the stretched-out arm! the grace! the mercy! the compassion! the wisdom! the justice! the exact fidelity to his promise, which appears in this! How are violated commandments, enraged devils, and mighty lusts made to let the ransomed of the Lord depart into liberty! With what spiritual wealth, what spoils of principalities and powers, nay, unsearchable riches, and righteousness, they come forth! In what high honour, spiritual soundness, peace, and order, they are brought from heathenism or Popery; nay, from their natural state of bondage and death in trespasses and sins; and all in the precise time of love, the day of espousals, the hour of grace, appointed of the Father! And how marvellously JEHOVAH here makes all things new. A new thing is created on the earth—a virgin brings forth a child whose name is IMMANUEL, God with us! A new testament is ratified in his blood! a new covenant is confirmed with many! a new gospel period, a year of God's redeemed, is introduced! new festivals on the flesh and blood of his Son! new liberties! freedom indeed, for those who are made heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ! a new church of Jews and Gentiles, purified by his oblation, a peculiar people to himself zealous of good works!—But what a mixed multitude of empty professors attend and plague the church in every reformation on earth! What a multitude of remaining lusts and infirmities attend the choicest saints till they get to the Canaan above! In this passover-feast, let me behold how Jesus, the all-excellent, the mighty, the unblemished Son of God, who was set up from everlasting, and promised and typified four thousand years, in the fulness of time assumes our nature, partakes of flesh and blood, obeys the law, and suffers the most exact and tremendous justice of God, without being crushed, broken, or ruined;—and all this that he might be our all-sufficient and everlasting covert from the wrath of God;—might be the means of destruction to sin, Satan, and death, for us;—and might, with unfeigned faith, sincere love, and bitter grief for sin, be fed upon by us, in holy fellowship, as the sweet, the heart-cheering, supporting, and strengthening food of our soul, by which we are enabled to go up from this evil world towards our everlasting inheritance in the Canaan above! And, blessed be the Lord, we, strangers and foreigners, sinners of the Gentiles, are admitted to feast on him, with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of God, while the Jewish children of the kingdom reject him! In their feast of unleavened bread may I not discern Jesus' state of debasement on earth? his week fulfilled in holiness, in sorrows, and in sufferings; on the first day of which he assumed his holy manhood, was gathered with sinners, but without sin; and on the last of which he made his life a ransom for all? May I not discern the pure but afflicted state of the gospel-church in her apostolical and millennial periods, noted for holy convocations of men to the Lord? May I not discern the festival-week of the Christian life, spent in purity and pressures, and noted for its first day of conversion to Christ, and its last of departure, to be with him for evermore? Let me in it feed upon him as the incorrupted nourishment of my soul, carefully avoiding and detesting the leaven of malice, hypocrisy, error, or corrupt practices! Let me in it improve Jesus, as the blessed first-fruit unto God which sanctifieth all my enjoyments, the cause and token of my deliverance into the glorious liberty of the gospel!

TOMB OF JOSEPH—NEAR WHERE CHRIST TALKED WITH THE WOMAN OF SAMARIA. [Exodus xiii:19.]—"And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him; for he had straitly sworn the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you; and ye shall carry up my bones away hence with you." So we have pointed out to us to-day the tomb of Joseph about a mile and a half south of Shechem, on the parcel of ground purchased by Jacob. It stands at the eastern entrance to the valley between Mount Gerizin and Mount Ebal. Jews, Samaritans, Christians and Mohammedans agree on the identity of this sacred place. The tomb is about six feet long, four feet high, covered with ordinary plaster, as are the Moslem graves of the country. It is about a mile from Jacob's well. It is well to remember that the Mohammedans respect Old Testament characters as do the Christians.

13 And<sup>e</sup> every firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a lamb;<sup>3</sup> and if thou wilt not redeem it, then thou shalt break his neck: and all<sup>f</sup> the first-born of man among thy children shalt thou redeem.

15 And it came to pass, when Pharaoh would hardly<sup>i</sup> let us go, that the LORD slew all the first-born in the land of Egypt, both the first-born of man and the first-born of beast: therefore I sacrifice to the LORD all that openeth the matrix, being males; but all the first-born of my children I redeem.

16 And it shall be for a<sup>j</sup> token upon thine hand, and for frontlets between thine eyes: for by strength of hand the LORD brought us forth out of Egypt.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God led them not through the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near; for God said, Lest peradventure the people repent<sup>k</sup> when they see war, and they<sup>l</sup> return to Egypt.

18 But God<sup>m</sup> led the people about, through the way of the wilderness of the Red sea. And the children of Israel went up<sup>n</sup> harnessed<sup>5</sup> out of the land of Egypt.

q The word may be rendered harnessed, or arrayed, or by fives. We adopt the last translation. Against it it has been alleged that the Hebrews formed into a column of five in breadth, would have required a line of march of 60 miles. But why should they march in one single column? Why not rather in twelve columns, requiring a line of barely five miles? Our reason for preferring the translation by fives to harnessed is simply this: Five is the ordinary average of a family; and though some are fewer, some more, yet the arrangement into columns of five in breadth would finally keep families of all sizes together. The importance of this arrangement to the oversight, protection, and morals of children must at once be apparent.—C.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 God instructeth the Israelites in their journey. 5 Pharaoh pursueth after them. 10 The Israelites murmur. 13 Moses comforteth them. 15 God instructeth Moses. 19 The cloud removeth behind the camp. 21 The Israelites pass through the Red Sea, 23 which drowneth the Egyptians.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, A 2 Speak unto the children of Israel, that they<sup>q</sup> turn and encamp before<sup>r</sup> Pi-hahiroth, between Migdol and the sea, over against Baalzephon: before it shall ye encamp by the sea.<sup>7</sup>

3 For Pharaoh will<sup>s</sup> say of the children of Israel, They are entangled in the land, the wilderness hath shut them in.

4 And I<sup>t</sup> will harden Pharaoh's heart,<sup>8</sup> that he shall follow after them; and I will be<sup>u</sup> honoured upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host; that the Egyptians may know that I am the LORD. And they did so.

5 ¶ And it was told the king of Egypt that the people fled: and<sup>v</sup> the heart of Pharaoh and of his servants was turned against the people, and they said, Why have we done this, that we have let Israel go from serving us?

6 And he made ready his chariot, and took his people with him.

7 And he took six hundred chosen chariots, and all the chariots of Egypt, and captains over every one of them.

8 And<sup>w</sup> the LORD hardened<sup>9</sup> the heart of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and he pursued after the children of Israel: and the children of Israel went out<sup>x</sup> with an high hand.

9 But the Egyptians<sup>y</sup> pursued after them, (all the horses and chariots of Pharaoh, and tion of the Hebrews' first-born, when he destroyed those of the Egyptians, gave him a peculiar right to them.

Ver. 9, 16. Their exact observation of these feasts, and the dedication of their firstlings, together with the repeated explication of the meaning thereof to their children, would make their deliverance from Egypt as fresh and evident to them and their seed as a thing hung or written in their foreheads.

Ver. 13. Unclean firstlings were either to be redeemed, or else killed, that they might not be put to any other use than for the Lord.—[From Nu. 18. 15 we learn that 'the firstlings of unclean beasts' were to be redeemed; but in this passage we find an alternative, viz. breaking the neck in the case of the ass. By referring to the fourth commandment we find that the ox and the ass are alone enumerated as the representatives of the clean and unclean beasts; and hence we may infer, that as the firstling of the ass might either be redeemed with a lamb or destroyed, so a like rule of redemption or destruction might be applied to the firstlings of all other unclean animals.—Note, (1) Infidels have cruelly against this law, as an alleged instance of cruelty. But will these infidels refuse to put an animal to death to satisfy the demand of their natural appetite? They will not refuse. How then dare they to accuse God, when he orders an animal to die, to teach avarice to sacrifice its property to him that bestows it all? (2) This law of redemption or destruction is expressively symbolic of the state of the unclean sinner: he must be redeemed by the 'blood of the Lamb,' or he must be destroyed with 'everlasting destruction.' C.]

Ver. 17. The Philistines, who had originated from Lower Egypt, Ge. 10. 13, 14; and dwelt in the south-west corner of Canaan, were a numerous, valiant, and fierce nation, whom the Hebrews, unarmed, and quite dispirited by their long bondage, durst not have encountered.—[The way of the land of the Philistines was the route direct along the coast of the Mediterranean from El-Arish to Gaza. There the Israelites would have been exposed during the second or third day's march to an attack from the whole forces of the Philistines, then the most powerful nation of Canaan. P.]

Ver. 18. [The Hebrew word hamushim, here translated 'harnessed,' occurs only four times in the Bible, and its real meaning is uncertain. It would seem however that in this place it signifies 'marshalled,' or 'ranged in order.' Reference is of course made to the leading men assembled at Rameses, and who went out under Moses. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Never forget, O my soul, the great things which God has done for his church, or for thyself, in his common or special providence! Let me carefully observe every mean of keeping them fresh on my mind; and let me teach them diligently unto my children, that they may hear and fear the Lord for their good. What the Lord marvellously brings to me, or preserves for me, let me cheerfully surrender to his service, at his call. The life he rescues from imminent danger is doubly obliged to be devoted to his service; and they who truly love God will readily serve him with the best they have. But if troubles and difficulties attend my path, conscious of my weakness and folly, let me trust in him who proportions his people's trials to their strength, and look up to him for direction in all my ways. In this pillar of cloud and fire I discern God's special care and protection of his people. Even while clouds and darkness are round about him, justice and judgment are the habitation of his throne, and mercy and truth go before his face. Do I not behold Jesus likewise given to be an ever-attending light and leader, as well as protector and glory, to his people in this wilderness world? Let me always follow his direction and example; so shall I, in due time, arrive safe at the promised Canaan which is above. And, though the way in which he leads me be very contrary to the will and wisdom of the flesh, let me rest assured that it is a right one to the fulfilment of all his glorious promises of grace and glory.

CHAPTER XIV. [Ver. 15. ¶ Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward.] The miserable his horsemen, and his army,) and overtook them encamping<sup>1</sup> by the sea, beside Pi-hahiroth, before Baal-zephon.

10 ¶ And when Pharaoh drew nigh, the children of Israel lifted up their eyes, and, behold, the Egyptians marched after them; and they were <sup>more</sup>sore afraid: and the children of Israel cried out unto the LORD.

11 And <sup>they</sup>said unto Moses, Because there were no graves<sup>2</sup> in Egypt, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness? wherefore hast thou dealt thus with us, to carry us forth out of Egypt?<sup>3</sup>

12 Is not this the word that we did tell thee in Egypt, saying, Let us alone, that we may serve the Egyptians? for it had been better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness.

13 ¶ And Moses said unto the people, <sup>Ye</sup>Fear ye not; stand still, and see the <sup>salvation</sup>of the LORD, which he will show to you to-day: for the Egyptians whom ye have seen to-day, ye shall see them again no more for ever.

14 The LORD shall <sup>fight</sup>for you, and ye shall hold your peace.

15 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, Wherefore <sup>criest</sup>thou unto me? speak unto the children of Israel,<sup>1</sup> that they go forward:

16 But <sup>lift</sup>thou up thy rod, and stretch out thine hand over the sea, and divide it; and the children of Israel shall go on dry ground through the midst of the sea.

17 And I, behold, I will harden<sup>2</sup> the hearts of the Egyptians, and they shall follow them: and I will get me honour upon Pharaoh, and upon all his host, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

18 And the Egyptians shall <sup>know</sup>that I am the LORD, when I have gotten me honour upon Pharaoh, upon his chariots, and upon his horsemen.

19 ¶ And the <sup>angel</sup>of God, which went before the camp of Israel, removed, and went behind them; and the pillar of the cloud went from before their face, and stood behind them:

20 And it came between the camp of the Egyptians and the camp of Israel; and it was a <sup>cloud</sup>and darkness to them, but it gave light

8 The Lord manifested his indignation against the Egyptians in terrible storms of thunder and lightning, which put them into great disorder and terror.

9 As a man is said to do what his servants do by his commands, so what his works effect by his disposal, God took off the chariot wheels of the Egyptians, by means of the deep sand or rugged bottom of the sea. The Egyptian chariot, as commonly represented in ancient sculptures and paintings, is a small box, in which the superior stands, mounted upon two low wheels, and fearfully ornamented with human heads, a terrible emblem of the fate that awaited the Israelite that would return to his bondage. —Note. How truly does the proverb speak man's extremity is God's opportunity! by night to these: so that the one came not near the other all the night.

21 ¶ And Moses stretched out his hand over the sea; and the LORD caused the sea to <sup>go back</sup>by a strong east wind all that night, and made the sea dry land, and the waters were divided.

22 And <sup>the</sup>children of Israel went into the midst of the sea upon the dry ground: and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left.<sup>3</sup>

23 ¶ And the Egyptians <sup>pursued</sup>, and went in after them to the midst of the sea, even all Pharaoh's horses, his chariots, and his horsemen.

24 And it came to pass, that in the <sup>morning</sup>-watch the LORD <sup>looked</sup>unto the host of the Egyptians through the pillar of fire and of the cloud, and troubled<sup>4</sup> the host of the Egyptians, 25 And<sup>5</sup> took off their chariot-wheels,<sup>6</sup> that they drave them heavily: so that the Egyptians said, Let us flee from the face of Israel; for the LORD <sup>fighteth</sup>for them against the Egyptians.

26 ¶ And the LORD said unto Moses, <sup>Stretch</sup>out thine hand over the sea, that the waters may <sup>come</sup>again upon the Egyptians, upon their chariots, and upon their horsemen.

27 And Moses stretched forth his hand over the sea, and the <sup>sea</sup>returned to his strength when the morning appeared; and the Egyptians fled against it: and the LORD <sup>overthrew</sup>the Egyptians in the midst of the sea.

28 And the waters <sup>returned</sup>, and covered the chariots, and the horsemen, and all the host of Pharaoh that came into the sea after them: there remained not so much as <sup>one</sup>of them.

31 And Israel saw that great work<sup>7</sup> which the LORD did upon the Egyptians: and the people <sup>feared</sup>the LORD, and believed the LORD, and his servant Moses.

depression of the Israelites will be best understood by recollecting that, though more numerous than the Egyptians, they had submitted to have their male children drowned. Had such a people been led directly into Palestine, a march of but a few days, the warlike inhabitants, unless prevented by a sweeping miracle, would immediately have attempted to extirpate or enslave them; and to avoid either, the Hebrews, in desponding cowardice, would have returned to Egypt. God mercifully leads them to a distance from their enemies, and, by that distance, prevents any sudden occasion to return. —Note. God seldom or never leads the young convert into immediate trial of his faith, hope, love, or patience. There is often also a wonderful estrangement between a new convert and his former acquaintances. He is led away from them, lest in weakness he should return to them. It is not until 'prepared to endure hardness,' the soldier of the cross is called to 'fight the good fight of faith.' C.]

REFLECTIONS.—God frequently masters up difficulties in the way of his people, that his glory may appear in subduing and helping over them. Often he turns the pride and malice of his enemies and their prosperity, to the advancement of his cause; while, with blind infatuation, they quickly repent of their best deeds, and rush forward, in their hatred of God and his people, till they find no place for repentance of their wickedness! What necessity there is to set out in the Lord's way with much strong faith, assured hope, and holy courage, as in it we may lay our account with many and great perplexities and troubles! Such as escape out of a sinful world may expect a hot pursuit from the devil and his servants: but he that brings us out with a high hand can bear us up with everlasting strength. In straits let me therefore never dare to chide my deliverer, or to think of returning to my bondage, but in patience possess my soul, hoping for his salvation. What he does I know not now, but I shall know hereafter. Sedateness in danger is the most likely mean to extricate myself out of it; and to encourage my heart in God is the way, not only to remove my fears, but to surmount my difficulties. However dangerous and dark the path may be, if I go forward God will take care of the event; and while the darkness of sin leads down to the darkness of eternal death, the light of grace will conduct me to eternal life and light in glory. What a present help is God in trouble! But how tremendous a foe! who can stand before him if once he be angry! Certain is their fall at last who are found fighting against God. If the Lord has delivered me from so great a death,

TOMBS OF THE CALIPHS—DESCENDANTS OF THE ANCIENT PHARAOHS. [Exodus, xiv:23.]—Here we have a view of the Tombs of the Caliphs, built in the time of the Mameluke princes. These tombs extend along the east side of the city of Cairo. Each formerly had an endowment and a staff of sheiks and attendants who lived near them. About the beginning of the present century the properties belonging to these tombs were confiscated, while the families who made their means of subsistence attending to them were left without employment. This picture helps us to see the tombs, as they look in modern times, of the Caliphs, who, in the respect that they were rulers in Egypt for a time, were the descendants of the ancient Pharaohs. These tombs are now falling into decay, and the attendants who once kept them continue to live among their ruins and beg travelers for backsheesh.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Moses' song. 20 Miriam and the women join in it. 22 The people want water. 23 The waters at Marah are bitter; a tree sweeteneth them. 27 They remove to Elim.

THEN sang Moses and the children of Israel this song<sup>6</sup> unto the LORD, and spake, saying, I will sing unto the LORD, for he hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

2 The LORD is my strength and song, and he is become my salvation: he is my God, and I will prepare him an habitation; my father's God, and I will exalt him.

3 The LORD is a man of war: the LORD is his name.

4 Pharaoh's chariots and his host hath he cast into the sea; his chosen captains also are drowned in the Red sea.

5 The depths have covered them: they sank into the bottom as a stone.

6 Thy right hand, O LORD, is become glorious in power: thy right hand, O LORD, hath dashed in pieces the enemy.

7 And in the greatness of thine excellency thou hast overthrown them that rose up against thee: thou sentest forth thy wrath, which consumed them as stubble.

8 And with the blast of thy nostrils the waters were gathered together, the floods stood upright as an heap, and the depths were congealed in the heart of the sea.

9 The enemy said, I will pursue, I will overtake, I will divide the spoil; my lust shall be satisfied upon them: I will draw my sword; my hand shall destroy them.

10 Thou didst blow with thy wind, the sea covered them: they sank as lead in the mighty waters.

11 Who is like unto thee, O LORD, among the gods? who is like thee, glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders?

12 Thou stretchedst out thy right hand, the earth swallowed them.

13 Thou in thy mercy hast led forth the people which thou hast redeemed; thou hast guided them in thy strength unto thy holy habitation.

j The evidence for the exodus and passage of the Red Sea is most complete. 1. The institution of the passover in commemoration of the exodus can be assigned to no other period. 2. The divine inspiration of Moses proved by his miracles, and the abundant fulfilment of the prophecies. 3. The continued murmuring and rebellion of the people, had Moses exaggerated or falsified in this, the imposition must immediately have been detected. 4. Though the narrative of Moses rests its credibility on his own character and actions, yet human evidence is abundantly, though unintentionally, furnished. Justin, a heathen historian, distinctly notices the exodus; and Diodorus Siculus, another heathen, relates a very old tradition of the miraculous dividing of the Red Sea, leaving its bottom for some time dry, and then returning to its usual bed.—C.

14 The people shall hear, and be afraid: sorrow shall take hold on the inhabitants of Palestina.

15 Then the dukes of Edom shall be amazed; the mighty men of Moab, trembling shall take hold upon them: all the inhabitants of Canaan shall melt away.

16 Fear and dread shall fall upon them: by the greatness of thine arm they shall be as still as a stone, till thy people pass over, O LORD, till the people pass over which thou hast purchased.

17 Thou shalt bring them in, and plant them in the mountain of thine inheritance, in the place, O LORD, which thou hast made for thee to dwell in, in the sanctuary, O LORD, which thy hands have established.

18 The LORD shall reign for ever and ever.

19 For the horse of Pharaoh went in with his chariots and with his horsemen into the sea, and the LORD brought again the waters of the sea upon them; but the children of Israel went on dry land in the midst of the sea.

20 ¶ And Miriam the prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took a timbrel in her hand; and all the women went out after her with timbrels and with dances.

21 And Miriam answered them, Sing ye to the LORD, for he hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

22 ¶ So Moses brought Israel from the Red sea; and they went out into the wilderness of Shur; and they went three days in the wilderness, and found no water.

23 ¶ And when they came to Marah, they could not drink of the waters of Marah, for they were bitter; therefore the name of it was called Marah.<sup>1</sup>

24 And the people murmured against Moses, saying, What shall we drink?

CHAPTER XV. Ver. 1. Several of the verbs in this song, relating to their past deliverance, are of the future tense in the original Hebrew, to intimate that it was but an earnest of many similar ones to the Jewish nation, and especially to the gospel-church and her true members, Jos. vi. xxi.; Ju. 3. 10, 30; 4. 16; vii. viii.; 11. 33; 1. Ver. 2. God is, and gives to his people, strength, and matter of joy and praise.—Moses foresaw that God would have a peculiar dwelling among the Jews in his tabernacle or temple.

Ver. 3. God is a man of war, as he powerfully protects his people, and executes judgment upon their enemies.

Ver. 7. By manifold, glorious, and marvellous works, God manifested his own infinite perfections.—He consumed the Egyptians as stubble, easily, suddenly, utterly.

Ver. 8. The strong wind which God raised made the waters to stand as still, on either side of the passage, as if they had been mountains of ice.

Ver. 11. Holiness is, as it were, the beauty, comeliness, and glory of the Godhead, and every particular excellency of it; and the very perfections and works for which God is to be praised are awful, and to be revered.

Ver. 13, 17. Canaan was a mountainous country, and is called God's inheritance, sanctuary, and holy habitation; because, for one thousand five hundred years of the typical dispensation God chose it for the special residence of his worship and service.

Ver. 14-16. All the nations about heard of God's delivering his people, and destroying the Egyptians; and then, but especially afterwards, when the Israelites approached their territories, they were filled with terror and dread.

Ver. 20, 21. Perhaps Miriam is here called the sister of Aaron, rather than of Moses, because she lived mostly with Aaron. She and her companions seem to have repeated the whole song after Moses and his brethren.

Ver. 24. To murmur against God is to conceive unworthy and hard thoughts of his nature, word, or works; or to utter them with our tongue.

Ver. 25. God there proved their faith and obedience, and published his statutes, promising them future favours on condition of their obedience.—[The waters were made sweet. The bitter well of Hawarah is said to answer geographically to the position of Marah. And were we certain of their identity of themselves, and were we acquainted with the composition of the water, we might be enabled to judge whether the infusion of any wood might chemically effect a precipitation of the bitter ingredients. 2 A whole month was spent between Marah and Sin, though only eight stations are named, and only ten days' actual march recorded. The encampment by the sea, mentioned in Nu. 33. 11, is omitted here. The wilderness of Sin is a dreary desert plain, covered with gravel and flint, lying along the eastern shore of the Red Sea. Its desolate aspect naturally had a depressing influence on the minds of the Israelites; and besides, the stock of provisions which they had brought with them from Egypt was now in all probability exhausted. The period of this event was the spring, at which time these birds migrate from Asia to Europe; yet was not the miracle the less, for the miracle lay not in the event itself, which might have been what is called accidental, but in the prophecy announcing it, which none but one inspired of God could possibly have foreseen.—C.

waters were purely a chemical result, the miracle was not lessened; for God showed Moses the tree in answer to earnest prayer. From comparing, however, the passage with 2 Ki. 2. 20, where a similar permanent 'healing of the waters' was miraculously effected by the infusion of a little salt, we must rather consider the 'sweetening' at Marah to be wholly miraculous, and the infusion of the wood a mere sign that the miracle was wrought in compliance with divine direction.—Note, Israel was proved by thirst and bitter water—they murmured against Moses, but cried not, as Moses did, to God. In some such way God still proves his people; but let them not murmur against the world, but appeal to him who is able to help and relieve. The bitterest water of affliction is made sweet to him who commingles with it the knowledge of Christ, 'the power of his resurrection,' and the 'fellowship of his sufferings.' C.]
